More than that, the power to direct this system of credits is put into the hands of a public board of disinterested officers of the government itself who can make no money out of anything they do in connection with it. No group of bankers anywhere can get control; no part of the country can concentrate the advantages and conveniences of the system upon itself for its own selfish advantage. The board can oblige the banks of one region to go to the assistance of the banks of another. The whole resources of the country are mobilized, to be employed where they are most needed. I think we are justified in speaking of this as a democracy credit. Credit is at the disposal of every man who can show energy and assets. Each region of the country is set to study its needs and opportunities and the whole country stands by to assist. It is self-government as well as democracy.—President Wilson.

DEMOCRATS TO KEEP POWER

BEGINS LIQUOR CURE CAMPAIGN

Warden Thomas Hopes to Take Away Prisoners' Desire for Strong Drink.

EXPERIMENTING ON TWO PEN INMATES

Most of the Persons Who Enter the Big State Prison, It Is Declared, Ascribe Their Downfall to Alcoholic Beverages.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

WARDEN P. E. THOMAS of the Ohio penitentiary is conducting experiments through which he hopes to perfect a plan by which prisoners can be permanently cured of the drink habit. As most of the persons who enter the big prison ascribe their downfall to liquor, the warden will have accomplished worth while if he succeeds in his undertaking. A week ago he started on his liquor cure plan. Two prisoners, former public officials, men of much more than ordinary ability and whose crimes came as a result of their fondness for liquor, were chosen for tests. They were sent to the penitentiary hospital and started in on a course of treatment that will last two weeks. At the end of that period they will be offered a drink. If they take it willingly, the warden will conclude that his experiments have failed. If, on the other hand, they reject it with loathing, he will consider that the first series of experiments are successful and he will try the treatment on other prisoners. Warden Thomas' experiments have been given approval of the state board of administration, which controls the penitentiary. At least two-thirds of the prisoners have been excessive drinkers, and most of these find themselves behind the grim walls of the institutions for misdeeds committed while under the influence of liquor. The warden's liquor cure program follows close on his campaign to eradicate the use of habit forming drugs within the prison. "Piaz" Wilson, alias Winslow, a safe blower sent up from Licking county, who is regarded as one of the brightest prisoners in the institution, told the officials that when he was confined in the pen ...

Appeals for Financial Help.

The Ohio Civil Service Employes' association, which is fighting the new Barnes-Moore civil service law, under which state and local employes who secured their positions through noncompetitive examinations are being thrown out, has appealed to these employes for financial help. Each person is asked to send $5 to Joseph Lawler, Jr., of 429 E. Oakland-av., Columbus, the treasurer of the association. The "touch" letters are signed by John A. Kidwell of Columbus, who is chairman of the executive committee of the association. "You are no doubt aware that every public employe that has not been in the service seven years or who did not take a competitive examination will be dismissed if the law which the last general assembly attempted to pass is not fought to the bitter end," says the appeal. The statement is made that the association is not partisan and that it will go on regardless of whether the supreme court knocks out the new law. The employes are asked to join the organization that will in the future be strong enough to prevent anything but improvement of civil service laws.

Plan Settlement With Government.

Negotiations are under way by which the Henry Pirrung estate of Columbus will pay the government $400,000 in settlement for the alleged fraud committed by the Capital City Dairy Co. in the manufacture of oleo on which the government was cheated out of its tax. Pirrung founded the company. Henry Kelly, a member of the company, recently settled with the government for its claim against him by paying it $400,000. Kelly and several other members of the company were tried on criminal charges growing out of the fraud exposes and found guilty. Their appeals to the higher courts are pending.

Familiar Character Is Dead.

The most striking and familiar character in Columbus was taken by death Thursday—W. S. Walters, known as the "Get Ready man." Walters was a member of the Seventh Day Adventist church and an unusually zealous one. A painter by trade, he practically gave up a good business many years ago to work for his church. Almost daily he walked the streets in the business portions of the city distributing Adventist literature, and on special occasions would take a position on some prominent corner and preach to the people—always seeking to impress them with his belief that the end of the world was close at hand and ...

OHIO TO HAVE BUMPER CROPS

STATE WILL HAVE GOOD CROPS THIS YEAR IN SPITE OF UNUSUALLY WET SUMMER.

THE FIGURES ARE REVISED

State Will Grow, in Round Numbers, 110,000,000 Bushels of Corn on 2,851,095—Good Oats Crop.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Columbus, O.—Ohio's going to have good crops this year in spite of the unusually wet summer. However, the yields won't be up to expectations. Six weeks ago the State Department of Agriculture was claiming bumper crops of wheat, corn, oats, potatoes and hay.

"But these rains have forced us to revise our calculations somewhat," said Rennick W. Dunlap, department secretary. "In several places there has been so much rain that farmers have never had a chance to thresh their wheat or oats. In places corn has also been rotted out or choked to death by weeds that the farmers couldn't cope with on account of the weather."

Ohio farmers sowed 1,369,049 acres in wheat this year and the department figures the average yield will be about 15 bushels to the acre, the same as it was last year, when 1,344,689 acres were in wheat. Despite the rains, there'll be more oats than last.

Ohio will grow, in round numbers, 110,000,000 bushels of corn on 2,851,095 acres this year, about the same as last year. The potato crop last year was less than two-thirds normal. This year it will be above normal.

Ohio Coal Operators Will Appeal to the Miners.

Columbus, O.—Decision was reached by the Hocking District Coal Operators' Association to carry the campaign of education for revision of the mining system direct to the miners themselves. The experiment is a slight departure from the ordinary practice.

THE SOUL'S ANCHOR

Faith Is Optimism, the Highest Form of Optimism, the Faith That Saves.

"Which hope we have as an anchor of the soul sure and steadfast which entereth into that within the veil."

It recently was my privilege to stand beside an old Greek anchor which had lately been unearthed. We never look upon a relic of this kind which has been buried for 20 centuries or more without the feeling of reverence and awe.

We think of the story that it might tell of that far-away age. We think of the hands that once grasped it, now long moldered into dust. We think of the names long since forgotten. We look back through the vista of the centuries which have intervened during which man have lived lives just like ours with the same sorrows, the same joys.

We wonder what story this relic has to tell. And it does have its story, for in spite of rust and corrosion I saw in large Greek uncials the words Zeus hypsistos, which we must translate, "God is the highest."

These words speak volumes. Think you not that the Greek sailor in his little craft, rude, primitive, a plaything of the waves, felt more secure because he knew that down there in the slime and ooze and mud of the ocean's bottom his anchor bore the name of God Supreme? Perhaps the apostle had seen such an anchor and this had led him to the beautiful figure of faith as an anchor of the soul.

What Is Faith?

What is faith? It is not something that can be analyzed in the crucible of scientific investigation. It is intuitive knowledge. I watch a vine as it reaches out its tendrils and mounts higher upon the trellis. I see a fledgling as it tests its wings and soars into the sky. I see a man bowed down with sorrow raise his head above the clouds. The vine might have argued, "I have not hands to feel, I have not eyes to see," but it turns toward the sunlight and it is not deceived. The little bird might say, "My wings are so tiny and the ether is so vast," but something told it to spread its pinions and to fly far above our earth, and it was not deceived. So man when he looks upward to the stars will never, never be deceived. That is faith.

Faith is not synonymous with dogmatic opinion. We sometimes speak of it as such when we say, "A man has not the right faith." When a word with such purity of meaning has been incrusted with other significations it is well for us often to substitute another term for the Greek pistis, and such a term might be "trust." There have been heresy trials about a man's "faith," but there has never been a heresy trial concerning one's trust in God.

In the British museum I saw the prayer book which Lady Jane Grey carried with her to the scaffold, and she had underlined these words on which her eye last rested: "In thee, O Lord, have I trusted; let me never be confounded." That is faith.

Faith is optimism, the highest form of optimism, which is confidence in the ultimate triumph of truth and righteousness.

Atheism in Its Worst Form.

Pessimism is atheism, and it is the worst form of atheism. A man said to me the other day: "I am growing old and I fear that life is losing its charm." What a sad commentary on his life! I thought of what was almost the last utterance of Senator Hoar: "Gentlemen, yesterday was better than the day before; today is better than yesterday; and tomorrow will be better than today." That is faith.

Near my old home in Massachusetts is a Faith monument, to the fathers who landed on that forbidding shore. It stands with face serenely tranquil pointing to the skies. I have seen it when the accumulated snows of winter have rested heavy on its head; I have seen it when the burning heat of summer beat down upon that barren hill. But in storm and sunshine, in winter's cold and summer's heat, it has stood as it stands at this hour, with finger pointing toward the stars.

Faith points us toward the stars, but more than this. It points us to some poor soul who does not see as plainly as we that the stars are shining—perhaps he does not know there are any stars above him—and he demands that we take him by the hand and point him to the stars.

This is Christ's faith. This is the faith that saves.—Rev. H. C. Holman.

Only Things Eternal.

Nothing is eternal but that which is done for God and others. That which is done for self dies. Perhaps it is not wrong, but it perishes. You say it is pleasure—well, enjoy it. But joyous recollection is no longer joy. That which ends in self is mortal. That alone which goes out of self into God lasts forever.—W. Robertson.

Amusements.

Just as little children have a right to play, so the boys and girls have a claim on the brightness of life. There is no reason why harmless fun and bright talk should be excluded from the social life of the church. The problem of amusements is difficult because we are tempted to turn our whole attention toward games and recreations and to forget that the church has a witness for the world. It takes wisdom to draw the line and a higher wisdom to infuse the spirit of reverence and service into entertainments. The church in its social life must make a place for the recreations of the young people precisely as it makes a place for the counsels of their elders. To every stage of experience must be presented its own appropriate opportunity. Only so shall we have a well-rounded church life and do the most we can for our community.—Congregationalist.

The great secret of happiness is to study to accommodate our own minds to things external rather than to accommodate things external to ourselves.—Dugald Stewart.

POLES AND TREES

It requires a few men a few minutes to set up a telephone pole. It requires a half century to grow a fine tree. But the half century's growth is slashed where the wires run or where the pole is to be set, and the telephone line plows on, contemptuous of the beauty it mars, and of the public which allows the damage to be done. All public highways should be flanked by shade trees. As long as telephone companies are allowed to devastate every road upon which they set their poles, tree planting along the public roads will be a waste of effort. If special legislation is needed to prevent the destruction of valuable public or private property, such legislation should be passed. A way can be found to put a stop to the butchery when the public awakens to realization of the dollars and cents damage as well as the injury from an aesthetic point of view, that is done by the axe and the saw and the pruning hooks of the corporations which supply service upon their own terms.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE ANSWER

The Van Wert Times very aptly says: "The success of a man's business is the answer to his methods. That is to say, where a man has built up a big business, and succeeded wonderfully, it answers all criticisms as to his way of running his affairs. So about the most disgusting thing in the world is to hear a lot of people who have themselves been failures sitting around talking about how this man or that should run his affairs.

And yet you can hear it every day in the week, right here in this good city. You can take any concern you want to, and ask somebody about it and the chances are he will at once begin pointing out how and wherein the concern could be run better than it is. The chances are, also, you will hear a lot of unkind things said about the person connected with the establishment.

But this state of affairs is not peculiar to business. You can find in every social gathering a lot of people who will tell you how England ought to conduct the war. You can hear criticisms of German's strategy, or of France's military preparations, or of how the Russians ought to deal with the enemies that are driving her to the wall. It seems to be a weakness of human nature to criticise, to find fault with the other fellow, to believe that everybody else in the world besides yourself is either a fool, a knave or a maniac."

FAMOUS DATES IN HISTORY.

Among Ohio's famous dates in history at least two merit special remembrance. One is the date the famous Republican state platform was promulgated wherein Gov. Cox's "trifling with civil service" was denounced. The other is that on which the Republicans righteous ire over the administration's supposed activity in curtailing the initiative and referendum was first given utterance, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

These dates are of interest now because they emphasize the difference between promise and performance. From a politician's standpoint, an unfortunately short period intervenes between the time when a man is candidate for governor and the time when, if elected, he is called upon to make good.

Whatever "trifling" the Cox administration may have done with the civil service was like a zephyr to a cyclone as compared with the trifling the present regime at Columbus is responsible for. The present governor is a spoilsman pure and simple, and is frank enough to boast of his prowess with the ax. And his efficiency in this direction will be measurably increased [illegible]

The Willis highway act is now a law, but it is not a law that will build roads, as was done before its passage. It is poorly constructed, in many respects meaningless, and the statement is made that it will stop all effective state road work for the next two years. The attorney general is now pondering over fifty questions presented under the law by those interested in the work. A constitutional question is to be raised which will under the law probably invalidate the state levy and Ohio goes back into the mire. Truly the state highway department is decentralized.

When the Tassel's Turnin' Yellow.

When the tassel's turnin' yellow
And the silk is on the ear,
When the gray doves haunt the hedges
And the mists are hovering near,
When the Bob White drums his pinions
And the Whippoorwill grow still—
Ah, we soon must lose Miss Summer
From her throne upon the hill!
When the turkey hens are homing
Round the old barn with their young,
When the mellow apples spatter
From the branches where they hung;
When the bees are growing weary
And the rabbit's got its size—
Ah, the dream is almost over
Of Miss Summer's soft blue skies!
When the watermelon's plunking
And the peaches start to fall,
When the wild grapes turn to purple
Where they cluster fence and wall,
When the asters shine in glory
And the mullein opes its pod
Ah, the year has told a story
That's as beautiful as God!

Fight Catalog Houses With Sheir Own Weapons. Newspaper Ads and Attractive Printed Matter A Great Help to the Small Merchants

The concern which persistently and consistently advertises brings to itself great reward in the form of increased business. Fences, rocks and trees are covered with print and paint. The shower of advertising in the shape of handbills is incessant. They are put into one's hand at every step at the church door and in hotels, in public vehicles, thrust under private doors and sent by millions through the mails.

Glittering Advertising Maze.

The only road to commercial success leads through a glittering maze of advertising.

Great boats, bearing on their sails huge advertisements, sail up and down all season before crowded watering places, and now and then a rain of advertisements comes from a wandering aeroplane.

When daylight fails the magic electric light throws advertisements on large screens in conspicuous places in both large and small cities.

Shout From Mountain Top.

Climb to the mountain top and shout for a solution of the retail mail order evil, and back over the hills will come the answer in the echoing cry "Advertise!"

The life, the fame, the success, the hope and future of commerce lie in that one magic word.

Advertising is unquestionably the weapon which will make the community worthless for the retail catalogue houses, but it is not absolutely necessary that printed matter be the whole thing.

Personal and individual advertising is most helpful. It is such advertising that gives retail mail order houses their trade.

And through advertising the local merchants can deprive them of much of the trade that comes from their community.

Fight the Prairie Fire.

The western farmer fights the prairie fire with a little fire of his own, which, kept always under control, he so uses that the bigger fire, finding no fuel there on which to feed, sweeps by and leaves him safe.

So, in your advertising, you have your saving fire with which to fight the consuming competition of retail mail order houses.

The printed matter, of course, must continue to be the main reliance for urging people to enter your store.

Show windows, however good, are sure to be seen only by a few of those who might need to trade with you, while personal invitations cannot be given quickly enough to a sufficient number to answer everyday purposes.

It is through printed matter that the retail mail order house offerings are constantly made, and, if for no other reason than to prove the determination at least to match their efforts for trade in your community, use the local press and printed matter enough to let no one whose trade should be yours forget that you are in a position to fill his wants.

The local merchant should dwell at length on the fact that he delivers after the goods have been seen and before the money has been paid for them, and when it comes to making good, should anything go wrong, he is right at hand, not a thousand miles away.

A reputation for originality is continually being sought by most merchants, and one can get it more easily by being natural in every move. Advertising that sounds like you is not only sure to bring the greatest results, but it is also the one kind of advertising your competitor cannot successfully imitate.

It is true that some self styled advertising experts have studied the dictionary, the grammar and the type specimen books until they are able to talk a jargon that makes advertising—by which we mean printed matter—seem very much of a mystery to the average man.

Operate Like Pickpockets.

The mail order house system experts in the advertising art are something like the pickpocket who, in an attempt to divert suspicion from himself, joins the throng and shouts "Stop thief!" as loudly as any one. Look through the mail order catalogues and you will find that nearly all of them will tell you that their houses are the cheapest places to buy; that they have the best facilities.

They will intimate that the other fellow is the one to avoid if you do not want to get "trimmed" and that it is the other fellow that handles the trash.

RUNNING THE PAPER

Everybody thinks he can run a newspaper better than the benighted souls who have been placed by Providence in that unenviable position. Maybe it's because the editor's faults are glaring ones—out in the open in black and white—or, possibly, it is just a queer quirk of human nature and the jobs so easy, anyway. Running the paper is a sort of a side line with lots of people. They offer advice in their spare moments with the same spirit as they play golf or pinochle. One would have the editor a militant suffragist, another demands that he rail against women voting. The prohibitionists can't see how any decent person can be for the regulated saloons and accuse him of selling out to the liquor interests if he takes that side, while the "wets" say he is being intimidated by the churches and ...

MR. HUNT CHARGES GROSSEST MISREPRESENTATIONS OF HOME RULE AMENDMENT TO MISLEAD THE VOTERS

Says Every Voter Is Entitled to the Truth, No Matter Which Side of Question He May Be On

DEPLORES ATTEMPT TO SADDLE ADDITIONAL BURDENS ON TAX-PAYERS.

Graham P. Hunt, of Cincinnati, comes out with a straight-from-the-shoulder statement to the effect that the grossest misrepresentations have been made to voters and tax-payers of Ohio, regarding the Home Rule Amendment.

"In their attempt," said he, "to saddle upon the tax payers of the state, an additional burden as a result of the utter destruction of vast taxable resources of revenue to the state, the grossest misrepresentations were officially made last year by paid agitators regarding the Home Rule Amendment.

"The voters and tax-payers of the state of Ohio are entitled to the truth on any question, no matter which side they may be on, and it is high time now, that the voters of Ohio be reminded of these gross untruths of last year and be on their guard against their repetition this year.

Misleading and contradictory statements not only do an injustice to the voters and tax payers, but to the state itself.

"Before the 1914 election, these same paid individuals," says Mr. Hunt, "had large posters pasted up all over the state reading as follows:

"Home Rule as demanded by Brewers' Initiated Amendment to the Constitution, means Rum Rule and Home Rule. It will repeal the County Option Law ... vember, 1914. This case was decided adversely to the petitioner in every court, including the Supreme Court of Ohio and the United States Supreme Court itself, the latter decision being in February, 1915. The petitioner made statements directly opposite to the predictions made in the poster, proclaimed from the platform and in other ways. The petition reads as follows and speaks for itself as a complete contradiction of their statement before the election:

"'Nor does said Home Rule Amendment, so called, by its adoption above, impair, repeal or nullify within said Logan county, or within said other forty-four counties, or either of them, any provision of said County Local Option Law, or any other Law under the provisions of which said counties or any subdivisions thereof have heretofore prohibited the sale, furnishing or giving away of intoxicating liquors as a beverage.'

'Now, mind you, these two official statements were from the same official sources and, as I have just said, contradictory to each other.

'Not one single consequence prophesied by these people has come to pass under the Home Rule Amendment. The local option laws, residence district, municipal and township, continue in undisturbed operation as evidenced by the elections held since the adoption of the Home Rule Amendment.

Then, again, there was another gross misrepresentation of facts.

"To bolster up their arguments to ... regulating and controlling of the liquor traffic in the State, and the results of the Home Rule Amendment have been satisfactory in every way.

"It places the matter in the hands of the local authorities and is closer to the public demands.

"Law observance is always best when local public sentiment is behind it.

"The enforcement of law by local authorities is always more thorough and effective.

"Again, the Home Rule Amendment is more democratic. It is just and equitable. Each community decides exactly what it wants and what it does not want.

"Other people who do not pay taxes in and do not have the right to vote in that particular township or municipality ought to have no voice in what the people of that particular community should or should not have, or should or should not do.

Under the Home Rule Amendment the community can abolish the sale of liquor, if it wants to, without interference on the part of outsiders. It makes things just as the people in that particular community want things to be. Whatever they say will be in accord with their own home public sentiment.

Then again, it makes way for each community to regulate its own affairs without interfering in the least with the rights or liberties or privileges of other communities.

These same paid agitators who were responsible for the misrepresentations of last year have petitioned again this year for a vote on the question, and it has been stated publicly and officially that they will keep this up until their opponents have bankrupted themselves and are worn down and worn out.

"This means continual agitation and ... (Adv.)

PUSHED TO WITS' ENDS FOR ARGUMENTS TO ANSWER BIG OHIOANS ON THE LIQUOR QUESTION

Such Is Plight of Professionally Paid Agitators in Face of Incontrovertible Opinions Expressed By Hon. Wm. Howard Taft, Dr. Washington Gladden and Others

FREQUENT CONFERENCES AT COLUMBUS PROHIBITION HEADQUARTERS INDICATE DESPERATION

(By A. V. Abernethy, Columbus, O.)

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 20—"How are we going to meet and overcome the telling arguments of our opposition." This is the absorbing question in the minds of the professional paid agitators who want to change from Home Rule to State wide prohibition.

They are very much perturbed, almost frantic, over the incontrovertible opinions expressed so forcibly by such eminent authorities and distinguished Ohio citizens as Hon. Wm. Howard Taft, Dr. Washington Gladden, noted pulpit orator and philosopher of Columbus, Prof. A. R. Hatton, of Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Hon. Warren G. Harding, United States Senator from Ohio, Judge Rufus B. Smith, of Cincinnati, one of the most prominent of Ohio's attorneys, and Ralph Reed, M. D., of Cincinnati, physician and surgeon of wide reputation, who are a unit in their opinion that the liquor question should be settled by the people themselves, by the more democratic and closer-to-the-people Home Rule Plan—as adopted by a majority of the voters of Ohio last ...

... to work up a public sentiment that will enforce it by and by.' I confess that this seems to me a curious proceeding. It is proposed to enact a law which is sure to be trampled under foot by a good half of the population, and then, after enacting it, and while it is being mocked at and dishonored, to proceed to create the public sentiment which shall make it effective! The child Alice, in Mr. Carroll's fairy tale, found something like this in Looking-glass Land, but I never heard before of applying such principles to problems of statesmanship."

What Taft Says

In the delivery of his forceful opinion the Hon. Wm. H. Taft comes square out from the shoulder in these unmistakable terms: "Nothing is more foolish, nothing more utterly at variance with sound policy, than to enact a law which, by reason of conditions surrounding the community, is incapable of enforcement. Such instances are sometimes presented by sumptuary laws, by which the sale of intoxicating liquors is prohibited under penalties in localities where the public sentiment of the immediate community does not and will not sustain the enforcement of the law."

Warren G. Harding is equally as ...

... whole prohibition movement from the days of Neal Dow to the present—its long succession of failures, the stimulation of law-breaking, illicit debauchery, cocainism and the manufacture and sale of the worst sort of alcoholic liquors, such as moonshine whisky, causes me to view with intense concern renewed attempts at extending this pernicious doctrine."

But Judge Rufus B. Smith goes further and strikes right at the heart of the thing—goes into the law and fact in this fashion: "If the use of intoxicating liquors is immoral, why prohibit merely its manufacture and sale? The purchase and consumption of liquor should also be made a crime, and every man who drinks should be punished. The Prohibitionist should not hesitate to go where his logic takes him.

"The contention that because a few men abuse the use of liquor all shall be forbidden its use, is equally untenable. Because my neighbor misbehaves is no reason why I should be locked up in the penitentiary with him. There are more men who eat themselves to death than who drink themselves to death, but that is no reason I should not be permitted to eat what I want."

The people of Ohio are giving the question more consideration, more deliberate, thoughtful consideration than at any time.

Will Settle Question.

They realise that it ought to be settled at once and for all, in some way. They are unanimous in their opinion that the time for agitation and ...

A Story of Mystery and Adventure

SYNOPSIS.

Kitty Gray, adventure woman, finds in a cattle ranch the body of a man with his forehead smashed in, which another man, Frederick Fashburn, is said to have shot at the instigation of a gang of cattle rustlers headed by Jim Hawkins, who is in love with Kitty, and whose plans are frustrated by the interference of the Gray girl. Fashburn escapes from the sheriff and takes refuge in the mountains.

"So you find it convenient to order me about, do you?" he continued. "Kitty's ever fooled in proper fashion also as she fooled Count Sachin.

"It is not your place, understandin' me not. We pay for it and have control of it.

"So there was some definite purpose in sending me here away from my friends?"

"Assuredly, a purpose very definite, and one from which we do not intend to be swerved, understandin'."

"What then do you propose doing with me?"

"We plan taking you before the king—not the king of Gretzbaden, but our own king, Cortelloe of Gralofen. He spoke to you, understandin'."

Kitty turned back into the room and Barkin, betrayed at the last moment so far as to take her by the arm to hurry her along, felt a shiver run through her frame at the suggestion that he the time to stand back over.

But at length the girl's power proved as much for those brought against her. She was turned from the room toward the front of the house.

"Once more Kitty adopted the policy of Barkin's brother and decided to struggle when she faced struggling number. Let us hope that she had time when resistance might be more effective.

"Very well, then gentlemen," said she. "So you like I am weaker than you—I am a lady, sir, and gentlemen, naturally you are strong."

Count Sachin made no answer to her remark, but he did look at her for not one—no, with him—he looked here fixed. He had been ordered to report to his king with no more than he was ever that kind and attempt he could not do it. He was ordered to succeed which he had so manifestly failed to do.

The temporary distance which separated these two kinsfolk was squeezed in both somewhat in the wonderment of Kitty, schooled in the great distance of her own country.

Arrived in the capital of Gralofen, the party was met by a great crowd of people who had learned of the arrival of the heiligs of Jaeger, Vorp, presently to be joined by a special before Kitty—her himself.

She found him an old man, thin, wrinkled, cadaver, irritable, cutting in speech, and with a temper which at times she used before him.

"Is this is the woman?" he demanded of Count Sachin, who stood beside her.

"The same, your majesty. She can explain why she was found in the Gray ranch, and why herself at accompanying he said in his best. Count Sachin stood eight at. It—it was the man who she had seen pounded which had been taken from her hat—the man who had been killed. Count Sachin had stood at Fashburn's side in his regal postcoat.

"Gentlemen," said he, "tell us what it says. The inscription is Gypsies are being driven out of Hungary, and it is stated that the last of the gypsies will be driven out of Hungary in a few years. The reason for this is that the gypsies are being ruthlessly exploited by the whites, and they are unable to stand the strain. The gypsies are being driven out of Hungary because they are unable to stand the strain of being exploited by the whites.

known. I wish to know it all. I am informed there have been two. Both have been destroyed, and therefore none is more accurate. Read it to me at once."

Kitty took the cards in her hand as though to study it, but swiftly put her back behind her back as she was checked in.

"Sir, this property," said she steadily. "This even a king can take away property without course of law."

Even a king was accustomed at the effrontery of the young girl—who had her possession until two years ago—to throw the cards from her hand. The Count Sachin had her, a secret satisfaction.

"So you value it? Very. Do we are willing to pay for what we have, and demonstrate—and the message of this note—what we have. Give it to me, and you shall be set free.

"Sir, I cannot do that—you offer that is already mine—that is my liberty. But what you ask in impossible. Yes, I know—I have seen half of the note—even I was both read the other half. Sorry I can not read the other half, sorry I can not give it to you. Sorry I can not give it to Count Sachin—that man was on the other half."

"Your meaning, I cannot—I do not know."

"Sir, the raison of our fallacy," so claimed Cortelloe—"if there should be any—is that we have not the chance should have been so generous. Perhaps there bright into this.

"Sir, you have the chance. You have not yet searched in what was written on the other half of the card. Perhaps there is the information we contribution."

"Sir," Kitty paused and the count, reddening, it is her inadvertence to repeat to her as long as she was more than that legal and criminal. He could not—he could not—he was unknown which he had so manifestly failed to do.

"The inequitable distance which separated these two kinsfolk was

Unionville

School closed last Thursday on account of the county fair. Unionville was well represented at the grounds.

The thunder shower on Wednesday of last week was one of the severest in years here. O. P. Lybarger's house east of the village was struck on the east end roof with slight damage and Mrs. Maud Richmond living west of the village had an arm severely shocked which caused numbness for several days.

Miss Marion Codderd returned Wednesday from a five day stay at Ashtabula.

Unionville and Geneva played base ball on the Unionville diamond Saturday with a good crowd present. After seven innings the rain stopped the game with neither side making a run.

Conrad Alheit, wife and two children of Vermilion, were week end guests of Rev. and Mrs. Merrill.

S. W. Pierce who has been on the sick list several weeks is able to be out again.

Mrs. W. S. Harris of Saybrook was in town last Friday and Saturday.

C. H. Pierce spent Sunday in Ashtabula.

John Burrows of Rochester, N. Y., made one of his flying visits to town last Friday.

Jay Elder was taken sick while attending the county fair on Thursday. He reports losing his pocket book containing twelve dollars and his watch.

Mrs. J. L. Goble and two children visited her uncle, George Cowdery, in Geneva last Thursday.

CITY COUNCIL

SUBMITS REST ROOM PROPOSITION TO VOTE OF PEOPLE

A Two-thirds Vote at November Election Will Build an $8,000 Rest Room on Park

The city council got rid of a problem and pleased a great many enthusiasts Monday night when it was decided to submit the "Rest Room on the Park" proposition to a vote of the people. This project has been agitated for years in Painesville, but has been side-tracked, pigeon-holed, and referred to committees, by the council, because of lack of funds and more pressing improvements.

Now the people can decide the question by voting for a bond issue, and if a vote of two-thirds is in favor of the proposition, the rest room will be built.

OHIO CAST STONE CO.

Will Soon Have Big Painesville Plant Ready for Business. A New Process.

That building blocks cast from concrete are destined to be the building material of the future to take the place of lumber, which is fast being consumed, is the opinion of A. Beringer, superintendent of the Ohio Cast Stone Co., who resides at 358 East Erie street, Painesville.

"Cast stone building blocks are superior to lumber in every way. By that I mean the waterproof blocks made under the Zagelmeyer patents. It is these blocks which the company of which I am superintendent is manufacturing at its plant in Painesville.

These blocks are a different product than that made under the old 'dry-tamp' system. The latter are so porous that they continually absorb moisture and consequently crumble. They stand a very low crushing strain and lose what little color they originally have because they soak up the rain like a sponge. It is no wonder that builders generally have gone back on the 'dry tamp' block.

But the block we are making under the Zagelmeyer system are an altogether different proposition. They are waterproof in the making and never absorb so much as a drop of water. They are like so much glazed porcelain. We are making a number of different granite-faced blocks and these never lose their original sparkle and brilliancy. In fact, it is difficult for the layman to tell these blocks from the genuine granite.

In almost every other way these blocks are equal to native stone, direct from the quarry. Impervious to all moisture, ...

CAPT. McELROY

Well Known Lake County Resident Would Be Superintendent of Madison Home.

In the event of a vacancy in the office of Superintendent at the Madison Home, Captain S. D. McElroy of Painesville, will be a candidate for the position and a petition signed by many business and professional men of the county is being prepared and will be presented to Governor Willis.

Capt. McElroy has been a resident of Painesville for the past two years, coming here from Madison where he was a successful farmer, also a justice of the peace and assessor.

In the civil war Captain McElroy was in command of a company and he also took the field at the head of a company at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war but did not get to Cuba. After the close of the rebellion Capt. McElroy superintended the construction of two railroads across the Rocky Mountains, took up a big ranch in Kansas and just previous to removing to Lake county was superintendent of sewers in Cleveland for four years.

Close Schools to Halt Dread Disease.

Willoughby residents started Friday by an order of the board of health closing the public schools because of the discovery of two cases of infantile paralysis, felt easier Monday when a second announcement was made by the health board.

Board President Benjamin Mosley stated Arthur Clark, 5, one of the children suffering with the disease is rapidly improving.

Mr. Mosley stated it is possible the health regulations adopted Friday may be relaxed somewhat in a few days. The board may permit the holding of church services Sunday.

The school closing order will remain in force for some time and no public gatherings will be permitted.

Mr. Mosley denied reports current outside of Willoughby that the village was quarantined or that regulations had hampered business and closed stores. The only concerns closed were the motion picture houses and no families except those two in which the diseases was discovered were quarantined.

FARMERS HELPED

Experiment Station of Great Benefit to all Tillers of the Soil. Modern Methods Shown

Mr. Farmer, are you taking advantage of the experiment station in your state? If not you are losing valuable information which is compiled for your benefit.

Practical farm work is being done continually at the various experiment stations of the country and the results are recorded, and bulletins on these experiments are to be had free.

Even the oldest farmer is certain to encounter some puzzling problems, and by writing to the experiment station he may have them solved for him.

The state carries on experiments for the benefit of the farmers and those in charge of the work are only too willing to give out any information that is wanted.

A trip to the experiment station will be well worth your while, as you will have a chance to see the vast and valuable work carried on there and come to realize what can be accomplished.

Not only crop raising is carried on, but experiments in feeding live stock are being made from time to time and the results of these experiments may be interesting.

The successful farmer is willing to learn and he can find no better place than the agricultural college to get the desired information.

Farming is a business which has advanced with leaps and bounds in the last decade, and much of this improvement is due to the good work accomplished at the experiment stations.

The Best Man in Town

FOR CAMPAIGN FUND

Why Republican Party Clings to Tariff Issue.

Leaders Realize They Can Not Win, But Contributions From Special Interests Will Enable Them to Control Machine.

It is no disinterested devotion to the principle of extreme protection that is turning the Republican leaders back to the tariff as their main issue in 1916.

The Republican organization needs money for campaign purposes. Federal and state legislation has practically dried up the railroad and Wall street fountains that once gushed so plenteously. The special interests that rob the consumer by capitalizing high tariffs are the only certain supply that remains. Wool and cotton and steel are always ready to trade cash for legislation, and by selling out the Republican party to these infant industries a campaign fund can be assured.

That is why the average Republican politician is willing to stake the 1916 election on the tariff. He knows his party will probably be defeated, but he also knows that the organization will be provided with the sinews of war without which the standpat elements cannot maintain their control over the machine.

Mr. Taft's Olive Branch.

The terms of peace which, on behalf of the Republicans, Mr. Taft offers to the Progressives are unlike the extravagant proposals that emanate from time to time from the European belligerents. As the leader of his party, there can be no question of his authority to speak for it. When he says that reunion is possible only as Progressives become Republicans and abandon the serio-comic program to which they subscribed at Chicago, he emphasizes an obvious fact.

Republicanism has become a fixed belief. It is not the same as the Republicanism of Lincoln's day, when it was leavened with Free Soilism and Democracy, and no amount of Progressive oratory will make it so. It is the party of Hanna, McKinley, Quay and Aldrich. It stands boldly for certain ...

OHIO VOTER TO PASS UPON MANY THINGS

Elector Is an Important Personage in Buckeyedom This Fall.

BIG FACTOR IN MACHINERY OF STATE

Must Be Far Better Prepared for an Election Now Than He Ever Was Before, Owing to Increased Responsibilities Placed Upon Him.

Special Columbus Correspondent.
Columbus.

MR. OHIO VOTER is an important personage this fall. It is up to him to decide many things in addition to who shall be the municipal and township officers for the next two years. He is going to pass upon four proposed changes in the constitution of the state, and also he is going to determine whether two laws enacted by the general assembly last winter and spring shall be vetoed or allowed to stand. Truly is the Ohio elector a big factor in the machinery of the state and a real autocrat in the political fabric as compared with just a few years ago. Prior to 1912 Ohio voters didn't do a thing but elect officials. Of course, the increased responsibilities call for a greater effort on the part of the voter, for today the voter must be far better prepared for an election than he was before. Now he must know issues, for his position is much like that of a judge to whom each side of a question is submitted for his arbitrament. Therefore he must know both sides in order to be able to decide fairly and intelligently. Prohibition, for example, is being submitted this fall as a change in the constitution. If the voters vote favorably on the proposal the constitution will be so amended that the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors will be tabooed in the state. That's a big question of itself, and it's only a small part of the questions that the Ohio voter is going to decide on Nov. 2. There's the question of so changing the constitution that there would result a modification of the initiative and referendum itself. Now, the initi...

Ohio Will Have New Governor.

Ohio has a new governor, or rather, will have if something happens between now and Oct. 18, when Gov. Willis returns from his trip to the west. If nothing of a serious nature comes to pass then little will be heard of Lieut. Gov. J. H. (Jack) Arnold. But all the while there will be a potential new governor ready to spring into the executive chair and tide the commonwealth over any especially rough places until the chief helmsman returns. Mr. Arnold has just made it known that he does not intend to try to "usurp" any of the powers or prerogatives of governor unless an emergency arise threatening the health, peace or safety of the state. If such an emergency does come, the second officer says he will arise to the occasion and meet it. "If a lieutenant governor did not do so, he should be removed and a man placed in his office who had the ability and stamina to do it," says the lieutenant governor's statement. But while the second officer is acting in a potential or even an active capacity he will act solely for the "glory" of the cause. Constitutional lawyers say that the constitution does not provide that the acting governor draw the salary of the chief even should the latter be disabled. Other state constitutions, however, are more explicit and provide that the lieutenant governor shall assume the duties of governor even when the governor leaves the borders of the state. It develops that Gov. Willis has not designated anybody, excepting possibly his secretary, to perform his duties while he shall be away. This leaves the lieutenant governor with little authority to act unless in an emergency, when he would assume authority. The governor and his party left Columbus for the west today. With the chief executive, in addition to Mrs. Willis, are Adjt. Gen. Hough and Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Jones. Mr. Jones is secretary to the state tax commission and goes with the governor to act as a traveling secretary. The members of the party pay their individual expenses, and they will ride on a regular Pullman as ordinary passengers.

RAFFLES LOST FINE CHANCE

Sleepy Bride, Too Tired to Put Presents Away, Leaves Note for Mr. Burglar.

"Some local Raffles missed the opportunity of his life the other night," said a young Philadelphia traveling man just returned from a trip to the middle West.

"As you know, I was married last April and have installed my bride in a pretty suburban cottage.

"Now, I never realized to what extent my customers appreciate me until their wedding presents began to pour in. And these gifts, being shipped f. o. b. Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland or some other distant city, the parcels invariably made up in value for what they lacked in size. Meanwhile my family and that of my bride had not been idle and my firm always does the handsome thing; consequently the result was a collection of which any married couple might be proud.

"By making close connections this trip I was able to reach home a day or two ahead of schedule, being somewhat disturbed by accounts in the Philadelphia papers of a daring robbery in the very next block to that in which I live. It was nearly 2 a. m. when I entered the house and, greatly to my surprise, spread out in full view on the big table in the hall were numerous jewelers' boxes, large and small, containing our cherished and expensive wedding gifts.

"The little woman has been showing her presents to visitors and must have been too sleepy to carry them upstairs again, I mused aloud. Rather risky business with burglars in the neighborhood!

"Just then I noticed a large pasteboard card tilted in a conspicuous position against the lamp. On it, in my wife's handwriting, was inscribed the following:

"'Mr. Burglar: These are all the valuables in the house. Take them and welcome, if you will only please to leave us unharmed upstairs.'"

LIVE MEN WANTED

It takes live men to make a town Dead men are fit only to inhabit cemeteries. If they are really decidedly dead all over, we tenderly lay them away in the sleep of the tomb; if they are dead to all enterprise and spirit, outside the narrow lines of their own selfish interests and yet persist in walking around, moving their calloused hearts and conscience where real business is wanted to push and throb with vigor they are only like the drone bees, in the way until they are stung to death and dragged outside the hive of legitimate industry. Twelve really live men are worth more to a town generally than a round thousand of such useless material as lays around like rubbish in a rushing stream that is aching and foaming to run mills and factories. Live men bless and dead men curse a town.

WHAT IF—?

Did you ever stop to think what would happen IF every depositor demanded his money the same day, or IF everybody ordered the same kind of food at the same time, or IF everybody went to sleep at once, or IF everybody commited suicide at the same moment? No, you know these things, while POSSIBLE, are not PROBABLE and therefore you go on about your work. But these things are just about as probable as the imaginary dangers that the jingoes are conjuring up as an excuse for frenzied preparedness.—Bryan's Commoner

PATRIOTISM

Patriotism is the quality that leads a man to die for his country when his country is right. It also leads a man to sally forth and shoot some other man when both countries are in the wrong. Patriotism, defined as one of the noblest attributes sets eleven million soldiers pot shooting at each other. It furnishes the inspiration for the diplomat who lies for his country, just as it furnishes the inspiration for the spy who risks his neck in his country's service. Patriotism impels one big country to wipe out a small country. Patriotism presided at the partition of Poland, and it was in the name of patriotism that the Filipinos revolted and that we shot them for revolting. The final argument of patriotism is usually the roar of a cannon.

And yet patriots are needed to this world, because there is a dearth of the right sort. A real patriot is a man who desires the best for his country. A patriot is a man who would not have his country lie or cheat; he would not have his country rob or burn; he would not have his country use might to imperil the right. A patriot is properly a man who will fight as hard to keep his country out of trouble ...

Old General Prosperity

(With apologies to James Whitcomb Riley)

Old General Prosperity's come to our town to stay, the local merchants all are glad, now trade has come their way, there was a time when money vanished from us like a fog, "Enclosed find check, for which please send ... as per your catalogue—" We had the same goods right at home; our prices, too, were right, but somehow no one understood and no one saw the light, out-of-town concerns had methods that we didn't know about—the mail order firms'll git you, ef you don't watch out.

Once we had a citizen who wasn't very wise, he kept the General Store, but was too proud to advertise. His groceries and dry goods, an' his eggs and butter, too, his hardware an' his boots an' shoes were good, but no one knew, and so we spent our money where it didn't help a bit to make the town a better one; to make us proud of it, the big city got the profit, and we—what were we about? The mail order firms'll git you ef you don't watch out.

This citizen at last woke up and advertised his goods, an' all the others followed suit, and came out of the woods, an' they helped their home town paper which had allus done its share to boost the town and help to put it on the map somewhere. An' the paper it helped them in turn, an' people came to buy, an' found that money spent at home makes old Depression fly, and unless this mutual spirit kinda hovers all about, the mail order firms'll git YOU ef you don't watch out.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

The Trap.

"Mademoiselle, give it to me! Let us end all this."

The voice of Count Frederick was agitated. For once he had met a situation sufficient to shake him from his calm.

Kitty Gray made no answer, as she shrank back, the coin tightly clasped in her hand. She cast on him a look so full of womanly anger as might have scorched him—an anger now devoid of fear. Caved, trapped, left without resource, helpless in the hands of her enemy, still she seemed deadlier than that enemy now.

"Will you not?" The man's voice had in it now something almost of pleading. Count Frederick felt something of shame at his own part in this.

"No!" she answered at length, her own voice low and even, panting out the words. "No, I will not. Come and take it from me if you dare. You have done that once—why not again?"

He turned away with a sudden gesture, his face red in chagrin over the justice of her taunt.

"You remember that?" said he. "What remains? Must I be yet more rude with you? It is not that I like the part, mademoiselle, be sure of that. It was not myself but my man who laid hands upon you that other time."

"He is still your man. You yourself still are willing to persecute a woman and a stranger. You are no better than he."

"Suppose I am not then. Does it look as though you would gain much by defying me? ... The coin is nothing to you—it is everything to me. I swear it is more than I thought it ever would be ... [illegible] ... Would you stand between ... [illegible] ... Does not know ... [illegible]

"So I do not. I ... one word and that is hate for you. When my chance comes I shall still remember that. In turn I will put you behind the bars if ever the opportunity comes to me. And you shall stay there always for all of me. I hate you!"

Count Frederick smiled grimly. "There is comfort in that word, mademoiselle," said he. "Rather that than leaden-eyed indifference, at least. But as for me, I do not hate you, neither am I indifferent toward you. I only—at least, mademoiselle, I try only to think of the coin and what it means to me."

"If it belonged to you, monsieur, it would have gone to you long ago. If you ever owned it you would own it now."

A sudden change came over the face of the nobleman as he caught the conviction in these words. They touched for him some consciousness long left unawakened.

"What do you mean?" he asked in a low voice. "What is it that you mean when you say that?"

"When Frederick, Count of Gretzhoffen, deserves this coin, when he earns it, when he gains title by virtue of right thoughts and deeds, then perhaps it will come to him; surely not before. This coin," she held it now out before her in her hand, "it will come eventually to that place where it belongs. It is seeking for that place now. The people really own it. They ask freedom and justice and liberty. And now you ask me why I cling to it, why it clings to me. I suppose it is because something impels me, compels me to do what I have done."

Count Frederick turned to compose himself to a situation of greater comfort. As he did so, and about to seat himself upon the lower stair, something fell from the pocket of his coat, something which he had brought with him from his room, in the hope that it had not been observed there by this woman. It fell now face upward on the stair between them, and he saw that she had seen it. He accepted the fact, and at first did not attempt to pick up the little picture, for it was the little picture which he had brought with him from his room.

"You saw, mademoiselle?" said he. "I had hoped that you would not."

"Yes, I see it now; I saw it there in your room," answered Kitty contemptuously. "You ask why I venture into your apartments now and then. Have I not the right? May I not claim my own property? I am not familiar with the laws of Gretzhoffen. Indeed, it seems to me there are no laws in this land. Not knowing how to replevin my property by process of law, what shall I do—wait and lose it, or take my own when I find it?"

Count Frederick smiled at this.

"You claim the coin also by that law," said he. "Very well, I claim my picture by that law. Possession is nine points of the law of any land. Will you trade this for that?"

"No!" spitefully.

"There is no bargain concluded," said he. "So then I suppose we will wait here until doomsday."

"Yes," viciously.

"Agreed, then, mademoiselle. With your permission, may I light a cigarette? Till doomsday! I would rather spend my time here than any place I know."

CHAPTER XXXIV.

New Problems.

Meantime the agencies of the law were in charge of another situation which but now had arisen in the destiny of the dynamic Gretzhoffen coin. There had been murder done but now over this coin. The city was exerting all its force usually employed in the preservation of life and property. Swiftly a cordon of troops and of the local gendarmerie had been summoned into action. The exits of the town were guarded. The gendarmes filled the streets nearby, some guarding the crossings, others converging toward the point of greater interest, whence the alarm had come—the Ritz hotel.

"What is this, monsieur?" demanded the officer, as he approached the desk, his quick eyes glancing over every detail about him. "Remain here all of you. Let no one attempt escape. What is this, then?"

"We do not know, captain," began the clerk who acted as spokesman. "This maid brings the alarm; she declares a man has been found killed in one of our apartments."

"What room was it, monsieur?"

"That belonging to a young American woman, a Miss Gray."

"Where is she?"

"I do not know, captain. She was here but now. We did not see her enter, but saw her leave. She and her man come and go often, somewhat mysteriously, I must admit."

"When was she here last?"

"Within the hour. I was about to say—"

"And who was with her?"

"Her man, whom I have just mentioned. They came in apparently from the country, apparently from travel. They came in at the rear entrance, so it seems. Soon after her arrival a gentleman inquired for her."

"And where is that gentleman?"

The clerk looked about him. Count Sachio by this time had approached the door, and would have been glad enough to pass out. Detained by the porter for a time, he now had met the gendarmes, who allowed no one to leave the place. The captain approached him.

"Monsieur, you must join us for a time," and led him toward the desk, where he resumed his questioning of the hotel force.

"Is this the gentleman?" he inquired of the clerk. The latter nodded.

"What did this gentleman say?"

"He asked me where was the charming young woman, the American. He said he had known her before."

"Has anyone else inquired for the young American lately? Has anyone else been in her apartments?"

The clerk considered for an instant. "One other, monsieur le capitaine, yes."

"Who—when was it?"

"A gentleman whose name I dislike to speak in public."

"Speak. It is the law."

"Very well, then. It was Monsieur le Comte Frederick of Gretzhoffen."

"The Count Frederick, when was he here?"

"Ah, that was before the return of the young woman from an absence of several days."

The officer turned to his men. "Those of you who remain," he said, "will guard all those whom we have questioned here. Prevent all from leaving the hotel. I must go to find the Count Frederick himself and bring him here. Perhaps through him we may find something of the whereabouts of the young woman herself. Once we find her we have found the solution of this crime."

"Who was the victim?" he demanded of the clerk.

"That we cannot say. This maid alone has seen."

CHAPTER XXXV.

Stone Walls Do Not a Prison Make.

Roleau, guardian of the fortunes of his mistress, had remained at that portion of the palace which seemed to him most useful as a coign of vantage in watching against intrusion. He had not been aware of the quiet advance of Count Frederick when the latter had been summoned by the electric bell set off by Kitty's presence in his own apartments. He knew nothing of the device by which the count had managed to trap the intruder; knew nothing of the cause of the long silence on the part of Kitty, whom he had left alone in the count's apartments.

As for the attendants of the palace itself, no alarm came from them. In truth, they all were in the front part of the building, grouped near the great windows or the street door, whither they had been called by certain alarms. They had seen hurrying troops, had heard the challenge of the officers of the law. That challenge came closer to them. A little group of men marching hurriedly, men in uniform, now ascended the great stairs. A loud rapping came at the doors of Count Frederick's palace. "Open, in the name of the king!" came the summons.

The servants, terrified, lacking the command of their master, not knowing where that master was, knew no alternative but to obey. The door was opened. The captain of gendarmes and his squad entered.

"The master of this place," he demanded of the men who met him. "Where is he? Is he at home?"

"We do not know," stammered the major domo, the first to speak.

Roleau caught some sense of what was coming on, saw the men approaching, and darted back to warn his mistress, whose long delay he could not understand. He hurried swiftly on tiptoe, along the halls he knew so well, and naturally met no opposition. He reached the door of the room where he had left Kitty, glanced within, and found the room empty. He turned this way and that, not knowing what to do, and fearing to turn back toward the main stairway, passed deeper to the rear.

All at once he heard the voice of Kitty, loud and clear. "Roleau! Roleau! A moi! Vite! Vite!"

He hastened on down the hall, knowing that his mistress was once more in some desperate plight, and so found himself at length face to face at the foot of the staircase with the Count Frederick, who turned to meet him.

"Eh bien, Roleau?" smiled the latter. "What, again? You are most faithful, shall I say most industrious, in the service of this lady? I would you had been so devoted in my own."

"As you please, master," replied Roleau with aplomb. "But where is she?"

"She seems safe," said Count Frederick coolly, and waved a hand.

Roleau came front to front against the iron grille doors which barred egress for the inmate of the little prison. He shook at the bars in frenzy as he saw her. She approached him, her eyes wide with joy at his coming.

"So then, this was why!" cried Roleau. "Open this gate, I say!" In his passion he forgot his own position and turned on his master, ordering him as though Count Frederick himself were the servant in this place.

"Roleau, you will yet exhaust my patience. This is my home. I have had almost enough of your running back and forth in it as you like. This is the last time. Out of here, you fellow."

"Is it so?" grinned Roleau savagely, his own mind upon the main situation of menace to his mistress. "There are things which even matters quickly, master. But as for this, I won't argue now. It is your own safety demands it. Listen, the men are coming—the officers—don't you hear them?"

"Who are coming?"

"The gendarmes. There is a charge of murder. They are after you, they are coming to search this house. If they find you with her, trapped, what will they do? Open, master, quickly, I beg of you. It is for the sake of her and yourself."

"I do not run," said Count Frederick, slowly. "If there is such a charge as this, certainly we shall meet it, for it is our purpose as well as theirs to find who are guilty."

"Come now," he turned to Kitty as he drew the key of the lock from his pocket, "you have once more, by virtue of this exigency, mademoiselle, conquered me! I must set you free for a time. Fate seems to fight with you. Later we will resume our argument, but now I think what Roleau says has justice in it. We must not be found here thus."

He flung open the iron grille. Kitty sprang down the steps, clung to the arm of Roleau. A flush came to Count Frederick's face as he saw how she avoided himself. There was, however, no time for further speech. The sound of rapid footfalls came down the hall. The captain of gendarmes and his men were at the door.

"Messieurs, welcome!" said Count Frederick. "But why are you here?"

"Monsieur le comte, we ask pardon for the intrusion, but we must ask you to join us," replied the officer. He was impressed by the calm dignity of Count Frederick, as had been more than one man before his time.

"For what reason do you desire our company, monsieur captain? Is there any charge against us?"

"There is a charge of great severity to be laid against someone, monsieur le comte. We ask your aid to determine who that one may be. This young woman, who is she?"

"I am Miss Kitty Gray of America," answered the object of his suspicion. "This is my servant, Roleau. Who are you?"

"We are of the imperial police, mademoiselle. A murder has been done in your room at the Ritz hotel. Naturally someone is under suspicion. Let me caution both you and Count Frederick not to speak. What you say may be used as evidence."

Count Frederick turned suddenly toward Kitty, a warning in his eyes. She stood therefore silent, looking at the man.

"Mademoiselle is in no case responsible for any of this," said he to the officer. "We will all go with you and conclude this matter as quickly as possible. We must be released at once from detention."

The officer turned, beckoning to them to follow him.

The little group passed along the walk to the open curb of the street. It was Roleau who hesitated here, addressing the captain of gendarmes.

"Monsieur captain," said he, "I see that you guard all the escapes possible to any guilty man. You will therefore allow me to step to the corner to summon a carriage for these two excellencies?"

The captain of gendarmes hesitated for a half instant, frowned, and then nodded.

"Naturally, you only do your duty, monsieur captain," suggested Roleau, "but excellencies like those must not walk. Excuse me, then?"

Those who lingered for an instant saw Roleau walk leisurely toward the corner, raise his hand as though in a signal, and then break into a run.

"Well," exclaimed Count Frederick, as he saw the plan of the quick-witted servant. "If you leave me we also might run away. We will pick him up, no doubt. Do you tarry here with us."

In fact the captain of gendarmes, seeing his own party reduced by divisions to no more than a couple of men beside himself, hesitated, and turned to secure the safety of his more important captives. While they paused they heard the quick wheels of a taxicab which drew up before them. After all, it was an open question what had been Roleau's intent, for certainly he had ordered this vehicle to come hither. Making the best of the matter, the captain of gendarmes motioned for his prisoners to enter the car.

Kitty turned to the silent man who sat at her side. Count Frederick laid a finger to his lips, counseling silence, and gazed straight on ahead.

Thus, silent and aloof, they arrived as prisoners at the grand entrance of the Hotel Ritz.

Kitty found herself face to face with a large man in full uniform, a man with a heavy beard and merciless eye, who now addressed himself to his subordinate:

"As to this man," he demanded, "why have you taken Count Frederick of Gretzhoffen?"

"Merely as ultimate suspicion," stammered the captain. "We found him in company with this young woman, in whose room the crime was committed. This other—" he pointed to Count Sachio, "also seems to have known this young woman."

"Who are you, then?" demanded the prefect of Count Sachio.

"I am Count Sachio of Grahaffen," replied the latter, none too happy at the situation in which he found himself.

"Might I suggest to monsieur le prefect that we hasten," interrupted Count Frederick gently enough.

The prefect had seen many women, not all of them innocent. He smiled grimly enough now as he noticed the beauty of the young girl, who stood pale and not wholly collected in all this turmoil. The girl now turned to him and for the first time spoke.

"Monsieur le prefect," said she, "you cannot make guilt out of innocence. I can prove to you by this clerk and all these others that I was absent from the hotel for several days. When I came back it was but for a short time. I was absent when this crime was discovered. How can you connect me with it? Rather connect with it those who have had access to my room during my absence."

The official turned toward her thoughtfully, then to the captain of gendarmes. "Have you searched all these persons?" he inquired. The latter shook his head.

"So you do not know what evidence has been destroyed. Come then, perform that duty now; see what you find upon the persons of these individuals. The woman first."

Without hesitation Kitty presented her handbag, drew out from it her little portemonnaie, even turned inside out the pocket of her frock. Count Frederick watched her closely as she did so. He saw that none of the officers discovered the piece of coin. He suspected, although he did not know, that Kitty had palmed it under her thumb as she spread out her hands, asking them to certify themselves.

The gendarmes, their captain, the prefect of police, turned away nonplussed. The prefect hesitated as he faced the calm dignity of the nobleman.

"Your excellency," said he at length, "I dislike to ask of you the right of search. I comply only with formalities. If your excellency—"

"Certainly," said Count Frederick, and threw open his coat.

The prefect of police turned to his men. "We have not yet found all of those parties who may be concerned with this crime. We have not yet held our questions on the scene of the crime itself."

They turned, all of them, now, and approached the stairway which led to the floor upon which were located Kitty's apartments. Their numbers quite filled the hall as they advanced, preceded and followed by gendarmes. But suddenly, as they approached the spot they sought, the captain of gendarmes touched the arm of his superior and pointed ahead.

"That is the man who escaped," exclaimed he. "Roleau, here he is, and coming from the room itself! But who is that with him?"

CHAPTER XXXVI.

The Body of the Crime.

It had been easy for Roleau, once he was free of the immediate presence of the officers, to spring into the nearest alleyway and quickly pass from sight. While the officer, in charge of his more distinguished prisoners, was passing in the car toward the front entrance of the Hotel Ritz, Roleau himself was speeding thither almost as quickly through devious passageways which led to the rear of the hotel.

Attaining entrance at the rear, he sped up the back stairs, and found himself once more at the apartments of Kitty Gray.

What he saw caused even his stout nerves to quail for the time. On the floor before him, with face half turned and arms outflung, lay the victim of the last adventure connected with the mysterious Gretzhoffen coin.

Roleau did not know this man at first, but he seemed not of Gretzhoffen. Rather his garb betokened him to come from the kindred kingdom of Grahaffen.

Carefully, yet using that speed which he knew was imperative, Roleau bent over, making such search as he could of the silent evidence of the crime. It seemed to him almost certain that he had seen this man somewhere, but he could not be sure. He stooped, hesitated, and then swiftly sprang aside and sought concealment behind the hangings of the room! He was sure that he had heard someone move in the rear room of the apartments.

He had no more than concealed himself before he had full evidence of the justice of his suspicion. He heard a rustling behind the curtained door, heard the slight shuffling of a step, and saw emerge from the concealing curtains a face which he knew well enough; he could not mistake that cunning, ratlike chin, the shifting eyes, the almost silent footfall which carried him forward. Yes, Roleau knew him, knew him well enough. He had met him not so long before in combat at the lodge of Count Sachio, had saved the life of her excellency from this very man. He had fought him again in his own den in the slums of Gretzhoffen here. Yes, it was Blake, the renegade king of the apaches.

He stooped over the body and knelt by its side, thrust a hand into the pockets of the coat, and at length drew out a folded paper, which he hurriedly crowded into his own pocket. Then he was about to arise, but at that instant he felt the tigerlike weight of the giant Roleau upon his own back. A hand caught his arm back of his, crowded it up toward the back of his neck, strained it into a position of excruciating pain. An arm came around his neck, choking him. He was helpless.

"Get up," said Roleau, at length, grimly. "I know you. So, you old this? Come along with me."

Now it was this strange apparition, of Roleau marching his prisoner before him, which gave pause to the procession of the law as it advanced toward the scene of the crime. The prefect of the city, his officers, Count Frederick, Count Sachio, Kitty Gray, all these others, paused now.

"What is that?" demanded the prefect imperatively. "Who are you, and what do you do with this man?"

"He is the guilty man, excellency," said Roleau stoutly. "I took him but just now in our apartments. He was bending over the dead man there when I saw him. I sprang upon him and took him, as you see. I know this man well enough. He is a robber and a chief of robbers. He is the leader of the apaches of this city."

"What you say may be true," said the prefect, as he cast a swift glance at the prisoner, "but we can jump at no conclusions. Retain him, retain them both."

"Do you know this man?" he demanded of the clerk.

But the latter shook his head. "I never saw him," said he. "But all these things rouse additional suspicion of this young woman. She is too mysterious; she has too many strange friends. I tell you, monsieur le prefect, she is the one who knows all about this. She knows the victim, whoever he may have been. Depend on that."

The prefect had he made like question of Count Frederick or of Kitty herself, might have heard that they both had seen before now this latest addition to the list of captives. But that official, for the time, was engaged in larger matters.

"There is truth in what you say," he assented to the last remark of the clerk. "Now all the avenues are closed and all the suspects are assembled, I take it. We will see what the room itself holds. We will enter."

"No, no," cried Kitty, in sudden terror at the thought of what she feared to see. "I cannot. I know nothing of this; I don't know who the man was. I don't know who did this."

"What, mademoiselle! You fear to see what there may be to witness?" said the prefect. "As to you, monsieur le comte—"

"The law will take its course," said Count Frederick coldly. "You have before now seen fit to doubt me. Take matters into your own hands, monsieur le prefect, and let the law go on."

The prefect himself flung open the door and entered the mysterious room. The room, so far as any victim of a crime was concerned, was entirely empty. Everything was in order as before. There was no dead man there!

CAN'T REMEMBER YOUR NAME

Common Affliction May Be Due, It Is Alleged, to Subconscious Aversion for Subject.

"I cannot remember your name—just wait a minute!" How often we hear that! And some of us are offended, and some of us think it is absurd to be offended. Well, according to Freud, the first are instinctively right about it. When you cannot recall a name that you ought to remember, it is a sign either that unconsciously you wish to injure or reject the person whose name you have forgotten, or else that this person is associated in your mind with something you do not want to think of. If his name should come to mind that repressed thought would come with it, and so you cannot fish up either of them.

Says Freud: "When I analyze those cases of name forgetting which have occurred in myself, I find almost regularly that the name withheld shows some relation to a theme which concerns my own person and which is apt to provoke in me strong and painful emotions."

Among other examples he tells how he could not remember the name of an inn near which he had spent seven summers, and that when he finally heard the name it proved to be the same as that of a rival physician who practices his own specialty in Vienna. This name touched his professional jealousy.

Freud made a study also of the cases in which he had forgotten to call on patients when a call was due, and he found that the great majority of them had happened when the patient was one whom he treated gratis. I suspect the most of us, if we could achieve the refreshing personal candor with which Freud writes his scientific books, would have similar tales to tell.—Max Eastman, in Everybody's Magazine.

Fighting the "Tobacco Bug."

Thousands of dollars' worth of tobacco has been destroyed yearly in this country by the ravages of the "tobacco bug," which ruins the cigars by boring a tiny hole in them. Much ingenuity has been spent in the direction of battling with this insect. Electrical sterilization of the eggs of the beetle with a high-frequency current follows the lines of moisture and leaves the eggs in the dry places practically unscathed and in a condition to become destructive later. A special X-ray machine, constructed by Franklin Smith of Philadelphia, is said to have shown itself to be thoroughly effectual in sterilizing the beetles' eggs. At Tampa, Fla., about 800 cigars are treated by X-rays every minute.

Handsome Coat for General Wear

American textiles have been making rapid advances in fineness and distinction of weave. This holds good especially of cotton, but is true of wool and silk as well. This remarkable advance in the art of weaving is brought forcibly to mind by the new "fabric furs" manufactured for the coming season. Last year we called them "fur cloths," which is a truly descriptive name for them. But manufacturers, having made some of them so like the fur of animals in appearance, have newly named them, and fabric furs they are.

Not all of the cloths of this kind are woven to imitate furs. Some of them are supple with silky surfaces and are used for costumes. Many others are of a heavy furlike texture and are used for topcoats and as trimmings on other cloths. With the advance of the season they are likely to appear often in muffs and neck pieces. Already at the milliners bewitching three-piece sets, including turban, muff and neckpiece, are shown made up in these fabrics, and often they are trimmed with bands of real fur. These new textiles are rich in appearance and very durable. They combine the warmth of fur with better lasting qualities, and some of the topcoats made of fabric furs deserve to be called magnificent.

One of the plainer coats for general wear is shown here. It is made of a familiar weave in fabric for imitating Persian lamb. The coat flares from the neck down at the back, but fits smoothly above the bust line with a gradual flare below. It is somewhat double-breasted, fastening in a slanting line at the front with handsome dark mother-of-pearl buttons. The sleeves are roomy, set in a long arm's eye. Their fullness is confined in an ample cuff.

The high, straight collarband supports a wide turnover at the sides and back and fastens with two buttons like those at the front, but smaller. Large and practical patch pockets at each side are also finished with buttons.

This coat is in very dark brown much like seal brown but having a slight purplish cast. Inlays of gray velvet at the collar, cuffs and pockets harmonize with it and add a smart finish. The ingenious cut of the pockets and cuffs bears witness to the art of the designer, for it is in such novel little touches that distinction lies.

Little Girls' Hats, Made by Home Milliner

There are some styles in millinery, especially in that designed for small people, that are always good. The "tam" reappears season in and out, only varied by differences as to size and fabric or color and trim. It is always sure of a welcome by mothers and misses. From four years up to the age where the young lady forgets to have a birthday—all the maid asks of it is to keep in line with fashion's vagaries.

A pretty tam for the miss from four to sixteen is shown here. It is made of dark velvet (in this particular instance midnight blue), with two-color cord trimming and a white pendant cord and tassel of silk. The cord trimming is of white and the color of the tam.

The hat at the left is a familiar shape with crown slightly higher than in the last two seasons, and soft at the top, he becomes a shape that proclaims that it is up to date. It is covered with velvet and the top with a band of ribbon, shirred on about the lower part of the side crown. A narrow ruffle is left upstanding at each edge and that at the lower edge rests on the brim. Here it covers the band of white fur that makes a soft fluff about the face of the little miss.

The underside of the brim is covered with a shirring of white satin ribbon. This hat is one of those that the home milliner may undertake to make with every chance of success. She is first to secure a light buckramette frame and unless the frame is made with a soft top crown of net, its buckram top crown is to be cut out. It should be remembered in fitting a frame that it should be a little large for the head to allow for the facing and lining.

A Party Bag.

Have you ever gone to a party and faced the problem of where to put your handkerchief? Party dresses as a rule are not provided with pockets. A girdle is a dangerous hiding place for a handkerchief—if one desires to keep the handkerchief. A pretty finish to such a costume, as well as a serviceable finishing feature, is one of those dainty little bags just large enough to hold a glove handkerchief and a vanity box. They are done in silk and figured satin and shirred on a ribbon which hangs on the wrist.

Some people make an effort to be happy and trust to luck to be good.

British Potteries Short of Bone.

A serious difficulty in connection with the manufacture of china, writes Consul Robert S. S. Bergh from Stoke-on-Trent, that threatens to become very acute unless some speedy relief arrives, is the growing shortage of bone, a very important constituent of English china. This material is imported extensively from Argentina, but, owing to the shortage of vessels available for charter and the consequent difficulties in transport, very little bone is finding its way across. It is stated that ships that would normally be carrying bone are now transporting foodstuffs. Bone supplies that were at one time available in the potteries for $22 to $24.30 a ton (2,240 pounds) are now realizing from $63 to $68, and even more. Some factories which buy their materials from hand to mouth may have to shut down unless the stringency is relieved.

Flux making possible the effective soldering of aluminum and its alloys has been invented in Germany.

THE FEAR OF DEATH

Its Ignobleness Is Thing That Haunts All Who Are Subject to It.

Paul boldly predicted that the New Testament gospel was without value unless its testimony sustained the claim that Jesus rose from the dead.

The challenge has been accepted by the world and in fairness to conflicting opinions as to the truth of the affirmation it must be stated that a very large portion of humanity, some of it being as devoted disciples of the Nazarene teacher as those who accept the Pauline statement, still reject that conclusion otherwise than as it applies to the continuity of life beyond the grave of every human being.

Paul's teaching and life abundantly support the sincerity of his belief.

Likewise the teaching and practice of those who dissent from Paul's conclusion afford incontestable proof of their discipleship in proclaiming and establishing in the hearts of men the truths which the Nazarene asserted as being fundamental to the cure of those evils with which the social organism is afflicted in so far as human action can influence the making of a righteous civilization.

Both schools of religious thought—it matters not what creed gives inspiration to their effort—are intensely sincere and earnest in attaining a common purpose, only their methods are different.

An Exalted Type.

Humanity as a whole—Christian and "pagan" alike—accepts Jesus of Nazareth as an exalted type of character, worthy of emulation by every man who seeks to serve his kind in his own essential teachings and the conformity of his life thereto.

Jesus gave to the world a sound and simple philosophy for its universal welfare that surpasses in practicability that of the combined wisdom of all other teachers.

And, to enforce the value of his teachings, he gave to the world the sublime example of one who not unwillingly yielded up his own life rather than desist therefrom or renounce any portion of it.

The poet tells us that—

The fear o' hell's a hangman's whip
To haud the wretch in order;
But where ye feel your honor grip,
Let that aye be your border.

Well thanks to the teaching of the last two lines, and to good sound reasoning besides, hell has ceased to appeal to intelligent thought as the inspiration to right living.

Rather, as Paul says, has the example and teaching of Christ "delivered them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage."

Ought we to dwell upon this thought by carrying it to its legitimate conclusion? We guess not. We might be appraised unneutral in both religion and politics. But we do ask, if we may be so bold, that our readers do a little thinking for themselves along this line.

Jesus Set Example.

Jesus of Nazareth set the example for independent thought, which in its possibilities means the breaking of all bondage.

War, with all of its horrors at least contributes to breaking the bondage of the fear of death, and, to that extent, hastens the movement that Jesus launched to free mankind from injustice and bring it into a knowledge of its relationship to the Father of all creation.

The spirit will still be in a measure the slave of the body while we are capable of fear. The dream in our hearts is somehow to break through the last barrier of fear—to come out, as someone has said, on the other side of fear. The uselessness of the fear of death is as apparent to us as the sun in the sky. Its ignobleness is a thing that haunts all who are subject to it. Christian, pagan and atheist are one in this. They feel that the life of the body itself can be fully enjoyed only when the fear of those that kill the body has been utterly overcome.

Yes, the world is coming to "know more about Jesus."

Adversity.

Adversity is often described as a school in which the servants of God are taught wisdom. The evil of sin, the vanities of earth, the feebleness and uncertainties of an arm of flesh—these are all matters of which we may learn something by the hearing of the ear, but it is through the medium of adversity that the eye seeth them.—H. Vaughan.

Look Up.

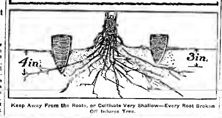
Look not down, with weeping Mary, into the grave. That is not where they are for whose dear presence you are seeking. Look away and up. The dead are not dead. Death hath no more dominion over them. Our Savior, Jesus Christ, hath utterly abolished death.—Rev. George Hodges.

Solace for All Sorrow.

Wilt thou with St. John rest on the loving heart of our Lord Jesus Christ, thou must be transformed into the beauteous image of our Lord by a constant, earnest contemplation thereof, considering his holy meekness and humility, the deep, fiery love that he bore to his friends and his foes, and his mighty, obedient resignation which he manifested in all the paths wherein his father called him to tread. And now ye must gaze much more closely and deeply into the glorious image of our Lord Jesus Christ than I can show you with my outward teaching, and maintain a continual, earnest effort and aspiration after it. Then look attentively at thyself, how unlike thou art to this image, and behold thy own littleness. Here will thy Lord let thee rest on him. In the glorious likeness of Christ thou wilt be made rich, and find all the solace and sweetness in the world.—John Tauler.

Time is an estate that will produce nothing without culture, but will always abundantly repay the labors of industry.—Johnstone.

CULTIVATION IS BEST IN APPLE ORCHARD



Keep Away From the Roots, or Cultivate Very Shallow—Every Root Broken Off Injures Tree.

(By M. R. CONOVER, Rushville, N. J.)

The orchard in question was in sod of permanent orchard grass when it came into my possession four years ago, having been seeded two or three years before. Three of the four years since I bought it this section has suffered severe droughts in the summer.

There was quite a lot of deadwood in the orchard and this was cut out the first year. The scars healed over with the bark in many instances, indicating a vigorous condition of the trees.

The next year a more drastic pruning was given and the succeeding year a good crop of fruit was borne.

The soil of an adjoining field received thorough cultivation and this extended under the outer row of apple trees. The third year the trees through the center of the orchard began to die back to an alarming degree and the foliage turned a sickly yellowish green.

Examination revealed no scale insects, but I feared some invisible pest was at work in my orchard and my trees must go. However, early last spring I turned under the sod in the entire orchard and have cultivated the soil all the season. The trees are toning up, but it is going to take more than a couple of years to get back to normal condition—if not longer.

The trees on the outer edge which received cultivation last year have suffered no dying back, but have grown long, vigorous branches which last year bent to the ground beneath a load of fruit, and the foliage is a fine dark green.

If I had turned the sod under the first year I have no doubt that my crop of apples would have been abundant, judging from the cultivated trees, yet the soil has had no fertilizer aside from the turned under sod.

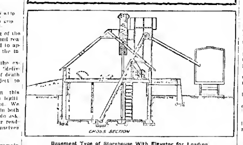
I believe that two years is long enough for any orchard to be kept in sod. Of course a clover sod would have given better results.

Judging from the appearance of many orchards over this section of the country I believe some growers are putting too much faith in sod, that is, they are leaving the sod upon the orchards too long and wherever this is being done the trees look about as mine did.

I have a row of Baldwin apple trees along a lane. A wide strip of fine sod has grown under them on the roadside for many years, but the field they border is under continual cultivation.

The trees are healthy and vigorous and bear fruit well, so it seems that partial cultivation does much to keep the trees in good condition.

CONSTRUCTION OF A POTATO STOREHOUSE



Basement Type of Storehouse With Elevator for Loading.

In the construction of a potato storehouse or cellar there needs to be careful consideration of temperature, ventilation, light, drainage, convenience, durability and cost. The best temperature is just above freezing or about 34 degrees. Well-insulated walls, a properly drained location and ventilation are essential to maintaining an even temperature. Darkness is demanded for table stock because greening by light develops the acrid taste characteristic of exposed potato tissue. On the other hand, light prevents disease, toughens the skins and is a check to excessive sprouting. Cellars should have light in the spring without warmth. A knoll is the best place to locate a potato cellar, as it can be placed well into the earth and still have good drainage. Each square foot of floor space will carry 200 pounds of potatoes piled five feet deep. A cellar 50 by 100 feet will hold nearly 20,000 bushels. The plan shows construction of house to hold 10,000 bushels when filled ten feet deep.—Orange Judd Farmer.

USING HEN MANURE AND ASHES IS BAD

Ohio Experiment Station Gives Reply to Question as to Fertilization of Soil.

The Ohio experiment station has received frequent inquiries as to how to use ashes and hen manure to the best advantage in fertilizing the soil. The best answer the station gives to the question is: Don't. Ashes are about one-third lime, but no material containing lime, in the form in which it is contained in ashes, should be mixed with moist manure, as the lime will cause the liberation of a considerable part of the nitrogen in the manure and it will escape as ammonia gas. Ashes and dry hen manure may be mixed immediately before applying the manure, as the ammonia will mostly be absorbed and held by the soil. The proper material to mix with manure is acid phosphate, as this serves to fix the ammonia instead of liberating it and also re-enforces the manure with phosphorus, which is the element most needed by most soils similar to that in Ohio. Acid phosphate sprinkled over the dropping boards will reduce the loss of ammonia and increase the effectiveness of the manure.

A mixture of 250 pounds dry hen manure, 150 pounds acid phosphate and 100 pounds unleached hardwood ashes will contain practically the same quantities of ammonia, phosphoric acid and potash as would be carried in 300 pounds of 2-10-2 fertilizer. By using a sand sieve and a wooden pestle to pulverize the manure such a mixture may be applied with the ordinary fertilizer drill, and if the ashes are not added until within a few days of the application there will be no appreciable loss of ammonia.

Coal ashes have practically no fertilizing value, but may sometimes be used with advantage in loosening a compact clay soil or as a mulch around small fruits in the garden.

TURN YOUNG LAMBS INTO CORN FIELDS

This Should Be Done While Weeds Are Young and Tender—They Do No Damage.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.)

It is good practice to turn the lambs into the cornfield as soon as the corn is matured enough so it cannot be hurt by them. They should of course be turned in while the weeds are yet young and tender. They will then crop them down and in doing so will render the most munificent service to the field. They will also crop off the lower leaves of the corn and in this way will obtain much food without probably doing any harm to the corn. The shade furnished by the corn when the weather is unusually hot will be good for the lambs.

When lambs newly weaned are turned into such fields it may be necessary to supplement the food given to them. It probably will be necessary. The weeds grow much in the shade, and consequently will be more insipid than if they grow in bright sunshine. Even when newly weaned lambs are turned in to graze on good pasture, they should as a rule be given a supplement of grain. When they pasture amid corn, if thus fed, the lambs will not only be directly benefited but the fertility added to the land, or some of it, will be proportionately helpful.

MATURED CORN FOR SILAGE

Well to Wait Until Kernels Are Nicely Dented Before Putting Into Silo—Use Plenty Water.

Every year there is much poor silage made because the corn was cut and put into the silo too soon, before it had time to mature. The best silage is made from corn when many of the ears are nicely dented.

Well ripened corn can be used with very satisfactory results if plenty of water is put into the silo as it is being filled. Undoubtedly the fear of frost is responsible for much of this early silo filling. Green, immature corn is liable to sour and be less palatable and nutritious than that which is allowed to come nearer maturity. Therefore, it pays not to get in too big a hurry.

Spreader Pays for Itself.

Without doubt the manure spreader will pay for itself on the average farm in, at most, two or three years.

NOTHING TO WORRY ABOUT

Little Jimmy's Explanation of the Perspiration No Doubt Satisfied His Fond Mother.

Senator Clarence D. Clark of Wyoming smiled the other day when reference was made to the bright sayings of the kiddie folk. He said he was reminded of a small party named Jimmy.

One afternoon little Jimmy had been playing rather strenuously in the street. When he returned to his happy home he had an overheated look.

"Jimmy," exclaimed his mother on seeing the youngster, "come here a moment."

"Yes ma'am," obeyed Jimmy, quickly hustling to his mother's side.

"What in the world have you been doing?" demanded the fond parent. "Your head is all perspiration."

"That's all right, mamma," was the indifferent response of Jimmy. "My roof leaks."

At the Wrong Place.

"Did you hear that there was a man eating shark discovered in the harbor yesterday?" breathlessly asked the summer girl.

"Well, there's one good thing about it, he'll die of starvation," said the second summer girl.

Year After Year.

"But the summer hotel proprietor manages to stick us for two weeks of it."

Sad Omission.

Dorothy was so homesick at her first party that the hostess mother suggested that it would be better for her to go home. Dorothy gladly accepted the idea, but a few minutes later, answering a timid knock at the door, the hostess mother found Dorothy bathed in tears.

"Well, Dorothy, I'm glad to see you again. Did you decide to come back?"

"No m'm, I f-forgot to say I had such a nice time!"—Christian Register.

HIGH LEVEL BRIDGE

At Willoughby will be Built if You Vote for a $225,000 Bond Issue

Plans and specifications for a high level bridge to be built at Willoughby over the Chagrin river have been completed and will be submitted to the voters at the next bond issue. Prior Bonesteel and Wilbur J. Watson of Cleveland and Wilbur J. Watson & Company, Cleveland, consulting engineers. The estimated cost of the bridge is $225,000 which is small compared to what the people of the county figured the cost would be. The cost estimated by the engineers is that of the structure complete, including the approaches, the parting of the bridge, the paving of the approaches and the acquisition of all necessary lands and rights of way.

The plans and specifications call for a reinforced concrete structure 1050 feet in length with a roadway 40 feet in width and sidewalks each six feet in width.

The center span across the river will be 200 feet in length with seven 50-foot spans on each side between abutments. The roadway will be lighted from one end to the other by electricity.

The people of the county will decide the question of whether or not another bridge will be constructed. The bond issue will call for $225,000.

Auto and Milk Wagon Collide

Both vehicles were damaged and the horse, which was away from the wagon when the collision occurred, ran away but was stopped before it had gone very far. The wagon slipped sideslip of the gutter at the Lake House corners. The gate was down for an approaching train. Luckily no one was injured.

The propositions to amend the constitution are as follows:

To prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors.

To limit the submission of constitutional amendments to one every two years.

To change the terms of county officials from two years to four years.

To exempt homesteads from taxation.

"PREPAREDNESS"

Should be Met by the Government Levying a Direct Wage Tax

If we are going to spend millions for "preparedness" it would be well for the national government to levy a direct tax to pay the bill. Under the present system of taxation the rich escape with a very small share of the cost of living and is getting tired of paying the bills. The man who is not the rich neighbor, who really pays the bills, would be better off if he was given a policy of "preparedness." The policy of preparedness which the government for 1916 that doesn't hurt the rich but hits everybody else, is what is likely to go to press.

Fully a third of the cost of preparedness comes from the numerous vicious taxes levied on the people of the country. Leaves and Dividends will be hard hit because of a worm pest, grown stunted by the imposed tax which the United States and federal agriculture experts have failed to discover a remedy for.

The preacher on the Chautauqua platform gets better addresses than the man who pays the bills, and he pays to hear him, who he may hear free if he is willing to be a preacher, or half is any better—the preacher's salary is paid by the man who pays the bills, and he pays for it whether he hears it or not. The man who pays the bills is charged with a straight rise attached to the bill, and he pays for it, and he gets the rather at a wedding funeral or at the Chautauqua, and he gets it—in the interest of neatness and economy, he should be given a policy of preparedness which would be a remedy further than that which is now proposed. The man who pays the grocer's raisins, the trade pilot's bill of the education upon his soul, the man who pays the bills for the luxuries of life, but the man who pays the bills for the luxuries of life, but the man who pays the bills for the necessities of life, the man who pays the bills for the necessities of life, the man who pays the bills for the necessities of life,

BIGGEST GUNS IN NAVIES OF WORLD

Planning to Construct Battle Cruisers Which Will Be Fastest Afloat.

WILL SACRIFICE ARMOR FOR SPEED

There Has Been No Decision as to the Number to Be Constructed and Much of the Expense Will Be Greater Than Heretofore.

Washington, D. C. The United States navy is to have two or more battleships which will be faster than any war vessel afloat and will carry the biggest guns in the world. Secretary of the Navy Daniels Monday admitted that the plans for the battle cruisers have been prepared. They are designed to make 35 knots, or 40½ statute miles an hour, and they will carry six 16-inch guns. The new vessels, in common with all ships of the battle cruiser type, will sacrifice armor for speed. Their armor will be eight inches in thickness. They will be driven by turbine engines of tremendous horsepower.

No Decision as to Number.

Secretary Daniels' announcement followed his conference at the White House with the president and Chairman Padgett of the house naval affairs committee regarding the naval construction program to be submitted to congress. The secretary said there has been no decision yet as to the number of dreadnaughts, battle cruisers, torpedo boats, submarines and ...

PACKERS' CARGOES SOLD, GET NO CASH

American Goods Seized by Great Britain Are Disposed Of by England.

ACTION HELD AS VIOLATION OF LAW

Whole Proceedings Is to Be Made the Subject of Most Vigorous Protest Made by the United States to England.

Washington, D. C.—The state department has been informed officially that Great Britain has sold most of the packers' cargoes which were seized by the English prize court, that the packers have not been paid for the cargoes and that the sale by Great Britain was made before the privy council of England, to which an appeal was taken, had passed on the validity of the prize court decree. Officials of the department say that this unusual situation is totally at variance with precedents under international law and the customs and practices of courts which have the custody of goods in dispute.

Strong Protest From U. S.

The whole proceedings, beginning with the original seizure of the packers' ships and cargoes before as well as after the issuance of the order in council, is to be the subject of the most vigorous protest yet made by this government to Great Britain. The climax of the illegal act under the order in council was the seizure of ...

GERMANS GAIN FROM THE ALLIES

Recovery of Lost Ground Serves to Straighten German Lines; Trench Fighting Lasted All Day.

London, Eng.—Violent and repeated counter attacks by the Germans delivered in a persistent effort to reestablish themselves in the works captured from them by the allies in Artois resulted in their scoring gains against both the British and the French. Recovery of this lost ground serves to straighten perceptibly the German line on both sides of the salient protecting Lens, which has its apex at Angres.

Against the British front, after a heavy bombardment which began Sunday afternoon and continued with great fury throughout the night and well into the morning, the Germans commenced a series of terrific attacks, charging across the open with great prodigality in lives. The object of these attacks was that section of British trenches lying between the Vermelles quarries and the Hulluch road.

After bitter fighting of hand-to-hand character in which the losses on both sides were heavy and the British resistance was all that the traditions of the battles of the last fortnight could demand, the Germans succeeded in establishing themselves in the greater part of the Hohenzollern redoubt, which, with the Wilhelm II works, were among the most highly prized of ...

OHIO WOMAN SUFFRAGE PARTY CONVENTION

Call For Meeting to be Held in Cleveland Thursday and Friday, November Eleventh and Twelfth

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Cleveland.—Upon the invitation of the Woman Suffrage party of Greater Cleveland, the Ohio Woman Suffrage association will hold its 30th annual convention Thursday and Friday, Nov. 11 and 12, at Hotel Hollenden. The executive committee will be in session on the evening of the 10th, but the convention proper will begin at 10 a. m. on the 11th. At 1 p. m. a luncheon will be served to delegates, visitors and friends, the delegates being the guests of the Woman Suffrage party. Mrs. Ethel Snowden, the wife of the Liberal member of the English parliament, will be the only speaker at the luncheon. Mrs. Snowden is a brilliant, beautiful woman of great oratorical powers. One hour on the 12th will be set aside in memory of Elizabeth Cady Stanton, who was born Nov. 12, 1815, and who was responsible largely for the calling of the first woman's rights convention in 1848.

Ohio speakers and workers now in the campaign states will tell of their experiences.

All suffrage associations are urged to send delegates, and attention is called to the following articles of the bylaws, article 2, section 1: "Local dues paying societies may become auxiliary to the state association by paying into the treasury annually 25 cents for each of their paid-up members. Steel-Making Industry Shows Gratifying Increase.

May Be Taken to Mean Prosperous Activity for Other Occupations—Confidence About All That Is Now Needed.

There was a significant item in the business news the other day. It was the statement of a leading steel trade journal that this country's steel-making capacity for the present has been practically reached, and that buyers who omitted to do their shopping in that line early will have to wait their turn some time next year.

The significance of this item lies in the basic character of the industry whose services have been bespoken for months to come. This is the age of steel, and when that industry's plants and workers are thus fully employed it is because the materials they supply are wanted and in active demand by a thousand other lines of industry.

The crops, the steel trade and the money market—these are the recognized markers of conditions that mean prosperous activity for all other occupations ministering to the vital needs of life as distinguished from its luxuries and ornaments. When their indications are favorable we know that general prosperity is at least at the door waiting to come in.

Nor may these signs be dismissed as mere hectic flushes with the remark "War orders!" Such comments are superficial. There is demand for ...

RAILROADS HELP STATE COMMISSION

NO MILEAGE BASE ON WHICH TO MAKE RATES ON SAND—LOW TARIFFS OFFERED.

WILL SETTLE OLD CONTROVERSY

Held Roads Should Take Up and Establish a Fixed and Uniform Mileage Base for Freight Rates.

Western Newspaper Union News Service

Columbus, O.—Railway traffic men are helping the State Public Utilities Commission untangle the row that developed over carrying freight rates on sand, slag and crushed stone. The disclosures came out last spring at a hearing and the controversy has been under way since.

It developed that roads had no regular mileage base on which to make freight rates on sand, that a crushed stone was hauled at varying rates, and that slag, once hauled free, was now subject to continual fluctuation. The opinion of the commission was that the roads take up the three products and establish a fixed and uniform mileage base for freight rates.

The first draft of the proposed rates has reached the Commission and shows pronounced reductions in the rates. Under the rates in effect now the average rate for a ten-mile haul was 42 cents per ton. The new rate ...

NO CHANCE FOR ARNOLD.

Columbus.—Friends of the administration of Gov. Frank B. Willis, who do not wish to let Lieut. Gov. Arnold become accustomed to the functions of governor by establishing himself as the acting governor, were pleased when Atty. Gen. Edward C. Turner found a court decision, that may obviate the issue. A ruling by the Third Circuit Court in 1905 established the validity of an authorization on extradition papers, which was telegraphed from New York by Myron T. Herrick, then governor.

The question of the rights and prerogatives of Lieut. Gov. Arnold was about to be raised in a case from Cleveland. Turner advised Executive Clerk Homer N. Edwards to get the governor's telegraphic approval after laying the facts before him.

The Cleveland case involves P. D. Quigley, who is wanted in Chicago. A requisition on the governor of Ohio has been issued by the the governor of Illinois.

The State Board of Motion Picture Censors has rejected "The Birth of a Nation," a widely discussed film depicting scenes in the south during the reconstruction period and will not permit it to be exhibited within the state. The film has been the storm center of discussion in many parts of the country where it has appeared. In Boston and ...

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

Stop! Look! Listen! War orders placed in this country may possibly total a billion and a half dollars if each contract comes a 50 per cent profit, the total profit earning American manufacturers as much as if war orders will be some hundred and fifty million dollars. This profit, we, as a thing of the future, has already been capitalized. The stocks of corporations engaged in manufacturing munitions of war and supplies for contractors engaged in war work have increased in value more than a billion dollars in the last five months. In other words, as anticipated profit upon them is a billion by means of the stock ticker. If the cross Large up, some one will have to pay the bill. As financial without business is rather a transmuter a war. Surely, we are contemplating for all time the people outside of the war zone. Bubbles grow so large and then they burst. The speculators, the plunderers of the country are blowing a bubble.

It is true that people begin to stop, look and listen. A few months ago the prophetic voice of a prophet change fixed a resistant price for necessities. The time has come when the governors should fix a maximum price. There are items beyond which, if it is unable to send a 5, 6 or even 10 per cent stock.

$15.00 A WATCH TICK

Militarism is casting this nation, at present time, $15 every time the watch ticks. Shall we heed the pleadings of the armor plate and power trusts and double or treble the armament? Does the burden is so not limits it will remain. The average per capita of our population is now every at $1,000 per annum. The man himself gets but small portion of this sum, but the total cost of maintaining our military strength runs the average high. The curse and burden of the Old World is the millions of men under arms. This nation must must, if it continues to be a democracy, avoid and arm. There is no reason why we nothing to the standing army. It does all that is required.

Woodrow Wilson should ponder the question well. America must begin to embrace the sentence of neutrality.

CARRYING IT TO THE PEOPLE

Mr. Bryan is now on a speaking tour which will take him through 10 states. He will alternate public meetings with banquets. He will carry the larger issues of the Democratic party to the people. It is believed that he will press this service for some time to come, his aim being to utilize his talents, as fully as may be in carrying large message of peace to the masses. As a matter of fact, he is now in demand a hearing worthy of his fame as an orator and a statesman.

The Nebraskan makes no concealment of his purpose to thwart the purposes of jingoism if he can. He feels himself free to do this out of effect that he would have been in office then he would have been in office and his party he is enjoying his freedom. His difference with the president and his minority as methods, that stand between the president and his party, he is keeping close to the people with his measures of peace that would have been possible had he remained in the cabinet.

Of course the enemies of Mr. Bryan are charging him with sinister motives and with a secret ambition to be president, his own political fortunes at the expense of the president, but these enemies were making similar charges against him three years ago, points to big the public mind against him by alleging that he was plotting to grab the Baltimore nomination for himself. If that could be achieved by matching his ends and double-dealing. Yet there was not the slightest evidence that he was in the slightest degree plotting against the president. Mr. Bryan's ambition is to be a democrat, to be a democrat he must change that he is otherwise he hazards the President. Wilson and to raise the democratic ticket in Nebraska in the years in 1916.

There has been talk about his going abroad as a mission of peace to the old kaiser, but it is to be doubted whether he will do so. Many of his friends have urged him to do so, but he is not the man to do a thing that he does not believe in. He is a democrat and a democrat he will be, if he can, and he will be a democrat in his own way, and he will be a democrat in his own way, and he will be a democrat in his own way

When Grace Ashton-Smythe, ward of her father, Colonel Ashton-Smythe, is stolen from her home in the middle of the night, Jack Wood, a friend of the family, and Dick Wayne, a neighbor, are the first to learn of the abduction. In spite of the efforts of the police to locate the girl, the Colonel receives a letter demanding a ransom for her safe return, and stating that the girl will be killed if the money is not paid.

TENTH INSTALMENT

CHAPTER XXXVII.

The Missing Victim.

"Jack," said Wayne, "I'm sorry for Betty, too, but I think there is no use in the idea of the chap about him. Would any of you like a Monarch of the Sea?"

He took the memento of the hunt from the mantelpiece and placed it in Jack's hand.

Jack's face was flushed by hitting the trapeziums a different piece of wood than the one intended for it, and the latter then came back behind his head, striking him a smart blow on the back of his head, and knocking him down in the middle of the floor. Jack was not hurt, however, and he was soon on his feet again, and the game was resumed.

Dick was doing well, and was getting the hang of the game, when he was suddenly struck on the back of his head by the rebound of a trapezium, and he was knocked down in the middle of the floor. Jack

On a Level

He may be the son of a master of learning, whose wisdom has taken a nation by storm, or the offspring of one who is rightfully earning the plaudits of all through his Social Reform. His father may be a great famed politician, whose word will bring thousands of men to his feet, his family may hold an exalted position in circles where only the mightiest meet. But today he is only "a man in a million," no family connections or riches enthrall the comrades who march in the same big battalion. At college he's merely "one freshman." That's all.

Auditor of State Issues Pamhlet

Auditor of State Donahey has just issued a pamphlet of answers to "Ohio Interrogation Points," the list of questions on Ohio's constitution, government, laws and history which appears in the Auditor of State's report for 1914. This little pamphlet on Ohio contains more information about the Buckeye state than can be secured from all the reference works in the average public library. It should be in the hands of every teacher in Ohio and should be used by the history and civics classes in every high school and college in the state. This interesting and instructive handbook on Ohio government, past and present, should be read by every voter. A copy will be mailed free by the Auditor of State to any citizen of Ohio on request.

Unconquerable.

The habit of never being whipped of always keeping up the fight that is the quality of the great leader. The man who never admits defeat is the man the world has to take into account. Time and again the foes he is fighting may think they have him down. But before they know it he is on his feet sounding the advance. Such a man molds events. He helps create the new heavens and the new earth of the prophet's vision. A mighty force of the universe is the unconquerable soul!

Narrow Teaching.

Those who teach morality, limiting its obligations to duties toward family or country, teach you a more or less narrow egoism and lead you to what is evil for others and for themselves. Country and family are like two circles drawn within a greater circle which contains them both, like two steps of a ladder without which you could not climb any higher, but upon which it is forbidden you to stay your feet.—Mazzini.

Wanted to Be Hospitable.

When I went to Paris, said Gen Horace Porter, I told my friends that any of them who got within a mile of the embassy must come to see me. The latchstring, I told them, was out; there was always a spare seat in my pew at church. The latchstring was often pulled; the seat in church remained vacant. One of my friends who visited me stopped his subscription to the Christian Observer. He said he didn't want any observers while he was in Paris.

Almanacs of the Past.

Almanacs are in existence that were compiled in the eleventh century, but they are in manuscript; the first printed almanac was issued about the year 1475.

Mentor

NOTE—The regular news letter from Mentor was not received by the Herald this week, due to a misunderstanding. We are pleased to announce that beginning next week, our former correspondent, Miss Nettie King will have charge of the Mentor letter, and any news items given to her will be appreciated.—Editor.

The following Mentor news is taken from the Telegraph-Republican.

Mentor, Oct. 5.—Mr. and Mrs. Fitzsimmons of Geneva were guests at the residence of Dr. Lowe.

Rev. C. E. Cramblett and Mr. W. W. Dray were guests at the Disciple parsonage over Sunday.

Mr. Albert Bandell of Chardon was calling among his old friends in town on Saturday last.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Jacks left on Thursday evening for a month's visit with relatives in Webster City and Corning, Iowa.

Miss Helen Murray entertained a number of her friends at a dinner and dance at the Hunt club last Friday.

Colonel Spaulding returned from the Huron Road hospital, Cleveland, on Saturday last and seems to be improving.

Mrs. Henry Lewis of Painesville was calling among her friends in town last week.

Miss May Pierce who is located in Cleveland was spending Sunday with her parents.

The condition of Miss Emily Haskell is much better and it is hoped that she is on the road to recovery.

Mrs. L. A. Amidon entertained a number of friends at luncheon on Friday last, at the home of her daughter.

Mesdames Shulters and Gates entertained a party of lady friends at luncheon at the Broadlawn Inn on Thursday last.

A Queen's Sympathy.

A kindly little act that shows something of the quick wit and ready sympathy of Queen Helena of Italy is recorded by Touche a Tout. Some years ago the coral fishers of Torre del Greco, near Naples, were in hard straits. The value of coral had fallen so low that they were no longer able to find purchasers for their harvest. At last in their despair they besought the queen to come to their aid.

At the first great court ball that was held that year at the Quirinal, the queen, to the surprise of all beholders, wore about her neck a collar composed of six rows of coral instead of her superb collar of pearls and her black hair was crowned with a diadem of coral and brilliants. From that evening the mode changed. Old coral ornaments that had been hidden away for years and years were again displayed at the jewelers and were snapped up by eager purchasers. Queen Helena's object was attained and that court ball marked the beginning of more prosperous days for the coral fishers of Torre del Greco.

Boudoir Scenes.

Had I a young daughter and did I wish to pick out those pieces which I deemed eminently safe, proper and fitting for her to see, I should make it a regular practice to recommend to her only such plays as had at least one of their acts laid in a bedroom. When the curtain goes up on an American play or on a foreign play adapted for the American stage and reveals a lady's boudoir, one may be quite certain that nothing will happen that a very young girl should not see—particularly if the time of the action is night. On the American stage a lady's bedroom may be described as a room in which the audience sleeps.—George Jean Nathan, in Smart Set.

Confident Prediction.

"So you honestly think you have the smartest boy on earth."

"Maybe he isn't yet; but he will be if he keeps on making me answer all the questions he can think up."

Spring on the Farm.

Here are some marvels we saw the other day. Early in the morning myriads of stars shone in the heavens, well worth seeing once in a while. Then the stars paled, the dawn came rosy in the east, the birds awoke and began to sing. There was the robin, the dove, the song sparrow and others—truly a heavenly choir.

Before the sun had quite peered above the horizon fields the farmer and his sons were astir. Spring is here and there is much to do. With whistling and good cheer they donned their clothes—and were off to the stables to care for the horses. Smoke curled up from the kitchen chimney meanwhile, and a goodly smell of ham and eggs. Breakfast was a cheery meal, the happy housewife relating how many new chicks she had found, and sonny tells how many pails of milk he got. Corn cakes, ham, eggs, milk, coffee—surely that breakfast ought to stay a man until noon.

Then it was to the fields with teams to work. The glory of the sunlight, the feel of the soft, rich earth under one as he plows or fits the land! Meanwhile miracles are happening all around. Buds swell on trees and shrubs, and flowers burst into bloom. Truly the farm is a wonderland these days, and fortunate is he who can live and work thereon and find that happiness so often denied the town folk.—Breeder's Gazette.

According to Hoyle.

The first author of books dealing with card games was Edmund Hoyle, who died in London, aged ninety-seven, in 1770. His treatise on whist, piquet and other games of chance are still authorities, and "According to Hoyle" has become a proverb. Hoyle has been called the inventor of whist, which is an error, although he was the first to popularize the game and place it on a scientific and exact footing. Hoyle was a lawyer by profession, but he derived a good income from his books. For his treatise on whist he received $5,000, and the work was so popular that it ran through five pirated editions. Hoyle gave instructions in whist to parties of ladies and gentlemen, charging each five dollars per lesson. For some years he held an official court position in Ireland which paid him $3,000 per year. Hoyle's book on whist was first published in 1743, and its circulation since then has probably run into the millions of copies.

ODD BITS OF NEWS

Hailey, Ind.—Unable to speak and tell how the accident happened, Miss Lucille Guita, 17-year-old, is recovering from an operation required for the removal of a fork which she swallowed. It is believed she was examining her throat with the fork when it slipped from her hand.

Oilton, Okla.—Mrs. F. Tanner of this place believes she is the only woman in the country who conducts a pool hall. She says under the conduct of women, such places should become clean, high-standard places of amusement.

Anahuac, Tex.—Mrs. Fritz Ottar arose in the night to raise a window. Something, like a snake, touched her neck. When she aroused other members of the family, they found the snake coiled comfortably around her neck.

Vandalia, Ill.—Six hours after she had been pronounced dead by the family physician, Mrs. Lydia Adams, 70-years-old, arose, walked into an adjoining room and greeted the chief mourners.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Girls have you caught on to the new fads? One is a peace ring, made of silver with a dove and an olive branch enamelled on it. The other is a "sweetheart" ring, in which the face of the girl's best beau is worn.

Jersey Shore, Pa.—Jane Reschard, 19-years-old, was taken with a fit of laughing while listening to a funny story told by a friend. She laughed for three hours, and it was necessary to put her under the care of a physician.

TYROL THE BEAUTIFUL

CHARMING SPOT IS TOO OFTEN NEGLECTED BY AMERICANS.

Mountains and Valleys in Delightful Tangled Jumble—Has Every Sort of Climate Found in the Rest of Europe.

Austrian Tyrol, which is today in the public eye because of the strained relations between Italy and Austria, is one of Europe's healthiest provinces. In the northern parts the air drifts pure and cool from the haunts of the glacier and pungent with fir and pine, and in the south it is soft with Mediterranean sunshine and fragrant with orange and lemon.

Though Tyrol is a land all-deserving of the artist, the sportsman, the vacationist, and the mentally or physically ailing, though it is a country where nature has been overlavish with beauty, and where there are more than 350 registered health resorts, it nevertheless has been comparatively neglected, more especially by Americans.

Austrian Tyrol forms a considerable part of the forbidding and difficult boundary that runs between Italy and Austria. It is a barrier more effective than the Vosges barrier between Germany and France, or than the Carpathian barrier between Hungary and Galicia.

Austrian Tyrol is 10,305 square miles of Alpine mountains, etched with a wonderful and intricate design of valleys. While there are fewer lakes in Tyrol than in Switzerland, and while the highest Tyrolese summit, 12,790 feet above the sea level, falls far behind the monarchs of the Swiss Alps, yet the Austrian crownland yields nothing in charm by comparison with its neighbor.

Among the rock-strewn gullies of Tyrol Dante found the materials for his picture of the entrance to Hell. The main chain of the Alps crosses this region from east to west, and around it on all sides is a wild chaos of rock masses.

Tyrol, though small, has more sorts of climate within its borders than any other part of Europe. There are parts of the crown land where the winters are those of northeast Siberia and the summers are those of Franz Joseph land. There are other parts, more southern, where an Andalusian languor is hardly freshened by recurring winter.

Tyrol is primarily a pasture land. There is a little farming within the sheltered valleys, and some lumbering, but, for the most part, the population depends for support upon its flocks and herds.

Moreover, there is a goat's milk cheese made by the peasants of Tyrol that equals in its mellow, fragrant beauty any product made of milk, whether from Brie, Neufchatel or Roquefort.

The population of the crown land numbers about 900,000, of whom more than half are German-speaking. There is a large Italian-speaking population in the valleys of the south.

Generals Honor Artist.

The French painter Hoffbauer, who abandoned a commission to paint Richmond war pictures to join the French army at the outbreak of the war, was recently summoned from the trenches near Soissons to local headquarters. Though only a private, he was received respectfully by five generals, who explained that he was among the painters selected to make battle pictures along the front for the future glory of France.

Hoffbauer made a brief trip to Paris for materials and then went to Reims, whence he is to visit interesting points.

When he expressed surprise at the honor accorded him by the generals, one of them replied: "Even in war time France still is the motherland of art."

The Franco-American sculptor, Francois M. L. Torretti, who is well known in New York, where he has a studio, and his wife, who is also a sculptor, have recently been permitted to visit the ambulance directed by Dr. Alexis Carrell at Compiegne to make a series of anatomical drawings of the seriously wounded for presentation to the medical museum [illegible]

HAD A "LIGHTNING" SHAVE

How Man Who Knew Human Nature Fooled Barber and Got to Dinner on Time.

"The other evening about six o'clock I was sitting in a barber's chair getting 'oiled up,'" said a downtown man, according to the Washington Star, "when a friend of mine came rushing in, threw off his hat and coat, flung himself in a vacant chair and cried to the barber standing by:

"'Here, hurry up and give me a lightning shave! I've got to catch a train; got just two minutes to spare. Step lively, now, or I'll miss that train, sure shot!'

"The barber busied himself at his swiftest speed, and in a short time my hurrying friend was shaved and gone.

"What was my surprise, therefore, when that evening about 9:30 o'clock, as I was strolling about the foyer of a theater between the acts, I saw that train-catching friend of mine leaning leisurely against a pillar there smoking a cigarette.

"'Why, I thought you had to leave town in a hurry this evening,' I exclaimed in surprise. 'You were in a fervid rush at the barber shop.'

"My friend smiled.

"'There wasn't any train to catch,' he answered, 'but I don't suppose you fully understand the psychology of the barber. I did want a quick shave, wanted it just as much and just as quickly as though I had been hurrying to catch a train, for I was going out to a rather formal dinner party with this theater attachment afterward, and I was badly pressed for time wherein to get shaved and dressed.

"'Now, if I had told the barber that I was invited to dinner and was in a hurry because I had small time to prepare and didn't want to be late it would have meant nothing at all to him. In his experience the matter of a bachelor being five or ten minutes late to a dinner has never been of any particular importance, and hence it is beyond his comprehension that one should need hurry to promptly fill any such engagement through any other motive than bald hunger. The flagrant breach of good manners, amounting almost to an insult to the hostess, involved in being late to dinner is as much beyond his understanding as the problems of the fourth dimension.

"'But when I told him I was in a hurry to catch a train, that appealed to him, for some time in his life he's had to hurry to catch one, and just made it by the skin of his teeth—everybody has. Accordingly his memory of his own feelings and his consequent imagination of my predicament came to my assistance and spurred him on. You noticed how that fellow hustled to get over my face and how pleased with himself he was because he had been so expeditious about it, didn't you?'"

Rats as Plague Transmitters.

In view of the admitted importance of the rat in the transmission of plague, the study of this disease among rodents has become as necessary from the point of view of preventive hygiene as is the management of the human cases when they arise. In a report to the local government board of England, on rat plague in East Anglia during the period from July to October 1911, the magnitude of a single campaign is shown. During four months 15,332 rats were examined for plague infection. Thirty-five of the rats were found to be plague infected. Twenty-seven premises were found to harbor plague-infected rats. The places were all within an area previously pronounced to be infected. The rat destruction, which has been maintained by local enterprise for somewhat more than a year, had, to many localities, appreciably diminished the rat population.

President Wilson's Father.

In an address at Washington recently before the Potomac presbytery of the Presbyterian church, President Wilson spoke of incidents of his boyhood when he assisted his father, a Presbyterian clergyman.

"He had a risky habit of saying exactly what he thought," said the president, "a habit which I in part inherited and of which I have had diligently to cure myself.

"But he was the best instructor, the most inspiring companion, I venture to say, a youngster ever had, and in facing a Southern presbytery I cannot think of myself as the president of the United States—I can only think of myself as the son of Joseph R. Wilson, and I only wish I could claim some of the vital connection with the church which he could claim."

How U. S. Rose From the Ocean.

An interesting exhibit shown by the United States geological survey at the Panama-Pacific exposition in San Francisco is the illustration of the development of the surface features of the United States and adjoining lands—the gradual rise of the continent from the primal ocean and the accompanying development of life—a pictorial story of progress from the early fish and the huge half-reptile creatures known as saurians to the higher mammals such as the great saber-tooth tiger and the giant hyena.

Maritime Character.

"There is something about the fellow who was in here just now that smacks of the salt sea gale," said the newly arrived guest.

"You have rare powers of discernment," said the affable proprietor of Sea View Inn. "I guess he sells more peanuts and popcorn than any other dealer on the beach."

Feared for Grandma.

Billy is fond of attending the picture shows with his grandma, and he considers himself her chief protector. One evening a large black bear was performing all sorts of antics in the picture, which Billy was enjoying immensely until suddenly the bear turned towards the audience. Billy slipped down from his seat and, taking hold of his grandma's hand, said: "Tum on, danma, let's do home. I don't like the looks of dat bear."—Exchange.

Eyes Front!

The drill instructor passed his hand wearily across his forehead. He had been breaking in some raw recruits and instructing them in the elements of company drill.

The majority were intelligent fellows, and found no difficulty in obeying his instructions, but one, in particular, didn't seem able to understand even a simple order.

At last, losing his temper, the drill instructor determined to bring him to his senses by holding him up to ridicule. Calling him to the front, he proceeded to put him through his paces.

"Eyes front!" he roared.

To everybody's astonishment the recruit gazed absent-mindedly about him.

"Do you mean to say," bawled the instructor, "that you do not know where your front is?"

"Yes, I know, sir," he replied.

"Well, then, where is it?" demanded the instructor.

"Please, sir," he faltered, "it's gone to the laundry."

$5,000,000 of Lost Baggage.

"If the value of the baggage that American tourists were forced to leave in Europe last summer be estimated at the low average of $50 a person, the total would amount to $5,000,000."

This is the opinion of a writer in the Railroad Man's Magazine who made some observations in continental Europe in the early days of the war.

"Nearly every person," he says, "was obliged to leave his baggage behind while the more unfortunate minority had to leave tools of trade, because the railroads were so fully occupied with the transportation of troops and munitions of war that they had neither rolling stock nor time to bother with such inconsequential truck as baggage even at the high rates charged in Europe."

Public Lands Opened.

A statement issued by the secretary of the interior shows that during the first two and a half months of the present year 1,571,390 acres of public lands have been restored to entry and 52,843 acres have been withdrawn. The withdrawals have been chiefly for the protection of water power sites.

The largest restorations are of lands that have heretofore been included in coal lands withdrawn. Nearly 1,100,000 acres of this type have been restored in Montana and nearly 272,000 acres in Utah. There have also been approximately 42,000 acres released from oil land withdrawals in California and more than 21,500 acres in Idaho, and in Wyoming more than 124,000 acres have been released from phosphate withdrawals.

He Did Not.

Jeff de Angelis met a New York newspaper man. "Do you remember," asked the newspaper man, "one time, while you were playing in Kansas City, you offered $10 for the best original verse for your 'Women song?'" "I do," replied the comedian. "I won that ten." According to the laws of fiction, Mr. de Angelis should have said: "I've been looking for you for years. Here's $1,000 as a retainer. I want you to write me a comic opera." But he didn't. What he did say was: "Well, that's so long ago I guess we can be good friends, nevertheless."

Passing of Youth.

To me the passing of youth was escaping from torment of passion, strife and trouble into a placid content. My griefs and joys grew less violent. I ceased hunting those who had wronged me, and, in lesser degree, grew calmer in my attachments. Undisturbed by passions I found I could think more clearly, be more liberal and understand better.—American Magazine.

STATE BOARD

Of Agriculture Issues Official 1915 Crop Report

The following report is compiled from returns received from the official correspondence of the Department:

Ohio's 1915 wheat production is the best harvest Buckeye soil has yielded since 1906. In that year the production was 39,279,000 bushels. The 1915 harvest shows an estimated total production of 36,030,238 bushels. Average production per acre, 20 bushels. Compared with report of one year ago, an increase of 7,263,709 bushels is shown in total production, while the average production per acre is two bushels greater than in 1914. Quality of the crop is only fair. Compared with an average correspondents estimate it at 86 per cent. On corresponding date one year ago quality was estimated at 98 per cent. A small amount of last year's crop still remains in producers' hands.

The total oats production is estimated at 15,752,846 bushels. Average production per acre, 42 bushels. The total production exceeds that of last year by approximately eleven million bushels. Quality is estimated at 89 per cent. compared with an average. The present yield is one of the best Ohio has produced in past ten years, being exceeded only by the harvest in 1912.

Corn prospects are promising, at present being estimated at 96 per cent. compared with an average.

Potato prospects are estimated at 97 per cent compared with the yield of 1914.

Pastures are in exceedingly fine condition.

For the Bridge

The Willoughby Delta, the new paper in that village, as may be expected, is enthusiastic for the high level bridge at that place. The editor evidently believes that $225,000.00 is a mere bagatelle to spend for a county bridge, and goes into ectacy over the stately battlements and the illumination of a thousand lights on the bridge. If about $125,000 could be saved on this bridge tax payers would be willing for the architect to cut out the battlements and the illumination. But it is interesting to see an editor spill enthusiasm so read his contribution:

"Hearts of Willoughby people should expand with pride over the prospect of this town securing such a wonderful improvement. One might be pardoned for actually being thankful that the Chagrin comes so close to the village if the town is to be rewarded in this munificant manner.

"When the stately battlements and towers of the new $1,000,000 home of the Andrews Institute for Girls crowns the great hill on the other side of the Chagrin river from Willoughby, one can well picture what a beautiful view the high level bridge, illuminated with thousands of brilliant lights, will be from the village side.

"Opportunity knocks for Willoughby and for Willoughby's progressive citizens. The bond issue for the high level bridge, in the sum of $225,000, will be voted upon at the November election. Painesville says there is a "crying need" for this bridge, nor do Painesville people demand that Willoughby voters reciprocate by voting for a high level bridge over the Grand river at Painesville. Madison, Perry, Geneva and even Ashtabula have joined in the popular clamor for the bridge here. Willoughby has everything to gain and nothing to lose.

"Willoughby electors, think it over! Do you want your town—our town—to go into another Rip Van Winkle trance?

C. C. Carter, Aged 71, Dies

Cassius Clay Carter died Sunday at his home on the County Line Road, Geneva township, at the age of 71 years. Death was due to heart disease and a complication of disorders. The deceased had been suffering from heart trouble for the past two years, but it was only during the past two months that his condition became serious. However, he was able to ride out, and only the day before he came down town. Mr. Carter was born in Leroy, Lake county, Aug. 1d, 1844, and lived in Lake county for some time, and was the last of the three sons of Samuel Carter, the original cheese maker of Carter's Corners. He returned from residing in North Dakota about twelve years ago and had since resided in the County Line Road. The deceased is survived by his wife and one daughter, Mrs. C. J. Williams, of Geneva; also two sisters, Mrs. Warren Vrooman and Mrs. Seth Barber, both of Painesville.

Pewaukee, Wis.—Here's the latest fish story. Robert Nichols and E. F. Schmutzler went fishing. Arriving at the favorite spot, they found to their horror they had brought a can of green paint instead of a can of bait. But listen! Nichols is an artist. He painted pictures of a worm on the hooks, and they had a record catch.

Now the five merchants are wondering which one of their number is the lucky one as one of the five checks bore the name of C. B. Hart, written by himself while the other four are alleged forgeries. The alleged bogus checks are cleverly executed and it could not be told at the bank which was the original check.

BUCKEYE CORN SPECIAL TOUR

This Year to Prove Biggest and Best of All, Says Riddle

This year's Buckeye Corn Special Tour will prove the biggest and best of all, according to the claim of T. P. Riddle of Lima, who has just returned from the East where he spent a week in making the preliminary arrangements.

Mr. Riddle's report to the Board of Agriculture states that all the major items of last year's itinerary will be duplicated and that a number of high class new attractions will be added. An announcement of the details of the itinerary is promised a month or longer in advance of the tour.

Monday, November 29, is the date definitely fixed for the start. Seven special trains, composed of standard steel Pullman sleeping cars, are contemplated for the transportation of the Buckeye Corn Special Party. These special trains will originate at various points in Ohio and will assemble in Pittsburgh and move over the Pennsylvania lines as heretofore.

The cost of this year's tour has not been definitely determined but Mr. Riddle has expressed the belief that it will not exceed fifty dollars for boys and girls and sixty dollars for adults.

The Buckeye Corn Special Tour has developed into a great State Excursion in the interest of education and patriotism. These tours, originally, were intended merely to accommodate the winners in the various junior contests, but in response to a popular demand, the public is now accorded an opportunity to enjoy this week of educational and inspirational travel.

Wet and Dry Campaign Is On

The wet and dry campaign is warming up considerable. The Anti-Saloon League, representing the dry side of the question is busy in all sections of the state, and feel confident of victory. They are much better organized than last year. The Home Rule folks are just as busy trying to defeat the drys and keep the state wet. The Ohio Temperance Union is for "Temperance against prohibition," and is also busy with a speaking campaign. This new organization has started a half dozen autos over the state bearing this sign in large letters, "Temperance is all Right, because the Bible teaches Temperance—Prohibition is all wrong because opposed to Temperance." W. J. Bryan, and a number of the best speakers in the country will tour the state this month in the interests of the dry cause.

Our Christmas Money

Christmas looms up ahead of us, and the problem must soon be faced of what to spend and where to spend it.

There should be but one answer to this question.

Prosperity is ahead of us again; therefore, let us make this a joyful Christmas to one and all.

Let us make it a prosperous Christmas to this town by buying from our local stores, by keeping our money at home.

A liberal spirit of giving this Christmas will restore confidence and enhance our optimistic feeling for the future.

The patronizing of our home merchants will enable us to increase the prosperity of our town and will give each and every one of us a feeling of just pride in the fact that we are "good citizens all around."

Field Marshal French Says Germans Penetrated English First Line, But Were Quickly Driven Out by Bomb Throwers.

London, England.—Further marked gains by the French before Souchez in the Artois region and before Tahure hill in Champagne are recorded in the official reports from Paris. In the Souchez valley, west of the road from Souchez to Angres, the German positions on the wooded plain were attacked and pressed back, while in another movement directed towards Lafolie fighting along the ridge advanced the French line still further. Striking in a northeasterly direction from Tahure, the French drove the Germans back, while to the southeast of this village an entire system of German works on the side of the La Goutelle ravine was carried by a vigorous attack.

The Berlin report states that French attacks with hand grenades near Souchez and Neuville as well as in Champagne were repulsed.

Presence of Chaplain Prevented Drivers Talking to Their Horses as They Wished.

The weather had been very wet for weeks, and the roads, "Somewhere across the Channel," were in a very bad state.

Consequently, it was not surprising that a wagon in a certain British supply column suddenly dived into a hole full of mud, and refused to budge.

At the critical moment up came an army chaplain, who at once proffered his services.

"Men," he said, "I see you're in difficulties. Can I be of any help?"

"Yes, sir," answered a burly sergeant, bluntly, as he mopped his brow, "you can give us the greatest help by making yourself scarce."

"Making myself scarce!" gasped the chaplain. "Why, how—?"

"Yes, sir," broke in the sergeant; "you see we can't very well say to the horses what they'd understand, while you are about!"

WHOSE MONEY?

There are some stories that are worth thinking about. Such a one appeared the other evening in the columns of a contemporary. It told of a current development of unusual significance, and was as follows:

New York, Oct. 6. — Broadway is itself again—corks popping, lights flashing, women laughing and men throwing money to the winds.

While millions are being made on Wall Street in daylight hours, fortunes are flowing away in the white light district after work. Men who wake up in the morning poor to find themselves rich by sunset, are paving Broadway with their gold, hitting only the high places and endeavoring to "break" the wine supplies of cafes and restaurants.

"When there is any money loose we always get our share—and we certainly are getting it now," was the word from Churchill's today. All of the leading cafes and "lobster palaces" reported boom times.

While Wall Street clerks are laboring through the long hours of the night to compute fortunes made during the day, the fortune makers are pouring money — and wine — along Broadway.

As a big "strike" in a mining town brought boom times to the dance halls in the old days of the west, so Wall Street's new found prosperity in the speculation in war stocks is being reflected in the white light district. Not until after dawn broke today through the darkening rain did the throngs whooping it up in the all-night cafes begin to fade away. All night long wine flowed like water, dance floors were thronged and women who heretofore had attracted but passing attention tripped by in new gowns of marvelous creations.

"Business has increased from 10 to 20 per cent within the last ten days," said George Rector, in reporting the boom.

"They are buying wine, too—lots of it—and staying until all hours of the morning."

Every cafe manager was wearing a smile today. They are watching the market with the earnest hope that it holds out.

There you have the picture. "Corks popping, lights flashing, women laughing and men throwing money to the winds." A typical Broadway scene. A few months ago the corks were not popping, the women were not laughing, the lights were not quite so bright and men were not throwing money away. What has happened in the meantime? The death toll of the great war has been mounting steadily day by day. The money cost of the conflict adds new staggering totals each week. And yet because there is a war in Europe New York brokers and their companions are "pouring money—and wine—along Broadway." Truly here is a most wonderful alchemy. Woe unutterable becomes transmuted into maudlin joy. Staggering debts incurred in Europe are in some way so manipulated that clerks work late at night to compute fortunes made in a day. Grief and desolation that sweeps over a continent has as its echo in our land the cabaret shoutings of a lobster palace. The situation is one that fairly staggers. How has the miracle been wrought? Whence come these fortunes? These brokers have not toiled late into the night. They have not stood before furnace doors. They have not tilled the soil. They have but stood in the market place and into their laps there has been poured a wealth that has made them drunken with gold.

Where does the money come from that makes the Broadway women laugh and with which the men buy wine? New York says that the "war brides" have turned Broadway into joyland, that the "war brides" have turned Wall Street into a valley of good cheer. New York says that a wonderful bull market is sweeping the stock exchange. It says that the corks are popping along Broadway because New York has money when because New York always has money when stocks are skyrocketing.

If that is the case, whose money does Broadway have? Its own? Have New Yorkers simply been changing bankrolls? Have they simply been marking up stocks on a blackboard? Have the hungry brokers been plucking the crumbs eminent financiers who have been whispering of big deals and mergers have dropped?

Hardly that. The financiers may feed the hungry brokers crumbs, but these same financiers seldom foot the bread bill. If New York has money to throw to the winds it is because the country has for some reason or other paid it an increased tribute. Money does not grow on bushes even in New York. The "war brides," the petted, inflated financial tops with which Wall Street is now making holiday, have not paid dividends to any [illegible] of their special favor. The "war brides" may be good workers—but there are not dividends in sight to justify increases of 1,000 per cent in the current quotations. There is more than earning power that is being capitalized. Twenty per cent paid during one year does not justify a $300 quotation for a stock that a year from now may be paying five. It is not the earnings of the "war brides" that New York is throwing to the winds. New York is spending the earnings of the future. It has managed to capitalize expected earning power and realize on the capitalization.

It must be apparent that New York could not have done this if what is termed "the public" had not been venturing little by little into the Wall Street maelstrom. The public is buying. The public is putting up the margins. This man makes a killing and ten men are influenced to have a try at the same game. The boom cannot last forever. The turn in the lane will be reached sooner or later. And when the bear market sets in who will be left with high priced stocks on their hands? The public.

It is the old story over again, inflation, speculation and then smash.

It would be absurd that New York brokers would be throwing money to the winds if that money was not of the easy sort. But is it not startling, this rush of gold that has changed Broadway? The men in the mills work day after day. They are the ones whose toil makes the "war bride" boom possible, but they do not share in the rewards. Wall Street gothers in the fortunes—fortunes so great that clerks in the offices of brokers stay "late at night in order to figure up the profits."

And yet Wall Street stands sternly opposed to "frenzied finance," talks gravely of conservation, lambasts Bryan, fixes minimum prices for stocks—and then manages to manipulate the stock market and extract a cool billion of dollars. When the wild dance is over the public is welcome to whatever comfort it can get from the reaction.

POMERENE AND PREPAREDNESS

It would be rather strange if "the demand for defensive preparations" were not increasing, in view of the tremendous activities of the Army and Navy league, the National Security league and all the other agencies which are being financed by patriots for profit. But just why a senator of the United States should be swept off his feet by this manufactured sentiment is not clear.

"I am opposed to a large standing army," says the senator from Ohio. This perhaps explains why he falls in with the jingo plans "for improving our national defense." He doesn't believe "in the militaristic policy of Europe." Certainly not. And this likewise explains why he is advocating the adoption of that very policy by the United States. The fact that it has not served Europe very well in keeping it out of trouble, doesn't matter. It will serve us all right. Especially the gun founders, the powder makers, the armor plate folks and the submarine builders.

Patriotism for profit apparently gains in vogue in Ohio. But one wonders that a man of the quality of Senator Pomerene should lend it countenance.

In another page of this issue of the Herald will be found the annual detailed report of the County Auditor. This report is published, in pursuance of a new law, and takes the place of the former report made by County Commissioners. The former report was a waste of money spent in the publication, but the new report goes into detail and gives an itemized account of all receipts and expenditures at the court house. This report should have the careful reading of every thoughtful taxpayer. It is an accounting for the money you pay in taxes. It should be read and filed away for comparison with future annual reports. Auditor Davis is to be congratulated on his first report. The accounts as audited by him are all there, and if there is waste or extravagance in any department of county government, the report will show who got the money and from what source.

We think President Wilson is a rather foxy old fellow to bring wedding festivities to the white house, when everybody thought he was all broken up and worried to death over national affairs.

Wouldn't it be strange if Ohio should vote dry and the Stability league should also win, preventing another vote on the question for six years. Strange things do happen in politics, too!

WHEN BABY HAS THE CROUP

When a mother is awakened from sound sleep to find her child who has gone to bed apparently in the best of health struggling for breath, she is naturally alarmed. Yet if she can keep her presence of mind and give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy every ten minutes until vomiting is produced, quick relief will follow and the child will drop to sleep to awaken in the morning as well as ever. This remedy has been in use for many years with uniform success. Obtainable everywhere.

Ohio has Finest Display of Apples at Panama Expo.

They have got just about the finest display of apples from Ohio at the Panama Exposition that has ever been assembled from any state, and Ohio is not an apple growing state either, that is to speak of. The exhibit is filled with great large juicy, brilliantly colored beauties, and it has attracted about as much attention as any other state exhibit at the big show. Although it has only been in place a week Ohio apple growers are hearing from it. To convince the skeptical that these apples are just as good as they look, hundreds of barrels are being given away, and altogether the apple exhibit is about the most attractive that has been made by the state. And it is strictly a farmer's exhibit. Not a city grown apple is in the entire exhibit.

October Garden Work

Begin to clean up the gardens and store away our root crops. It is a good practice to cut the asparagus tops as soon as hard frosts have completely stopped their growth. Gather them into heaps and when dry enough set on fire. This will destroy many of the seed which would otherwise give rise to a considerable crop of volunteer plants and destroy spores of rust and materials in which asparagus beetles would hibernate.

As freezing weather approaches the beets and carrots should be dug and buried in pits on well drained soil. Parsnips and salsify may be dug and pitted and allowed to freeze in storage or they may be left in the ground until spring. Frosts will not injure celery in its green condition when well banked but severe freezing will damage it. Clean up bean poles, tomato stakes and such materials and store away in good condition for use next season.—L. M. Montgomery, Dept. of Horticulture, Ohio State University.

Why Not Smile?

Are you angry? Is your lip cracked? Are you afraid of wrinkles? Are you suffering from an ingrowing grouch? None of them? Then why don't you smile? History tells us of men who trained themselves not to smile, because they wanted a stern expression of countenance. The savages also prided themselves on not showing any sort of emotion. Have you noticed in the photographs, that the mothers of the war heroes of Europe are not smiling? Neither are the generals who are doing the killing. Only the heroes themselves are smiling. A hard and stern expression does not indicate a good heart nor a clear conscience. A thief seldom smiles. The woman of the streets smiles with her lips, but her eyes are hard and cold. The poverty stricken man on the street who begs for a dime, sends his plea direct to your heart if his appeal is accompanied by a smile. Only the failures of life never smile. A smile is the cry of the sentry of the soul—"All's Well!"

Home Elections Should Arouse Interest

The average voter is taking little or no interest in the coming November election. Yet these home affair elections deserve even closer attention than any other. The officers to be elected this year levy most of our taxes and spend the most of our public money. The dear voter will get excited, noisy, and raise a big dust when a county, state, or national officer is to be voted for. Yet these higher officers have but little to say about our money matters. We hold public meetings and talk politics early and late in state and national elections. We do nothing of the kind when our own home affairs are at stake. Why be so foolish? Constitutional amendments and referendums are to be voted on in less than thirty days, yet not one in ten cases can even name half of these public questions that are to appear upon the ballot.

Get Together Meeting

All over Ohio the spirit of cooperation and get together between town and country is manifest. Merchants and farmers are just awakening to the fact that they are all interested in each other. The selfish man who does not want to do team work with his home community had better move out.

Everybody who lives in a trade district of a town really belongs to that town, and ought to take part in the social as well as the business life of the trade district.

The town that has business men who know how to attach a five mile radius trade district to their town, will have no trouble to get business. The stingy, short sighted ones will drive business away from a town.

Soil Fertility Meetings

Eighteen hundred farmers attended the soil fertility meetings which were held in all parts of Ohio during August and September. The average attendance at each meeting was 16. The total number of meetings was 114. Four instructors from the Agricultural Extension Service of Ohio State University conducted the demonstrations, which were held right on the farms. The meetings are held during August and September of each year. Applications for meetings next year should be sent to the Agricultural Extension Service before July 1, 1916.

Odd Bits of News

Chillicothe, O.—C. W. Cravens and W. B. Cravens are brothers and both are engineers on the B. & O. Their wives are sisters. Both families live in the same house. The other day, six hours apart, both the Mrs. Cravens gave birth to children—one a boy and the other a girl.

New York, N. Y.—"Safety First," said Mrs. Arthur Maclean as she put two diamond earrings into her pillow case and went to sleep. The next day there were clean slips on the pillows. Mrs. Maclean was frantic. She besieged the laundry, but the pillow slips had been washed and ironed. Finally one earring was found gleaming in the bottom of the washtub and the other about to enter the drain pipe. They are valued at $2000.

Newcastle, Ind.—Moab Turner, 77, is dead. Thirty years ago he suffered his first stroke of paralysis and made his funeral plans. A walnut chest was turned into a coffin and given to the local undertaker to care for. He will be buried in the walnut casket.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A demonstrator in a department store mixed a poisonous liquid used for cleaning glasses with a nerve medicine which she was demonstrating and over 200 persons are thought to have been poisoned. The demonstrator, however, was the only one to report to a hospital.

Sharonville, O.—"Howdy, John!" "Howdy, Jim!" Thus John and James Stewart of Kansas and Tennessee respectively, met here after a lapse of forty seven years. Both believed the other dead and spent several hours in a room together before they found out their relationship.

County Agents Advocate Co-operation

Cooperation between the buyer and the seller is one of the problems which is being solved by county agents, particularly in New York state. George W. Bush, Supervisor of County Agents of Ohio, believes that such cooperation should be for mutual relief. He points out that the numerous profits by different agencies are to some extent, at least, unnecessary. Among other things which are taken up in the farm bureau or county agent work are labor problems, management demonstrations, county surveys, combination of clubs and other organizations, and the starting of new betterment projects. In addition, the county agent renders personal assistance to the members of the farm bureau.

Prices for Puffs

The editor of an Eastern paper has grown peevish. He has been pestered so much by people desiring free puffs that he facetiously refers to himself as the "Peerless Prince of Puff Purveyors." He thinks he has done enough for social queens, ministers who are looking for free advertising, people who have legislative fads they wish to push and organizations which want free publicity. So he has evolved the following scale of prices for puffs:

For telling the public that a man is a successful citizen, when everybody knows he is as lazy as a hired man, $2.70.

Referring to a deceased citizen as one who is mourned by the entire community, when he will only be missed by the poker circle, $10.13.

Referring to one as a hero and a man of courage and one who will stand by his honest convictions, when everybody knows that he is a moral coward and would sell out for thirty cents, $6.21.

Referring to some gallivantin' female as an estimable lady whom it is a pleasure to meet and know, when every man in town would sooner see Satan coming, $8.10.

Calling an ordinary pulpit orator an eminent divine, 60 cents.

Sending a doughty sinner to Heaven, $5.00.

Referring to a deceased merchant who never advertised in his life as a progressive citizen, $4.89.

Lambasting the daylights out of the demon rum at the bequest of the local prohibition committee, $4.77.

Ditto for the prohibitionists at the request of the local wet committee, $6.77.

"Nobody Home."

The judge did not seem to appreciate the remarks of the lawyer for the defense. (Several years before they had had a fight over the question of religion.) At last the judge interrupted the lawyer and said: "Do you not know that everything you are saying is going in one ear and out the other?" The lawyer turned to him and replied: "Your honor, what is to prevent?"—Burr.

Public Opinion in Russia.

Persigny once said to Napoleon III: "You can do almost anything with bayonets except sit on them." So you can do almost anything with public opinion in Russia except wholly suppress it by sitting on it.—George Kennan in the Outlook.

Origin of the Organ.

The origin of the organ is lost in the night of the past. It is generally supposed that the organ, in its simplest state, was a modification of the "Pipes of Pan," or simple hollow reeds of various lengths bound together and so arranged as to be rapidly swept over by the mouth of the player, each pipe graduated as near as might be to some natural note of music.

CARE IN FASHIONING BUGLE

Making of Instrument Used in the Army Is a Delicate, Complicated Process.

From start to finish, the making of an army bugle is a process of much ingenuity and interest. A bugle may not at first sight present a striking resemblance to its cousin the coach-horn, but the one is practically a curled-up version of the other, for, before the bugle is bent into shape, it consists of a narrow tube, 51 inches long.

In the first stage of manufacture the bugle is cut out of sheet copper and rolled into two thin cylinders, technically known as the "bell" and the "branch." The narrow tube, which is the "bell," is gradually shaped out on moulds until the opening is the regular 4 inch diameter. It is then "spun" on a wonderful machine, and an expert workman takes the rough edges off the copper.

Both sections are afterwards filled with molten lead, preparatory to the bending stage, and it is this solid stuffing which prevents the tube breaking in the process and allows it to keep its shape. The expert workman, with the aid of a formidable lever and hammer, bends the bugle into the familiar shape, the lead being subsequently melted out at a charcoal furnace, after which the instrument is sent off to the polishers.

One of the most intricate parts of the bugle is the mouthpiece, which is made of nickel silver and turned out on a special lathe. With the mouthpiece fixed, the instrument is ready for the testing room.

LIKE A MOURNING DRAPERY

Interested Colored Spectators Brought Facetious Remark From Member of Their Race.

The darky has a sense of humor peculiarly his own, and he by no means objects to a joke with reference to his color—provided he makes it himself, according to a story that was told by Champ Clark.

"There is a darky in Missouri who has acquired considerable renown in his locality for his taste in landscape gardening. He was employed in setting out shrubs on the lawn of his employer. The owner of the place was nowhere to be seen, but a number of the gardener's friends were leaning comfortably on the fence at the foot of the lawn, watching the operations with absorbed interest. Another darky, who was driver for a physician living near, looked curiously at this row of spectators and thus addressed the doctor, who was getting into his buggy:

"'Doctah' (very solemnly), 'dere's somebody dead at Mistah Jones' shore.'

"'Dead?' said the doctor. 'No such thing, Tom. I should have heard of it if there had been any illness in the family.'

"'Well, doctah,' said Tom, pointing to a row of sable individuals who were hanging on the picket fence, 'ef dere ain't nobody dead at Mistah Jones, dea what is all dis heah mournin' strung along de fence?'"

Beating the Record

A lot of people seem to put in a lot of time thinking about whether their lives are successful or failures. Usually they try to measure them by the life and success of someone else, and the result isn't often satisfactory. They're bound to come to the conclusion that there are some records they can't equal. If they are beating some other records the suspicion creeps in that it isn't much credit, anyhow. Of course the real trouble is that anybody who's really making good always has something better to do than cast up the accounts of his own achievements. There's only one record to compare yourself by, and that will never result in self-satisfaction on the one hand or discouragement on the other; for it's your own record.—Milwaukee Journal.

Genuine Heroism.

The characteristic of genuine heroism is its persistency. All men have wandering impulses, fits and starts of generosity. But when you have resolved to be great, abide by yourself, and do not weakly try to reconcile yourself to the world. The heroic cannot be the common, nor the common the heroic. If you would serve your brother, because it is fit for you to serve him do not take back your words when you find that prudent people do not commend you. Be true to your own act, and congratulate yourself if you have done something strange and extravagant and broken the monotony of a decorous age. It was a high counsel that I once heard given to a young person: "Always do what you are afraid to do."—Emerson.

Why Cement Walks Are Not Slippery.

There is a reason why cement pavements are not as slippery during a sleet-storm as bricks or paving stones. A cement sidewalk which has been properly constructed is laid with a considerable foundation, placed a few inches under the crushed stone cinders or sand. The paving is laid on top of this, and the heat from the earth has a chance to warm the foundation material.

The cement being a degree or two warmer than stone or brick, and receiving the heat of the earth through the foundation materials ice will melt on the surface quicker than on most other paving materials.

Kept Safe From Theft.

In the sixteenth century dictionaries were chained in the schoolhouses as Bibles were in the churches, by reason of their costliness and rarity.

Humanity's Responsibility.

To resist the tyranny of self; to recognize the law of duty; to maintain the supremacy of the higher over the lower parts of our nature—this is our responsibility for life and its gifts.—W. E. Gladstone.

SCOTCH CAPABLE OF "BULLS"

Some Good Stories That Have Been Fastened on Inhabitants of the "Land o' Cakes."

Even in our day, residents of the British isles are rarely well informed upon the geography of "the states." Perhaps, too, since we live in a country that boasts a long list of Troys, Romes, Athenses, not to mention Cincinnati and an occasional Cato or Plato, we should not be surprised when anyone assumes that anything else in Greek or Latin is properly indigenous to our map.

A Glasgow merchant and magistrate of a century ago, so Mr. D. Macleod Malloch records, had sent to a certain mercantile house in New York a consignment of goods that remained long undisposed of. In response to his inquiries, he was informed that they were still in statu quo. He passed on the information to a neighbor who remarked suspiciously, "But I never heard of the place."

"Nor I, either," replied the good bailie, confidentially. "I looked at the map, but I couldna find it, and I just conclude it's a sma' town up in the kintra."

The simplicity and ignorance of the rural Scotch magistrate often quite equaled that of the English immortalized by Shakespeare in Dogberry, and Mr. Malloch gives two more veritable examples quite in the true Dogberry vein.

"That is a most tragical event which has just happened," said a friend to Bailie Bleak. "Your neighbor, Mr. B., has committed suicide!"

"Wha on?" inquired the bailie eagerly.

Perhaps it was he—it was certainly another Glasgow bailie—who, his health being proposed at a banquet in honor of his recent dignity, responded nobly to the toast:

"I canna but say, ma friends, that I'm proud of the honor of being made a bailie of this great city, and I'm even, I think, entitled to the honor, for I've gone through all the various stages of degradation that a bailie has tae dae tae reach it."—Youth's Companion.

PROVERBS THAT ARE VICIOUS

There Is Usually Trouble for Somebody When One of These Is Quoted.

There are some proverbs that are used only to bolster unworthy thoughts or words or actions. Here is one of them: "Charity begins at home." Of course it does, but no one says that to himself, or says it out loud, who does not wish to excuse some mean and parsimonious action, the Christian Endeavor World states. Every really generous man will of course begin his charities at home, but he will never think of mentioning the fact as a reason for not giving and doing all that he can for people and causes outside his home.

"Business is business." To be sure it is, but no one deems it necessary to state that fact unless he is doing or intends to do some hard, cold and unfeeling thing. When a cruel landlord intends to turn a widow and her family into the street, he is very likely to remark as he proceeds to do it, "Business is business." If a promoter seeks to work off some worthless stocks on an unsuspecting victim, he is likely to remark that "business is business," and that "every one must look out for himself." If a money shark forecloses on a poor man who cannot pay an exorbitant interest, he is sure to tell you with much solemnity that, though it is hard, yet "business is business."

"We must play the game." This though sometimes used in a good sense, often means in business parlance that we must be as mean and sharp and untrustworthy as other bad men. They are playing the game, and, if we would not lose, we must play it, too. They have no conscience in financial transactions; so we must smother ours. They bow down to the money god; so must we, or we shall get left in the dollar race.

Easily Explained.

An esteemed city resident was rambling through the country when he came across a farmer busily engaged with a hammer and saw and a can of paint.

"Another building boom, I see," jovially remarked the city man, halting to watch the work. "Is it a garage or a miniature bungalow?"

"Wrong on both counts, mister," answered Uncle Josh, continuing his work. "This here thing is a chicken coop."

"A chicken coop, eh?" returned the city man, with a closer look. "Why do you paint the inside of it?"

"Have ter do it, mister," solemnly declared Uncle Josh. "That's ter keep the hens from pickin' the grain out o' the wood."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Not Forceful Enough.

When couched in negative form requests bring negative results. A young man said to a father: "I suppose you will refuse if I ask for the hand of your daughter." The father replied, "Yes, I will refuse, but if you had put it the other way, that you were bound to have my daughter if you had to kill me first, you could have had her. As it is you have defeated yourself at the start, and I do not want a son-in-law of that type of mind. A man who defeats himself on propositions at the start needs to be looked after by someone else most of the time."

Valuable Discovery

Another German scientist has done the world a good turn. He has discovered that this good old world which all love so well that not many are anxious to leave it, will exist for many hundreds of years and then get an extension. We feel better.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

On the Curve.

In going quickly around a sharp curve the inside wheels of a vehicle naturally leave the ground first.

EXAMPLE SET BY TEACHER

Responsibility of Those in Charge of the Youth of the Country Is a Great One.

Few teachers realize the extent to which their students, whether in the primary grades or the university, are following their examples. It is related of William R. Harper, well-remembered president of Chicago university, that he was brought to a realization of his responsibility in the following manner.

When he was afflicted with cancer and knew that there was nothing before him but a hopeless, lingering illness, he decided that the best thing to do was to take things into his own hands and end it all. He confided his decision to a friend of his, a man who had a broader vision on this point than the great president himself. He referred President Harper to the many students who had been under his influence and said: "Among all these thousands many will face a crisis similar to the one which you face now. Many will reach the decision which you have reached, for they will think, 'It is all right. Prexy did it.'" Doctor Harper saw his responsibility at once and said, "I'll stick it out." What a great thing it would be if all teachers were willing to bear as much as this, in order that their lives might be better examples for those who may come under their influence.

INVISIBLE INKS ARE MANY

The Two Simplest Are Milk and Water—Chemical Substances That May Be Employed.

It is strange that two separate cases—one a military case and the other a domestic one—should bring the out-of-the-way subject of invisible ink before the British public, says the Manchester Guardian. In more romantic days (not so very long ago) invisible ink was a favorite precaution of sentimental youth, usually, of course, a quite unnecessary precaution. The two simplest and handiest invisible inks are milk and water. If you write your letter with a clean pen in milk it will dry off quite invisibly. But the writing will show up in a faint brown when it is toasted at the fire. If you write in water the way to make the writing visible is to sprinkle the sheet with fine coal dust or powdered charcoal.

There are besides various chemical invisible inks. A weak solution of cobalt used as ink remains invisible until the paper is heated, when it shows up red. The red can be changed to green by steaming it or breathing on it. A solution of salts of lead or bismuth makes an invisible ink which shows up black when treated with sulphuretted hydrogen. Another recipe is to write in a weak solution of tannic acid. When dipped in a bath of persalt of iron the writing comes out black.

Reason and Caprice

Edmund Burke says: "Taking the whole view of life it is more safe to live under the jurisdiction of severe but steady reason than under the empire of indulgent but capricious passion." Such wisdom should be proclaimed these days for the practice is decidedly against it. Men are not inclined to conduct their lives in accordance with "severe but steady reason," but under the influence of the very opposite passion. And the times and customs seem to prepare men for "indulgent but capricious lives." In fact, inventive genius is largely employed in preparing motives and attractions toward these capricious lives. If there is a lecture or a prayer meeting appointed for a certain night and a banquet or a dance for the same time the stream of attendance is toward the latter. Between the church service and the automobile ride the latter is chosen too often among people of religious tendencies. It is the rule of this choice that makes necessary so many social reforms. It is the difference between the steady reason and the capricious passion, as Burke points out.—Ohio State Journal.

When Mind Meets Mind.

The crash of onyx upon porphyry, the dull thumping of empty cocoanuts, the shrill whistle of windmills in a gale, the yowling of tom cats, the explosion of redhot bladders, the bleating of sheep on lonely moors, the clash of tin swords, the rattling of dumb-waiters, the braying of jackasses, the snorting of hippopotamuses, the squeaking of hautboys and bagpipes, the gurgle of cut jugulars, the cracking of sclerotic knees, the blowing up and busting of logic, the torture and death of the English language: a meeting of the house of representatives of the United States.—H. L. Mencken in the Smart Set.

Causes of Poverty.

Is poverty caused by psychological phenomena, or is it the result, asks the bureau of municipal research, of improvident buying, extravagant expenditure of limited incomes, uneconomical management of the household, lack of knowledge of cost of nourishing diet; not knowing what work to do, inability to find jobs to meet conditions, temporary bankruptcy, an empty pocket—and bread box—with the resultant loss of desire for effort; lack of knowledge about infant care and feeding, disheartening doctors and medicine bills for the needlessly sick, lack of encouragement from others besides the discouraged.

Identified.

The men who give the excuse that they don't care anything about an automobile, but are buying to please their wives, are perhaps the same ones who borrow a boy to take to the circus.—South Bend News-Tribune.

Appropriately Named.

Of course the morning-glory derives its name from the fact that it blooms only in the morning, and the "four-o'clocks," because they close at that hour in the afternoon.

AIDS THE DIGESTIVE ORGANS

Importance of Thorough Mastication of Food Is Hardly Properly Understood.

"Chew your food well," is a motto which should be written large on the walls of dining rooms, restaurants, and every other place where human beings eat. The reason is that in order to digest food in the shortest possible time, and with the least possible effort, it must first be dissolved, and this can be accomplished only by adequate chewing.

Just how much thorough chewing lessens the strain on the digestive apparatus can be seen by a very simple experiment.

Take a one inch cube of hard, solid, non-porous sugar candy and drop it into a pint of water. It will take at least half an hour and perhaps much longer to dissolve because a cube of this size has only six square inches of surface exposed to the solvent action of the water.

If, however, a similar cube of candy is broken into 100 smaller pieces before being placed in the water it will dissolve 10,000 times as quickly, because there is now 10,000 times as much surface area exposed.

In digestion we have to deal not merely with simple solution but with the chemical conversion of insoluble into soluble substances—a much more difficult process. For this reason a one inch cube of solid food would take much more than 10,000 times as long to digest as the same quantity which has been reduced to fine bits by the action of the teeth and the saliva glands.

Science now believes that much modern dyspepsia arises from our having lost the habit of living on hard, dry foods. When all our food was so hard that it had to be well chewed before we could swallow it our salivary glands were kept more active and our teeth cleaner.

HUMOR OF COURTS OF LAW

Cross-Examination Methods Seem to the Layman to Border Somewhat on the Ludicrous.

Did you ever sit and listen to a lawyer as he cross-questioned a witness of the opposition? It takes a wonderful and active mind to handle this part of the trial. It runs something like this: "How long did the defendant stay in the house?" "About fifteen minutes." "Did you have a watch?" "No, sir." "You didn't have any watch?" "No, sir." "How did you know it was fifteen minutes?" "I didn't know." "You didn't know?" "No, sir." "You didn't say you knew?" "No, sir." "What did you say then?" "You asked me how long he stayed in the house. I gave it as my opinion that he was there about fifteen minutes." "Oh, you gave it as your opinion that he was in the house about fifteen minutes?" "Yes, sir." "As a matter of fact he might have been in there more than fifteen minutes?" "He might have, yes." "He might have?" "Yes, sir." "It might not have been fifteen minutes for all you know. Isn't that a fact?" "Yes, sir, it is." "If someone should come in to this court and swear that the defendant was in this house thirteen minutes, you wouldn't be able successfully to dispute the statement?" "No, sir." "What did he go into the house for?" "To make some arrangements about his brother-in-law's funeral." "To make some arrangements about his brother-in-law's funeral?" "Yes, sir." "Was his brother-in-law dead?" Before the witness can answer, the court intervenes. "Court will now adjourn until 1:30. The jurors should be careful not to discuss this case, or any of the important testimony to which they have been listening, with outside parties."—Lamar Democrat.

His Selection.

A little boy, whose birthday was in November, was spending the summer with his grandma at her country home, and lavishly admiring the ponies on the farm, whereupon he was told that had he been born in the summer she would give him a pony for a birthday present.

Upon his return to the city his first lesson at Sunday school was upon the subject, "You must be born again."

He immediately told the teacher that he would like to be born next time in summer.

Falling Leaves Suggested Aeroplane.

The German aeroplane known as the taube, or dove, was invented by an Austrian. When in India he noticed that the leaves of the zanonia tree as they fell floated for a long distance before they settled. This he found to be due to the peculiar shape of the leaves and the wings of his aeroplane he constructed on a similar principle, whilst the body he fashioned in the shape of a dove. The German great general war staff approved and improved the design and adopted it for military use by sheathing it in steel.

Long Story.

A garrulous lady, ill of a complaint of 40 years standing, had begun to describe its progress from the first, when the physician to whom she addressed herself interrupted her, saying he wanted to go into the next street to see a patient and begged the lady to inform him how long it would take her to tell her story. The answer was 20 minutes. He asked her to proceed, and hoped she would endeavor to finish by the time he returned.

Valuable Oak Carvings.

In the vaults of St. Paul's cathedral in London is stored away a rich store of priceless oak carving, part of which was originally in the cathedral, and part removed from city churches when demolished. A selection of these relics, consisting mostly of woodwork placed in the cathedral in the time of Sir Christopher Wren, has just been lent to the Geffrye museum of the L. C. C. Of special interest are a prayer desk, an overdoor, stall brackets, trusses, and an oak capital, all beautifully carved, together with specimens of Tijou's ironwork.

Mentor

Sunday, the 4th of October was a very eventful day to the Disciple church here, and to the entire community as well; for after many trials and tribulations, the new church building was ready to be dedicated to the worship of Almighty God. The day was one of those golden October days that are almost heavenly in their beauty, and the evidences of peace, plenty, and prosperity on all sides, appealed to every heart to give thanks to the Lord of the harvest. The three services of the day were well attended, and very pleasing and edifying, the principal speaker being Prof. T. E. Cramblett of Bethany College, W. Virginia. Some thirty years ago, Mr. Cramblett came to Mentor to take charge of his first pastorate, and had never returned until called here to preach in the new building; and he alluded in a most humorous way, to the patience and kindness with which his people listened to his first efforts to preach the Gospel. Certainly, no one could look into his shrewd, kindly face, and listen to his sound, scriptural, scholarly teaching, without congratulating Bethany College on having such a man to lead its young people. It was truly refreshing, in these days of dishonoring compromise, to hear such loyal words concerning the "doctrines" of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. His Deity! Virgin birth! Miracles! His Resurrection from the dead! and the Divine inspiration and authority of the Bible. The new building is a gem in every way—architectorally, and from a utilitarian point of view. The auditorium is beautiful—so simple and chaste, light and cheerful, yet dignified and impressive; spacious and yet not so large as to make a Sunday evening audience feel too lonesome. But the crowning feature of the building is the ample provision made for the Sunday School, evidenced in the large, airy, assembly room, committee and class rooms galore; indeed, every inch of space is utilized. Last and least, is the kitchen, which also is convenient and well equipped with all the "appliances pertaining thereto." This room is the workshop, the "laboratory" so to speak—whereby certain mysterious processes known only to the initiated, sundry crude materials are taken and transmuted into "coin of the realm," by the slow, round-about way to a man's stomach, thence to his heart, and "finally brethren" to his pocketbook. It is here that the over-worked, long-suffering organization known as "The Ladies Aid" (which Mr. Cramblett called the "Best man of the Church"), is sure to work out hundreds of dollars toward liquidating the debt on the new church. It is to be hoped that some charitably inclined persons, who have more of this world's "pelf" than they need, will be induced to part with some of it, and so help lift this burden from this faithful people. The church building complete, cost seventeen thousand dollars, all of which has been raised except about six thousand.

Mrs. James McLaughlan started on Wednesday for her home in North Dakota, having spent the past six months here with her sister, Mrs. Rose Nye Doane. She is the oldest daughter of Mr. Lyman Nye, one of the old residents of this county, a graduate of Lake Erie, and one of the "Salt of the earth." Having lived a number of years in the great breezy Northwest, she actually claims they have a better climate out there—than we do here!

Miss Frances Cleveland is spending a few days with friends in Coshocton, and expects to attend the State Library Convention at Columbus, before returning home sometime this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Morley left here on Tuesday for their home in Mount Dora, Florida, and were accompanied by Mrs. Morley's sister, Mrs. Church, who is to spend a few days with the rest of the party in "seeing Washington" and by Mr. Grant Cowles, who will go on South and spend the winter with Mr. Morley. They are in this way testing their new automobile and at the same time having a most delightful trip that will last about three weeks we understand.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sawyer left here some weeks ago for Salt Lake City, Utah, where they were guests of Mrs. Sawyer's only brother, Mr. James Pardee, and are now enjoying the Panama exposition at San Francisco, not expecting to return before the last of October.

Mr. John Frost has just returned from a visit with relatives in North Evans, New York.

Mrs. Amidon, whose home is in Los Angeles, Calif., has finally been persuaded to remain all winter with her daughter, Mrs. Will Hagenberger, and her many friends are very much pleased at the prospect.

Mrs. Dr. Rush of Hudson has been a recent guest of her sister, Mrs. Harry King, and sang by request in the Methodist church on Sunday. Mrs. Rush is the Director of a Glee Club in Hudson that does some hard studying along the line of music.

Mrs. Charles Justus entertained the first meeting of the Miscellany Club when a most delightful afternoon was spent with Mrs. Louise Patterson of Cleveland, the author of "Pussy Meow" and other delightful stories, and a regular contributor to "Country Life in America" and others of our high class periodicals. Mrs. Patterson is a schoolmate of Mrs. Justus [illegible]

... is a most charming lady, [illegible] great favorite.

Mrs. Lucretia R. Garfield, the president's widow, has been at her home here all summer, ever since some time in May, and has had the pleasure of a visit from each of her children, and several of the grand-children. Mr. Irwin Garfield came on from Boston in June, together with his wife and two daughters. Mr. and Mrs. Stanley-Brown, their only son Rudolph, and their two daughters, Margaret and Ruth, came later on in the summer, while Prof. Harry Garfield, his wife and daughter Lucretia were guests of their mother sometime in August, the others running in as they could get the time from school and other duties. We make mention of this, because Lake County friends are always glad to know anything about Mrs. Garfield, and especially to learn that she is in usual health, though she is free to confess that Mentor is her only "home" and that she only stays in California winters, as a matter of necessity, as she has a bad throat when in Ohio during cold weather.

Mr. Peyson Carroll has so far recovered from his accident as to be able to get out of doors once more, and was seen on the streets today.

The paving of Mentor Ave. goes on very slowly, even though the Contractor is working his men seven days in the week, hoping thereby to be able to finish before snow flies. The road is plowed up as far as the Center, and the brick paving is actually down as far as the old Aldrich farm.

Many of the farmers in this township are "blue" over the prospect of an almost entire loss of the potato crop, as blight and wet weather have combined to "raise hob" they say with the tubers.

Mrs. Stephen Remington has been on the sick list for more than a week now, and under the doctor's care, but still life is quite endurable, as she has Miss Helen Andrews with her, who is a favorite niece and who will remain all winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Justus entertained Prof. Cramblett while he was in our village, and it has been through some of their relatives that we learn that during the sixteen years that Mr. Cramblett has been at the head of Bethany College, he has personally raised over eight hundred thousand dollars and the school is now well endowed.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Frost returned one day last week, from spending some time in Petosky, Mich. Mr. Frost has the sympathy of the entire community, as president of the Mentor Telephone Co., which will certainly have to go to the wall, unless our people are patient until this paving business is finished! When the machines plow up the cable, and do all sorts of things every few days—what can be expected?

Mrs. Harriet Shimer, a former missionary to China, has been the guest of her friend, Miss Nellie King for a few days recently.

Mrs. Marsh and Mrs. Shumaker entertained the last Miscellany Club at the home of the former, when Mr. Shankland of Willoughby gave a most interesting talk on the aims, plans and purposes of the Andrews Industrial School for Girls, situated at Willoughby, and of which Mr. Shankland is the head. Some excellent music was furnished by Miss Almena Parks of Painesville, who is a cousin of Mr. George Marsh, and a beautiful singer.

Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Miller traveled East by automobile this summer, taking with them their two daughters, Miss Julia and Helen, and spent some weeks in Massachusetts, going from there to the mountains, and the seashore, but returned to their home last week for the rest of the fall. Miss Julia was left in Grafton, Mass. as a teacher in a school for Landscape Gardening, and will remain all winter.

Mr. James R. Garfield has made several business trips this year to old Mexico, in the interests of some of his clients who own rubber plantations down there in that turbulent country, and when remonstrated recently against going down again, confessed that he was arrested as a "spy" early in the summer, and imprisoned for several hours.

Charles Jackett has opened a fine store at the Center, where all kinds of school supplies are kept, all the leading magazines are on sale, and ice cream sodas roost as good as "Frank Smith used to put up," which always were the "best ever." After real cold weather comes on, Mr. Jackett plans putting in "hot drinks," such as chocolate, coffee, cocoa, etc. and has succeeded in his new place of attraction fully as well as he hoped, even though the paving business has cut off most of the automobile trade.

The Robert Case store at the Center has again changed hands, Mr. Porter on account of poor health, having decided to go into an easier business than that of running a general store, and is about to return to his old home in Pennsylvania. Some Willoughby man, whose name we have not yet heard, has purchased the stock, we understand, and will conduct still a first class grocery, making a specialty of certain lines.

Mrs. Robert Case is enjoying a visit from her mother, Mrs. June Lawrence whose home is in Buffalo.

Mrs. Della Reynolds Corning of Collinwood, is spending some weeks with her son, Mr. Frank Corning and other relatives and old friends.

Mrs. Helen Slish spent some time in Akron with her daughter, Mrs. Edward Parchall during the summer and was expecting to go down there again this month by automobile, but the trip has been given up on account of bad roads. Mrs. Slish is keeping house all by her lonesome during the absence of her daughter, Mrs. Sawyer and her husband.

Mrs. Will Hagenberger entertained at luncheon a few days ago in honor of her mother, Mrs. Amidon, the following old-time friends and "Campbellite Girls," Mrs. Almeno Tuttle Harrison of Painesville, Mrs. James McLaughlon of Dore, North Dakota, Mrs. Laverne Root Amidon of Los Angeles, Calif., Mrs. Rose Nye Doane and Miss Eleanor King and her sister of Mentor.

Mr. and Mrs. Severs of Chagrin Falls were guests of Mentor friends over Sunday, Mr. Severs preaching in the new church in the evening, and for the first time since moving away, had a chance to see many of his old parishioners.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Andrews together with their son, Horace, are expecting to leave here for their winter in the South, before very long now. Mr. Andrews owns a very desirable piece of property in the edge of the Everglades, not far from Miami, Florida, and intends building a house for a winter home down there, we understand.

Mr and Mrs. John Elsasser also plan leaving here for Southern Florida, sometime in October, and the Woodford home will be closed until spring, unless sold before that time, as it is still on the market.

The twenty acres of land belonging to the Frank Murray farm near the M. E. Church, has just been bought by T. D. Morley, who (rumor says) will form it into a new allotment before very long. The Murray house and other buildings, together with two acres of land, has been sold to some Cleveland party, by Mr Frost who is the executor of the estate.

The Missionary societies of the Methodist church met a few days ago when the following officers were elected President, Miss Jeannette Munson; Vice Pres., Mrs. William Edey; Secretary, Mrs. Christiana Johnson, Treasurer Home Society, Mrs Church; Treasurer Foreign Society, Mrs. Morley; Temperance Secretary, Mrs. Harris; Secretary Literature, Miss King. The meeting this week is to be held with Mrs. William Eddy.

The West Mentor Hardware Co. has enlarged their store by some thirty feet and having a large line of goods are doing a thriving business.

Mrs. Maria Curtiss Dunkledorf, from some place in Iowa, has been the guest of her brother, Mr. Sam Curtiss at the Center, for some days, and also is visiting her Warren and Rexford relatives in this county.

The Food Sale held by the W. C. T. U. ladies at the two ends of the village on Saturday afternoon, cleared about twelve dollars, in spite of the cold drizzle that fell most all day. All their things to eat were wonderfully good, but we heard several voice the cry of Bob Burdette "Oh, for more pie!"

The cottage on South Center St. owned by Harry C. King has recently been sold by real estate dealer Robert Case, to a party from Cleveland named Cartwright, who moved down and took possession one day last week.

Miss Alice Woodford has been secured as dietitian at Lake Side hospital, Cleveland, and has entered upon her duties. Miss Alice graduated from the Boston Domestic Science school last June, and has taken "honors" from other schools of the Pacific Coast, also from that of Chautauqua a year ago, so that she is unusually well equipped for this position at Lakeside. Mentor villagers always feel personally elated, when any of their own folks climb to the top of the ladder.

Another of our successful young people is George Sawyer, who graduated in June a year ago from Case School, and is now a chemist in the Arco Mfg. Co. in Cleveland, and was at home over Sunday with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Will Sawyer.

We feel to thank the Editor of this paper for his kind words expressed in the "Note" at the head of last week's Mentor letter, and also the very many friends who have said nice things to us about taking up the "quill" again, after more than a year's vacation. Without appreciation and loving words, who would care to live?

Rheumatism and Allied Pains—They Must Go!

The congestion of the blood in its flow causes pain. Sloan's Liniment penetrates to the congestion and starts the blood to flow freely. The body's warmth is renewed; the pain is gone. The "man or woman who has rheumatism, neuralgia or other pain and fails to keep Sloan's Liniment in their home is like a drowning man refusing a rope." Why suffer? Get a bottle of Sloan's. [illegible]

FOR INDIGESTION

Never take pepsin and preparations containing pepsin or other digestive ferments for indigestion, as the more you take the more you will have to take. What is needed is a tonic like Chamberlain's Tablets that will enable the stomach to perform its functions naturally. Obtainable everywhere.

Madison Home

T. E. Davey, Columbus, member of the State Board, and daughter, Mrs. E. McEwen of Cleveland, were guests at dinner recently.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Robinson of Cleveland, and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Fuheley of Ashtabula, visited Mrs. Eliza Hodges.

C. V. Case, wife, daughter, and Miss Edn Case of Ashtabula, Mr. Greene, C. J. Scott and wife of Painesville, and Floyd V. Scott, Battle Creek, Mich., visited Mrs. Mary Packard.

Gerry Gulsewita of Painesville, called to see his aunt, Elfenia Sossaman.

Mrs. E Grove of Collinwood, visited her mother, Parmelia Grove.

Mrs. James Morton, Uhrichsville, Ohio, and Miss Gertrude White, Columbus, brought to the Home a new member, Mrs Talitha Laizure.

Rev. Jones, wife and daughter, of Madison, and Mrs. Sarah Williams of Youngstown, made a pleasant visit at the Home and entertained the members with music.

Other callers were Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Allen, Ravenna, H. V. Middleton, Texas; Myra L. Williams, Abbie Hudson, Florence Emma Scott, Mrs. C. J. Scott, Louise Howard, Ruth Greene, Painesville; Sarah E. Hough, Kingsville; G. W. Dillon, Orwell; Miss Edith Dillon, Mrs. James Sanderson, Miss Frieda Zonder, Madison; Miss Ubersax, Mrs. Lillian R. Smith, Past Department President Ladies of the G. A. R., and Mabel Ransom, Cleveland.

Mrs. Eliza Hodges returned from several days' visit with her niece in Ashtabula.

Mrs. C. Harman and Mrs. C. Storm made a pleasant visit in Willoughby.

Mrs. Clara Johnson, Mrs. Ottetia Hicks, Mrs. Kate Greene and Mrs. Bianca Hickok are still on furlough.

Mrs. Emogene N. Marshall, Matron, returned on the 8th from a two weeks vacation. She attended the National G. A. R. Encampment at Washington D. C., from there she made the trip to Fredericksburg, visiting old battlefields, then on to Richmond, Va., in and around that city was all contested ground, visited Belle Isle where her brother was a prisoner for several months. Thence to Petersburg, to Norfolk and across Elizabeth River to Portsmouth and viewed the many battleships, visited the battleship Delaware which was in Dry Dock, as also the Vermont, for repairs, also viewed the two German battleships which are being held, not as hostage, but as entering forbidden territory. They were being chased by the British, and to escape their foe, entered the three mile limit, hence are being held until the war ends. One of these battleships is the one which sank our boat Frye. From Norfolk the trip was extended to Old Point Comfort and Hampton Roads. She visited the National Soldiers Home at Hampton, Va. where she was surprised to have a comrade step up and call her by name and learned he formerly was a member of the State Soldiers Home at Sandusky, where he had met her. While at Old Point Comfort, visited the famous Fortress Monroe, the largest and most important of the coast defenses of our country. The rampart walls and the girdling moat is a grand sight, enclosing fine parade ground. This fortress encloses 80 acres and covers nearly 200 acres, and is garrisoned by a large Artillery force. Its modern disappearing guns, breech loading mortars and rapid firing cannon are very interesting. This fortress also contains a Museum filled with interesting curios, relics and trophies of war that are well worthy of consideration. One will have acquired a much more intelligent understanding of the prestage and importance of the United States Army and Navy after visiting this great fortress.

Phyllis Cochran, familiarly known as Grandma Cochran, lately deceased, became a member of the Home October 18th, 1894, and had she lived till the 18th, would have been twenty-one years a member. She would have been 96 the 4th of November. Her memory was most excellent. She often recited stanzas or toasts, the following in particular:

TOAST TO THE FLAG

"No Stars beneath that grand old Flag,
Forever let it fly,
With lightning rolled in every fold and flashing victory.
God breathed his blessing around it,
And now all strife is done,
Let freedom's light that knows no night,
Make every Star a Sun."

Second toast as follows:

"Here's to you and your folks
And to me and my folks,
And if you and your folks
Like me and my folks
As well as me and my folks
Like you and your folks,
There never was folks,
Since folks was folks,
That liked folks
As well as you and your folks
Like me and my folks."

Mrs. Cochran's favorite conundrum:

Why is the emblem of America more lasting than that of France, England, Scotland and Ireland?
Because the Lily will soon fade and decay,
The Rose from its stem will sever,
The Thistle and the Shamrock will pass away,
But the Stars will last forever.

SOME STRAIGHT TALK ON PROHIBITION BY FORMER U. S. GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL

Hon. Royal E. Cabell, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 1909 to 1913, Makes Statement of Facts and Figures Which Every Voter in Ohio Might Well Ponder Before Casting His Vote on the Prohibition Question

SAYS U. S. GOVERNMENT RECORDS ARE OPEN AS PROOF TO ANY ONE WHO MIGHT DOUBT.

(By A. V. Abernethy, Columbus, Ohio.)

One of the most convincing statements that has yet been made on the prohibition question comes from Hon. Royal E. Cabell, United States Commissioner of Internal Revenue from 1909 to 1913. During his term in office he made a special personal investigation of conditions in prohibition states under the prohibition rule and in states where the liquor traffic is conducted under government regulations.

An interesting sidelight is, that when Mr. Cabell went into office he was reputed to be not in sympathy with the anti-prohibition forces, and that he came out of office convinced that the legalized liquor industry was preferable to the illicit traffic which follows every attempt at prohibition.

"When I was Commissioner of Internal Revenue from 1909 to 1913," says he, "I had charge of the administration of the federal laws relative to alcoholic beverages.

"Shortly before I became Commissioner a number of states in the southeast had adopted state-wide prohibition.

Made Impartial Study.

"The most troublesome question we had to deal with in the Internal Revenue Bureau was the enforcement of the federal laws in this prohibition territory, and it became necessary to study these various laws and their effects. Opportunity, therefore, was afforded me for an impartial comparison of conditions in such territory with the conditions in the states where alcoholic beverages are legally manufactured and sold."

When asked for some of his experiences in ferreting out the facts and just what conclusions he had come to, he said:

"My experience as Commissioner of Internal Revenue forced my judgment to these conclusions:

"First, that state-wide prohibition does not diminish the consumption of liquor in the area covered by such laws nor decrease intemperance.

"Second, that in many sections an actual increase in consumption is indicated.

"Third, that the business of the manufacture and sale of liquor passes from the hands of responsible persons into the hands of irresponsible persons, the baser and lower portions of the population, with a result that the vilest kind of liquor and liquor substitutes are manufactured and sold illegally, resulting in increased crime, the use of habit-forming drugs and an actual impairment of the social fabric.

"Briefly, some of the facts that led my judgment to such conclusion are these:

"First, the Internal Revenue records show that when state-wide prohibition is enacted in a state, the manufacturers simply go across into the nearest wet state from which there are advantageous transportation rates.

"And, further, if they do go out of business, the manufacturers in these and other states increase their business to include the production for the territory in which the manufacture is forbidden, and the increase in these neighboring states is as great or greater than the entire former output in the state that has gone dry.

"Second, the shipment to consumers in that territory is increased.

"Third, there are more persons illegally selling liquor in the so-called dry territory than there were lawful dealers when the regulated sale was permitted.

"Fourth, that there is an enormous increased illicit distillation."

U. S. Government Figures.

Mr. Cabell quoted a decision of Commissioner McChord, No. 1596, in which the Commissioner said:

"It was the spread of the prohibition movement that gave vitality to the mail order business in packages in this country. With state-wide prohibition came the interstate traffic in liquor. The proportions of the business throughout the country at the present time can not be estimated with any degree of accuracy, but figures presented by the Southern Express Company may be made the basis of a fair approximation. * * * The total annual movement indicated (by the records of this company) is 6,085,264 gallons. When it is considered that these shipments are almost entirely from three or four states in the southern part of the country, and that the traffic itself is country wide, it is not an extreme estimate that the entire volume of this traffic going entirely to consumers and not to dealers, is in excess of 20,000,000 gallons a year."

"Mind you," Mr. Cabell continued, "this enormous movement of 20,000,000 gallons of whiskey direct to consumers in prohibition territory by the express route alone in shipments of less than two gallons each, does not include the enormous amount annually handled through illicit dealers and the amount that goes by freight and innumerable other ways by which it is handled in dry territory.

Many Illicit Stills

"Now, consider briefly the next big factor, the illicit distillers and blind tigers," continued Mr. Cabell. "The total number of illicit distilleries captured in the entire United States in 1906 was 1,130. In 1913 it was more than double, reaching the enormous number of 2,375.

"The entire number of registered distilleries in the United States in 1913 was only 821. In other words, there were three times as many illicit distilleries captured as there were registered distilleries in operation. And the Lord only knows how many there were that were not captured.

"More than 80 per cent of the illicit traffic in liquors was in the so-called prohibition states.

"The worst feature connected with prohibition," declared Mr. Cabell, "is the blind tiger and the real question involved in prohibition is whether the regulated business is better than the blind tiger."

When asked for his opinion as a result of his findings, as to the best way to settle the liquor question, Mr. Cabell said:

Home Rule Best.

"The manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages, like the manufacture and sale of other articles of food or drink, must be dealt with in accordance with the fundamental principles of American institutions, that is, the people of each self-governing community must themselves decide as to whether or not the manufacture and sale shall be permitted in such community and, if permitted, what regulations shall be imposed on the business.

"There is no question but that the application of these time-honored principles constitute the solution of the liquor question.

"The voters of each self-governing unit shall decide whether or not liquor shall be made or dispensed with in said communities.

"Such action," declared he, "is in accord with the genius of Anglo-Saxon institutions.

"But when the voters of one self-governing community take on themselves, or assume to say, that in order to attempt to eliminate the abuse of an article of diet, they not only will prohibit its manufacture and sale in their community, but they demand the right to say that nowhere in other counties, some of which are empires in themselves, or in the entire state, shall this article be manufactured or sold.

"The voters who approve such a proposition abandon the foundation principles of our government.

Effects of Prohibition.

"The evils of drink lend themselves to lurid word-painting and emotional appeal and many honest and sincere men lend themselves to a movement which they believe may result in some benefit to certain of their fellow men, without stopping to consider that no policy can be sound which is founded on emotion and sentiment.

"They do not stop to consider that the prohibition theory is not a new thing; that it has been tried at one time or another in twenty-five states in the Union and that in the few at this time which have the laws in force, only in two or three, is there an effort made to enforce the law other than in spasmodic or periodical efforts for political effect.

"And instead of the millennial conditions promised, they have only substituted the blind tiger, the den and the dive for the regulated place of business. And, as a result, they have in those communities, where public sentiment does not sustain the law, a disregard for all law, intemperance increased, taxes increased, lawlessness increased, commercial disturbances, and worse than all of these, the idea prevalent and growing, that despotism is preferable to the freedom for which our fathers fought and died."

SYNOPSIS.

Kitty Gray arrives unknown in a little village and is mistaken for a husband-seeker, at which answer she does nothing to deny. She is met by Frederick Jedlaghy, who is the only man in the village who does not pursue the girl with matrimonial designs. Jedlaghy is a gentleman of leisure, who has taken up his residence in the village of the broken coin. Kitty

CHAPTER XXXIII.—BACK.

The Virtue of Necessity.

"Is it lawful?" cried Kitty Gray to herself as she ran down the steps and into Count Frederick's quarter-ship to the left of the main cabin.

But generosity also did beside. Kitty and Rinkey ran out forward and on deck then but to the rear of the car where they stopped. Amazed, they saw their friend struggling to the foot of the steps with a heavy burden.

"Mr. Rinkey," said the girl, "I'm afraid of the result but before there is any desperate chance I'm sure some displeasure would be." Up leaped Rinkey and the girl was not yet before he down and back upon the deck.

"There shall that be done, excellent Mademoiselle," he cried and ran into the cabin.

"I know it," said Kitty, as they hurried deeper into the car that they might not be seen by Count Frederick. "I'm afraid I'm a coward, but I'm not still sick enough to walk into our parlor."

She smiled herself for a moment and hastily wrote a few lines on a page of her note book, another on the other side.

"There!" she laughed. "I am sure a reader of Sherlock Holmes would say nothing even herself."

"We need to be on the guard!"

"Yes Rinkey, get him quick, give this to Jedlaghy, we will hurl from the drinking room near to the front door of the car, and I will take it and hand it to him."

But twice as they walked upward on the narrow and rain somewhat slippery passage-way, Kitty heard the step of the guard behind her and turned. Mr. Rinkey's transferring was such that a little time was lost, but he was at the door with us but half.

"It was the lady, I'm sure," he said hastily, seeing a few lines on a page of his note book, another on the other side.

Mothers!!

No one knows better than you how hard it is to keep little folks covered these cold nights.

Healthy youngsters will kick and tumble in their sleep and coverings will become disarranged.

How do you know, when you yourself are sound asleep, that your child is warm and comfortable.

Fresh air in the sleeping room is an important factor in the health of your child, so also is a sleeping garment that will protect it from exposure should the coverings become misplaced.

DR. DENTON SLEEPING GARMENTS meet every requirement in this respect.

They are made from unbleached cotton with a small percentage of wool. Unbleached cotton is used because in addition to being much warmer than bleached, the slightly mottled neat-white tint is much more practical than pure white as it does not readily show soil, an important point as children often run about in them before going to bed and often wear them to breakfast.

Enough wool is used to make them warm, but not enough to cause them to irritate the delicate skin.

The little hands and feet may both be enclosed, and should the bedclothes be removed entirely the little bodies would still be warm and comfortable.

Plans Gradually Taking Shape For Biggest Hallowe'en Show

Talk about Hallowe'en! Wherever you go, wherever you go, anywhere and everywhere, you hear the same thing. A massed band of over 100 pieces will head the maskers and old Main street buildings will vibrate and nod assent to this gigantic and novel celebration.

The Euclid Military band, the Cleveland Crane and Engineering Co. band, the Willoughby Military band and the Citizens' band of Painesville will give a massed concert on the park at 6 o'clock p. m. and then head the vast throng of merrymakers. The celebrated Imatra band of Fairport will give a concert in which they will render two selections renowned the world over, namely "Finland" and "A Night in June." The later selection is filled with emotion and M. Hietanan, the leader, will tell the story of how it came to be composed. The line of march will have to be lengthened to avoid doubling up. The prizes will be displayed in the windows of each merchant giving same this week and everyone should look at them so they can see what they are going to win.

Main street and the park will be roped off at 6:30 and no automobiles will be allowed to stand on the line of march, which will be down Main street to State, down North State to Erie, up Erie to Mentor avenue, up Mentor avenue, to the college, back down Mentor avenue, around the north side of the park and down Main to State and the automobiles and floats will again go down North State and disband and the maskers will countermarch and go back up Main street and then the fun and dance on the pavement will begin. During the dance two gypsies, Prince Riga and Princess Chimay will give the very latest dance. It is up to you to have all the innocent fun you want. Any roughness or disorderly conduct will be promptly stopped so don't try it.

The automobiles and floats will form on Liberty street with the autos in front and these will head and lead the procession. All maskers will form on the South side of the park and Director of Service Martin A. Tuttle will have two extra arc lights placed on the south side of the park to accommodate the maskers. Don't forget to do your trading early so the merchants and clerks can join in the festivities.

Willoughby Citizens Oppose The High Level Bridge

The Willoughby vote for a High Level Bridge will not be anything like a unanimous vote in favor of the proposition, and if former Probate Judge Clark is right the opposition vote in Willoughby will be very heavy.

Judge Clark said to a Herald reporter in Willoughby this week:

"They are deceiving you people down at Painesville when they say that Willoughby wants a high level bridge. That so-called 'Chamber of Commerce' trip over the county did not represent the sentiment in Willoughby, but some of the men who posed as members of the Chamber of Commerce, have some land to sell to the county to be included in the damages paid for the new highway bridge. Only a few persons, and they financially interested in the deal, are boosting for a high level bridge at Willoughby."

A very well known Willoughby merchant is also opposing the $225,000 bond issue, and says it is a very extravagant expenditure. He says that it is also an unnecessary expenditure and that the same amount of money will pay the county's share for 30 miles of paved roads.

Another Willoughby business man said, "Well the bridge matter is considered a joke, but if the rest of the county wants to make us a present of $225,000 all right. I'm willin'."

The People vs. the Special Interests

To the Readers of The Commoner:

Another fight is on between the people and the special interests, and the democratic party is the only party in position to take the people's side. Ex-President Roosevelt is bellowing for war. He wants this nation to enter the present conflict, and his chief adviser, Geo. W. Perkins, is identified with the steel trust which is ready to furnish the preparedness. Ex-President Taft, who has the support of all the trusts that are not supporting Mr. Roosevelt, wants to increase the army and navy appropriations one hundred and fifty millions (60 per cent) so that we shall be able to join Europe in future wars—that is the plan of his "League to ENFORCE Peace."

Both Roosevelt and Taft are protectionists—they believe in taxing the many for the benefit of the few, and preparedness gives an excuse for raising the tariff. The democratic party took the side of the people against the tariff barons; it took the side of the people against the trust magnates and it took the side of the people against Wall street—the real money power back of both tariff barons and trust magnates.

Now a new power has arisen in the land and demands control of the taxing power. It is the preparers of preparedness—the battleship builders and the manufacturers of munitions. They have been making enormous profits supplying the belligerent nations with fighting material, but the European war must end some time—not as long as these human vultures can keep it going—but SOME TIME, and what will these concerns do for watermelon like dividends then? There is only one way to insure their continued prosperity: they must lash this country into a state of chronic fear, and then coin the fear into dollars. They already have their subsidized organs setting up a false standard of national honor—the duelist's standard; they are glorifying brute force. They are transplanting upon American soil the European tree of hatred which is bearing its bloody fruit across the Atlantic.

No time is to be lost; immediate action is necessary. Congress will soon meet, and when it meets this issue will confront it. Write to your congressman—write to both your senators. Tell them that this nation does not need burglars' tools unless it intends to make burglary its business; it should not be a pistol-toting nation unless it is going to adopt pistol-toter's ideas.

Don't let the jingoes confuse the issue. It is not a question of defense; this country will defend itself if it is ever attacked and if that time ever comes the common people will furnish the soldiers—those who fight when the country needs fighters and work when the country needs workers; the jingoes will be too busy making army contracts and negotiating usurious war loans to go to the front. The preparedness now demanded will provoke war instead of preventing it. Peace among nations, as among individuals, rests upon friendship and good will, not upon force or fear. Try threats and ultimatums on your neighbors and see how they work, and then you will understand the diplomacy that has reddened the pages of history and delayed the coming of universal brotherhood. Write—and write NOW.

REV. HOWARD RESIGNS

Pastor of Congregational Church Will Remove to Minneapolis

Rev. E. Lee Howard, pastor of the First Church in Painesville, tendered his resignation at the services last Sunday morning, and announced that he had been called to pastorate of a large congregation in Minneapolis, Minn. The Painesville church will release Rev. Howard with much regret, but his new field is so much larger and full of greater opportunities that it would be an injustice to refuse his request for favorable action on the resignation.

Rev. Howard has been in Painesville for five years, and has made many friends here who believe that his departure will be a great loss to the city. He is a young man, an untiring worker, and an eloquent speaker. He has been a courageous fighter for what he believed to be right and the Herald hopes that in his new location he will obtain proper recognition of the natural abilities that are wasted in a small place like the present location. Rev. Howard is a man big enough to occupy a place among the eminent pulpit orators of the country.

The legal squirrel season ends Wednesday, Oct. 20. Squirrels were numerous this year and many have been killed. City hunters have been numerous as usual. The legal rabbit season opens Nov. 1, and ends Jan. 1.

Attacked by Tramps

John Cooper of Fairport Harbor, went to Ashtabula, Saturday, returning to this city in the evening on a Nickel Plate freight train. In the car with Cooper were two or three tramps who attacked him just east of this city. A small sum of money was taken from him after he had put up a stiff fight in which he was badly beaten about the head and one of his hands was badly bruised.

When just this side of the Nickel Plate bridge near Bank street the tramps pushed Cooper from the door of the car. This took place about 8 o'clock in the evening. The fall from the car and the roll down the...

Harry M. Landphair of this city, and Fred D. Gray of Cleveland, have leased the Joseph Schiappacasse block on Main street where they will open a general grocery and meat market, Wednesday, October 20. The block was formerly occupied by C. F. Durr who operated a 5 and 10 cent store.

NEW PAVEMENT

Will be the Connecting Link Across Lake County from the Cuyahoga to Ashtabula County Line.

At a special meeting of the Painesville city council last Wednesday a resolution was adopted to pave the road across the East Main street flats, up cemetery hill and to the corporation line. At the same time the County Commissioners agreed to pave that portion of Painesville township on the same road connecting with the Perry concrete road about two miles east of Painesville.

When completed this will give a continuous paved road from the city of Cleveland across Lake county to Unionville, located on the Ashtabula county line.

Diverging from this main road is a road from Madison village to the south end of Madison township and to be extended into Geauga county to Thompson. Running north from Madison village a concrete road has already been built that crosses the Middle Ridge road at Genung's corners, and the North Ridge road at North Madison, continuing north almost to the township park on the lake.

Again diverging from the Main road across the county will be a road north into Perry and from there, two paved roads to the north ridge. At Painesville a new paved road will lead to Fairport and the Lake.

At Willoughby there has been built two paved roads in Cleveland and one to the top of Kirtland hill.

The next important route to be paved in Lake county is the road to...

Valuable Improvements For North Painesville

Amendments made by last legislature to the County Road law permit the County to pay part of the cost of constructing pavements upon County Roads within the cities. Lake County Commissioners have taken advantage of that law and will help pave North St. Clair Street, North of the N. Y. Central Railroad, and East Main street within the city limits upon the request of the City council. This proposition is no more than just to the City, as heretofore, the City has been contributing its share of the taxes for the construction of the County Roads outside of the City but the law did not permit any part of the County funds to be expended for the construction of paved roads within the city. The proposition to pave North St. Clair Street is of especial benefit to the residents of that part of the city in another way. It makes it necessary to construct sewers on North St. Clair Street in advance of this pavement. These sewers must have their outlet in the proposed Sanford Street sewer. The City Council has moved promptly in the matter and has already passed the preliminary legislation for the construction of the Sanford Street Sanitary Sewer. This sewer will have its outlet in the new Richmond St. sewer which was constructed in 1914, and will extend the whole length of Sanford street. It will be constructed as main trunk sewer of adequate size to eventually carry the sewage not only from Sanford street itself, but from North St. Clair, Owego, Starrs, Henry, Elm, Oak and Fobes Streets. Resolutions have already...

...of the city which lies north of the N. Y. Central Railroad and for the betterment of Sanitary conditions on those streets. The conditions upon Elm Street have been especially bad for some years and the Board of Health has repeatedly endeavored to solve the problem of Sanitary conditions there. As soon as this main sewer which covers the three streets above mentioned, (Sanford, Starrs and Elm) is completed, Council will be in position to provide for the construction of sewers upon Owego, Oak and Fobes streets, as soon as the property owners on those streets wish the same.

The paving of East Main street also brought up at once the question of Sanitary Sewers for the East Side. The Council have directed the City Engineer to prepare the necessary plans. Inasmuch as these sewers will require a separate outlet from the other sewer systems of the city, it is necessary that the plans be submitted to the State Board of Health for approval before the construction of the sewers is undertaken. City Engineer Downer will have the plans completed within a short time and will at once forward them to Columbus for approval.

It is the hope of the city administration that the necessary legislation for the construction of these various sewers can be pushed through rapidly and actual construction be begun shortly after New Years, so that the work can be completed in time for the pavements to be laid in the Spring. There would be another advantage in pushing this work during...

TWISTED HISTORY

Has about the war such Spain Was this country in sing Dewey from Spain and did we go to war Down in self-defense? Just a lot of Spain's land we took Spain in order to help the people of Cuba. We thought they were wronged. Remember Maine.

History with a vengeance, that. At the very moment war was declared against Spain state department officials had on their desks a request from Spain agreeing to give to Cuba all that she obtained in a month of the war. People generally imagined we went to war with Spain to "help Cuba." The facts are that we went to war with Spain to get Philippines, to secure naval outposts, to secure a foothold in the East. The war was an imperialistic project. Imperialist leads is nothing new. The city of millionaires is proportionately rich millionaires are planning for the people of this country, and people should see to them. The country that issued the hankoff for that war is today calling for leaders for large ships, big forts and big generals. Jeffersonian Democrat.

WHY BATTLESHIPS

Switching of War Dreadnaughts into commission for Atlantic duty right. Let the news go before the people. Three hundred million dollars—or three hundred million for good uses—is the expenditure. Shall we spend the money for battleships that will be obsolete in ten years as well as great if the project is contemplated? Or shall we spend it for schools? We think the people of this country, if they know the facts, would spend it for schools. We think they would prefer to spend the money for the purpose of encouraging agriculture and would see it so adopting the idea. There are a thousand uses for the money. If we spend $300,000,000 for battleships, we are throwing the money away. We are building a great navy to protect the property of people who are building similar navies. And when there are enough Dreadnaughts to sink the great war navy.

What a hard there would go up from Wall street if the secretary of agriculture were to demand an increase of $300,000,000 in his appropriation. All the metropolitan papers would declare about you by our political. They would charge the administration with attempting to purchase the agricultural vote. If the secretary of labor were to ask for $300,000,000 he would be accused of bribery, of scheme to subsidize the workers of the land. But when the secretary of the navy announces that he will need $300,000,000 the metropolitan press immediately hails that official as a real patriot.

AS LOWELL SAW IT

Guess how many of it's goods Trusts? round in labial center— But it's curse Christian deeds. Thus 'em coins' fallow' threats.

—James Russell Lowell.

If the author must ever stand in order to command respect and to secure independence, it is equally the duty of the citizen thus to apply himself. For how can he make his person his master and prompt the respect of his neighbors? If they not certain eternally to undermine his independence and to treat him with contempt? Hence, nothing is more important than that he should have a capitalist to be independent. They seem to think there are two codes of morality—one for friends the citizen to do so an infinite, that which he is entitled to do as a member of the social body. He must not sure himself in order to command respect among his neighbors. He must gain that end some by an orderly life, by honorable conduct, by respecting the rights of others, by avoiding that which tends to provoke suspicion or to excite opprobrious among those with whom he is thrown. But as a member of the great body politic he must equip himself, for one way, but for defense and the want do it. Every man capable of it ought to make himself a factor in the city, state or nation. He ought to make himself a factor in the affairs of his country. He ought to make himself a factor in the affairs of his country. He ought to make himself a factor in the affairs of his country

Democratic Neutrality

Editor Herald.

As we survey the field of blood and carnage that is today devastating all Europe, we turn with tear filled eyes and a mind sad in contemplation to scan a much mooted Neutral field at home, to view a nation neutral in name only for the supplying of countless millions of money and the unrestricted manufacture and shipment of death dealing implements and missles of human destruction is their much mooted Christian neutrality. When those phantoms of hypocrisy appeared, Bryan fled in horror from that undemocratic field. In Mexico our poor neighbor an embargo checked the flow of human blood but the lure of golden glitter and the English tongue tore down those bars to Europe and today the blood is flowing from the wounds of American shells that are helping to fill Europe with orphans, widows, cripples and graves. To the thoughtful mind gifted with a fair modicum of moral discernment, it is evident that there is something rotten in the state of Denmark. The question is, will the elector O. K. this human slaughter or will they place their stamp of disapproval upon this sham democratic neutrality in November next, and thereby teach their servants that are holding an elective office that the field is not tenable and dangerous to be trod.

Ohio

Ohio, dear state of my birthplace,
Fair daughters of eighteen aught three,
Our child of the grand old Union
How fair are thy landscapes to me.

With your valleys and winding rivers,
With your buckeye trees on the hills,
Your sunny grass grown meadows,
Where hickory nuts grow by the rills.

On the north you are washed by old Erie
Where Perry the great victory won
And the spirit that won him the battle,
Is wafted to father and son.

On the south is the staid old river,
Once crossed by the runaway slave
To gain the free air of your valleys
And the refuge so freely you gave.

East and westward you hold by the hand
Two sisters both loyal and true
Lead onward and upward Ohio
For many are looking toward you!

How many brave men you've been rearing,
For some have been first in the land;
Like you they feared only the One Great King
And they served under His command.

When the old Union called for assistance
You sent forth your bravest and best,
Now many, yes, most of these veterans
Have fallen asleep on your breast:

There to lie on some sloping hillside
In the wavering sun and shade,
Neath the tranquil blue of the heavens
Where your children at last are laid.

Ohio my beautiful home state
May thy stars on Old Glory e'er be
The brightest, the purest, the firmest
Is my heart's best wishes for thee.

Old Ohio how grand is thy record
Our hearts swell with pride at thy name
O let not November's election,
Bring to us "Thy First Great Shame."

While on a vacation I was much interested in meeting an agent for a magazine. "Just watch me get this woman to subscribe," said the agent as we approached a farm house. He said to her: "Madam, you'd better subscribe for this magazine; costs you only ten cents a year, and every new subscriber gets a life insurance policy, a bicycle, a mushroom hat, a bottle of Finnigen's oil of joy, and a popular novel." "Not me," said the woman, "I've just subscribed for another magazine and it gave me a 'God Bless Our Home' motto, a kitchen range, some fly paper, a rainy day skirt, an ice pick, a picture of Edward Bok crossing the Delaware in a gilt frame, and sent me to California for the winter. No, young man, you'll have to offer better inducements if you mean to do business here."

What You Cannot Do

For the guidance of the business man who wants to make his sales plans square with the law, the following are the types of schemes that he may not do: He cannot give out tickets or other slips for any drawing at which the holder of the "lucky number" becomes entitled to anything of value. It matters not that he makes free distribution of the tickets or scatters them from the housetops. The vice is in the fact that the articles are to be awarded by chance. He cannot hold any guessing contest, such as guessing how long a clock will run, or a candle burn, or how many beans there are in a jar, or how many kernels of corn a chicken will eat, or how many persons will enter the fair grounds on a given day. He cannot issue duplicate numbered buttons, distributing them to all who enter his store or by scattering them upon the street, and then offer to give certain prizes to the two persons who find or discover that each has a button bearing a similar number. He cannot announce that any gift will be made to the first ten, twenty or any other number of people who enter his store or any other place on any given time, or to the tenth, twentieth or fortieth purchaser of certain classes of goods. He must eliminate all elements of chance if he wants to keep within the law.

San Francisco, Cal.—While San Francisco acknowledges Atlanta, Ga.'s claim, that its women have the smallest and prettiest feet in the world, it asserts that the legs of San Francisco girls are the shapliest. Physical directors of the public schools say the graceful carriage and the shapely forms of the San Francisco girls are due to the hilly streets of the coast city.

A Sermon on Noah

Ma text dis mornin' Breddern, am took from da Holy Writ, wharein we read how Noah made de Ark an' fashioned it; he built de Ark ob gopher wood, an' used a cubit rule, while all de knockers sat aroun' an' cussed him fo' a fool; de local anvil chorus, dey jes' sat aroun' an' spat terbaccer juice upon his wood, an' mocked him jes' lak dat, an' sez "Whafoah yo' makin' dis hyah boat foah on dry lan'? Yo' all a-thinkin' maybe, dat yo'-all's a sailah man?"

But Noah paid no 'tenshun, ner allowed he heard dem croaks, but jes' minded his own business, lak all good and proper folks; when dey read de weddah fo'cast—"Mild; continnered warm an' fair," ole Noah went on buildin', an' allowed He didn't care.

But one day de weddah shifted; de barometer done fall, an' de rain came down in torrents—rained fo' fo'ty days—dat's all; an' de knockers an' de croakers drowned jes' lak so many rats, which was jes' what dey had commin'—nothin' lef' excep' dey hats'.

An' de moral ob dis story, Breddern, hit am writ quite plain, dat whenevah knockers tell yo' dey ain't gwine ter be no rain, jes' go ahead lak Noah, an' don't let 'em get yo' goat, an' some day you'll have lak Noah, de higgest show afloat.

Benry Wilson, a well-known former resident of Mentor avenue in this city and of Concord, died Wednesday Oct. 13 at 2:30 p. m. at the home of his daughter, Mrs. E. M. Hines, 10907 Churchill avenue, Cleveland. Mr. Wilson was very well known in Lake county where he was highly respected. Dr. George H. Wilson formerly of this city, is a son. Dr. Wilson, who is now located in Maryland, was called to Cleveland by the illness and death of his father.

LOCAL NEWS

The oldest inhabitant cannot recall a more ideal "Indian summer" than that of the past week.

With upward of 20 cider mills working overtime, Holmes county should worry about any wet and dry election.

The Leroy macadam road which has been undergoing extensive repairs was again opened for travel Saturday night.

E. C. Morrison, formerly of Cleveland, passed away Sunday afternoon at the home of his niece, Mrs. George Reade, Johnnycake Ridge, aged 83 years.

The road laws of every state should provide for compulsory road education of county commissioners, township trustees, county engineers, and road supervisors, and for an annual school of instruction.

W. J. Bryan will close a weeks campaign in Ohio, at Cleveland next Saturday night. Mr. Bryan is advocating Prohibition for Ohio, and is speaking to large audiences wherever he goes. A large delegation will go from Painesville to attend the Cleveland meeting.

The time has come for a general forward movement for improved roads—roads built and maintained under a general uniform plan, roads to be paid for by all who derive benefits or pleasure therefrom, so that all signs will point to a good road everywhere.

Strong guards have been placed around the Penfield shops at Willoughby, according to the Cleveland Plain Dealer. This factory has a large order for ammunition supplies to be shipped to England, and it is feared that some German crank will dynamite the factory. The Penfield's are probably for "Preparedness."

No one, from the candidate for election to the hucksters and rural mail carriers, can complain of the condition of the roads during this "Indian summer" weather. The clay roads and by-ways are almost as hard and smooth as pavement, and while Lake county roads are always good, they are now at their best for travel.

The old-time politicians and "party boosters" yearn for the days of caucuses and mass conventions, now that election day is drawing near and there is no excitement to speak of. "Primaries and nominating by petition have knocked all the fireworks out of campaigners," was the comment of one old party worker, the other day.

Over in the vicinity of Conneaut, Ohio, more big yellow pumpkins have been raised this year than probably in any other section of the state. Touring parties passing through Conneaut and vicinity cannot help but comment on the sight of many fields literally covered with the yellow vegetables, as well as many wagons loaded and being shipped to the markets elsewhere.

Mrs. Cornelia R. Perine, aged 73 years, an old and highly respected resident of Mentor avenue, passed away Sunday evening. Mrs. Perine has been in ill health for some time but her fatal illness dates from last Wednesday. Mrs. Perine was born in Youngstown but made Painesville her home for many years. Her husband, the late Thomas L. Perine, died several years ago.

The improvement of East Madison Ave. by paving, relaying the sidewalks and guttering, is looked forward to with satisfaction by residents of the East Side and vicinity of Painesville. A. J. White, superintendent of the County Infirmary, who travels the thoroughfare daily to and from the city, suggests that the pavement should not be laid the full width of the street on the hill east of the river, but that a dirt strip should be left for horses and heavy teaming.

E. A. Murphy, Safety Director, is always interested in an election. In order to enlighten the voter, he has posted sample ballots at the places mentioned: Brewer's store, 2d ward; Cozad's store, 3d ward; Loomis & Kelly's store, Gleason's store, 4th ward; and at Malin & Son and Spillman's store in the first ward. Mr. Murphy says there should be a law requiring the posting of these ballots before every election, as the average voter is very much interested. There will be seven ballots to vote in Painesville.

HIGH LEVEL BRIDGE vs. GOOD ROADS

Is it Wise to Expend $225,000 for an Ornament and go Broke, or is it Better to have Good Roads and an Investment? Which?

It is proposed that Lake County bond herself for $225,000.00 and a tax sufficient to pay interest on this amount for the purpose of building a high level bridge across the Chagrin River at Willoughby. The question is, shall we do it? Can we afford it? Is it wise? Does Lake County need another MONUMENT?

It's up to the voters to decide these questions before next Tuesday. The bridge question is the big one in Lake County and should not be a matter for snap judgment. A few of us have looked up the facts and figures and we are against the high level bridge. Let us tell you why we stand opposed.

A MONUMENT NOT A NECESSITY

The bridge designed by the engineers is to be 1358 feet long, 65 feet high and to have a 30 foot roadway between curbs. In addition to this it is to have two sidewalks each six feet wide. The cost of construction is to be $185,000.00 the remaining $40,000.00 of the bond issue is to go for the necessary land, etc. It is stated that the bond issue has been placed high enough to take care of the "extras." Lake County is shy of "extras," so we grant this is true but still maintain that the whole proposition bristles with question marks.

Why two sidewalks six feet wide? Is this to be a bridge or a promenade? Why reinforced concrete when a steel viaduct would cost 20 per cent. less for the same plans. Twenty per cent of $185,000.00 is $37,000.00. Is this an insignificant sum? Why spend $225,000.00 on 1358 feet of roadway that is not extremely bad now and could be made good for one-twentieth of this amount, when the same amount would build miles of brick road?

Have you seen a picture of this beautiful structure that is proposed? It looks like a half-sister to our Court House and while one monument is good, do we need two? There are those who maintain that the whole second story of our court house should now be in good roads. Shall we lavish our wealth again, on one spot.

CAN WE AFFORD IT?

"Figures won't lie" is an old saw and probably true. Wonderful juggling stunts can be done with them, however, and that is what is frequently done. Here are some though, that are hard to juggle. Stand them on their heads, they look the same.

PRESENT BONDED INDEBTEDNESS OF LAKE COUNTY.

Bridges	$ 10,000.00
Court House and Jail	164,000.00
Agricultural Society	80,000.00
Various Roads	474,000.00
Total	$728,500.00

This is the face of the bonds and does not include interest which will average about 5 per cent. per annum or a yearly amount of $36,452.00. Shall we add $225,000 to this amount and bond ourselves for $953,500, nearly a million dollars, with an interest rate of nearly $50,000? Can we afford it?

The past year we have added $224,000.00 to our bonded indebtedness for good roads. Our tax rate for county purposes increased from 2.13 mills to 2.69 mills. Next year we will want to add more. Paving should go on. We need good roads. If we add a bridge bond issue now of $225,000.00 it will add .3 mills to our tax rate. For the same tax duplicate and the same appropriations our tax rate for county purposes would be 2.99 mills instead of 2.69 as it is this year.

LAKE COUNTY'S DUPLICATE

Here are the figures for the last few years. Note the increase in rate.

Year	Total Duplicate	Rate for County Purposes
1910	$16,398,260.00
1911	47,345,870.00	2.289
1912	50,122,320.00	2.289
1913	49,513,720.00	2.539
1914	53,213,330.00	2.13
1915	53,923,510.00	2.69
Next year, the limit		2.99

Mr. Taxpayer take a long look at these figures. Here is food for thought. Shall we make the building of more good roads a downright hardship, by being extravagant in the matter of this bridge?

WHO PAYS?

If this bond issue carries, a levy will be made against the entire county. Every man who pays taxes must contribute his share. Figured on just the face of the bonds alone the various taxing districts will contribute as follows, assuming that the duplicate remains about the same as at present:

Concord Township	$ 4,320.00
Kirtland Township	6,682.50
Leroy Township	2,700.00
Madison Township	13,477.50
Mentor Township	62,032.50
Painesville Township	19,687.50
Perry Township	9,787.50
Willoughby Township	33,120.00
Fairport Village	8,392.50
Madison Village	6,052.50
Mentor Village	9,067.50
Painesville City	31,702.50
Perry Village	2,925.00
Richmond Village	3,465.00
Willoughby Village	11,587.50
	$225,000.00

No effort has been made to figure the interest on these bonds for which the county also obligates itself. It is understood that forty year bonds are proposed in which case the interest will amount to as much as the bonds themselves.

WHAT THE COUNTY COULD DO WITH $225,000.00

It costs between $18,000.00 and $19,000.00 per mile to build concrete roads in this county. Brick roads can be built for between $26,000.00 and $27,000.00. In building an intercounty road such as the road between Painesville and Chardon, the State pays 50 per cent. of the cost, the county 25 per cent., the township 15 per cent. and the property owners 10 per cent. These figures may be varied but as a general thing run in the above way. For every mile then of concrete road the county would pay 25 per cent. or $4500.00 and for brick road $6500.00 per mile. On this basis $225,000 would build 50 miles of inter-county concrete road or 34 miles of brick road.

In building county roads the expense may be divided in a number of ways. The county however cannot be made to bear more than 50 per cent and may pay as low as 35 per cent of the entire cost. Taking the higher figure of 50 per cent, brick roads would cost the county $13,000.00 per mile and concrete $9,000.00 per mile. On this basis $225,000.00 would build over 17 miles of brick road or 25 miles of concrete. Which do you prefer, from 17 to 50 miles of pavement, or a high level bridge?

County officials have figured that it will be necessary to add .3 mills to the present rate to care for this bond issue should it pass. This on the present duplicate of $53,923,510.00 means an annual sum of $16,177.00. This alone would build outright nearly a mile of concrete road.

WHAT WILL MADISON DO?

From the table above you will note the Willoughby bridge will cost Madison Township and Madison Village $19,530.00 and double this amount, figuring interest. It is assessed with 35 per cent of the cost of the paved roads that have been built. A school bond issue of $50,000.00 is proposed for the purpose of building a centralized school which it needs. Will Madison bond itself for $69,530.00 in addition to what it already carries or will it apply bridge money to its schools? Is there any question as to what should be done?

WHAT OF WILLOUGHBY?

The total tax rate in Willoughby Village is 15.2 mills on the dollar. Where is Willoughby going to stop?

TWO MILES OF ROADS VS. A BRIDGE

Kirtland needs paved roads. The bridge will cost Kirtland township $6,682.00 a comparatively small amount. Yet this would be the township's share of a mile of county concrete road and two miles of inter-county road.

AND HOW ABOUT PAINESVILLE?

The high level bridge would cost Painesville City, $31,702.50 exclusive of interest. Is it worth it? Can the city afford it? The tax rate is now 15 mills on the dollar, $1.50 per $100.

It is admitted that the present Willoughby bridge is not wide enough and that there is a nasty kink in the approach to the bridge from the East. The grades are not bad, however, and at a very small expense could be made much better.

It has been estimated by civil engineers and county officials that a new bridge could be put in, raised seven feet clear across the valley, the road bed made wider, the hills cut down and sidewalks put in at an expense of $50,000. Some of these improvements, and in fact all the really necessary ones, could be accomplished at an expense of $10,000. Would this not be a more sensible program?

We are not against improvements. We want good roads. We have just come to the point where we look on them as a necessity. The question is, are we going to be judicious in the expenditure of our funds or are we going to go ahead blindly until Lake County can go no farther and we are still without roads?

We are opposed to the bridge for what in our opinion are good and valid reasons. We hope that the voters of Lake County will join us in defeating this measure.

Willoughby Township Citizens Committee,
J. F. CURTIS, Chairman.

A Small Taxpayer's View of the High Level Bridge at Willoughby

Editor Herald.

The present bonded indebtedness of Lake county is large. A number of roads in the county are almost impassable. The estimated cost of the bridge I understand is $225,000.00. The actual cost of an improvement of that value is generally double the estimate. I have been told the present bridge could be raised four feet and the road graded to make an easy grade and paved for $10,000.00. Would it not be much more advisable to adopt this latter course and improve more of our highways? I get my information concerning the raising of the present bridge from one of our county officials. We have at present two bridges, on the bonds for which we are still paying taxes and will be for many years. Our court house, which was to cost not over $90,000.00 ran up close to a half million. When we ask for road improvements we are told there are no funds. If we must have our taxes raised by an issue of a quarter of a million of bonds why not raise the present bridge and improve some more of our highways? Think of this Mr. Taxpayer.

Longer Terms for County Officials.

Editor Herald.

There are some reasons, perhaps, why the terms of County officials should not be extended, but after careful investigation and due consideration we are of the opinion that there are many things in favor of such an amendment to the constitution. It is true that such an arrangement would continue an inefficient and incapable person in office longer than otherwise. On the whole, however, and as a rule desirable persons, because capable and efficient, are selected as county officials. Once they have been elected and have been installed, it certainly is for the best interests of the county that its public officials should continue to serve for a reasonable time at least, and be permitted to devote their whole attention to their duties instead of thinking constantly of what must be done to secure a re-nomination and a re-election. Without doubt, a greater responsibility would rest upon the electors to choose clean, capable and efficient men for office, but under the present system of the primary as a means of nomination, no one need complain if suitable persons are not selected.

Common pleas judges are elected for terms of six years. Is it good business, then, to elect a prosecuting attorney and a clerk of the courts, being the servants of the court, every two years? It requires considerable time to become familiar with the intricate duties of the auditor's office. As conditions are at present, the auditor is being voted for for a second term, before he has been in office ten months. The constitution limits the sheriff and the treasurer to two terms of office. An efficient sheriff and a courteous accommodating treasurer could serve the county to its profit for longer periods. This is true of the office of recorder, surveyor and commissioner. Therefore, while there may be specific instances in which it is not to the best interests of the county to continue an officer in authority for a period longer than two years, yet, all things considered, the county would gain by the adoption of such an amendment, while being saved the expense of a primary election every two years, and materially cutting down the cost of a regular election every two years.

A TAX PAYER

Potato Blight

Potato prices are raising rapidly and local buyers are now paying from 75c to 80c per bushel for the best. It is predicted that potatoes will go to a dollar and over before the winter is over.

Several states, Michigan and Ohio especially, report poor crops this year.

Locally the crop is below the average, and several farmers in Perry township, it is said, have plowed under their potato fields because of no yield as a result of blight.

Foot Ball

If you are a foot ball fan and care for something real exciting be present at the Lake County Fair grounds Sunday, Oct. 31st, at 3 P. M. and witness the fast game between Rho-deltos of Cleveland, a well known team in that city and the S. E. A. C. of Painesville. The S. E. A. C. has one of the best teams ever made up in this part of the county. The team will be picked from the following list of foot ball players known in this vicinity: Mark Meredith, Harold Meredith, Jim Stafford, Merle Stafford, Glenn Moseley, Allen Prentice, Jay Mills, Bud Johnson, Ed. Johnson, Mugg Johnson, Jim Duncan, Delos McCool, Joe Fink, William Belch, F. Ward, Ralph Stranahan, Henry Stuart, Ed. Gunn, and a few others. Come and bring your friends and see something real good.

Malin for Mayor

The Herald has taken no side in the municipal election discussions, for the reason that we can not understand how any voter could oppose Fletcher D. Malin for Mayor. He has been a resident of Painesville all his life and has had experience in city affairs both as an executive and as a councilman. He is one of our largest taxpayers, he is a progressive, and his progressiveness both as mayor and as councilman has resulted in the many valuable public improvements made in Painesville in the last ten years. He gives to the city his services as Mayor at a great personal sacrifice in time and business, and it would seem to us to be very unwise to make a change, and especially so at this time when many of the improvements contemplated are only partially completed.

His republican opponent is a young man, a fine fellow, but inexperienced in municipal affairs, and he ought to take a freshman course on the city council before he aspires to the mayoralty.

The defeat of Mayor Malin is very improbable, but his friends and every tax payer interested in the welfare and growth of the city should help to make his majority a large one and show their appreciation of a business man who will give his time to this important office with such small compensation.

STATE WARDEN

Will be Asked to Re-stock Grand River With Fish

"Why is it that fish are not more plentiful in upper Grand river?" is a question that has puzzled local fishermen. Grand river is an ideal stream for fishing, and fish should be abundant in the many deep places between Cold Springs, Mechanicsville and Painesville. For the past two years, anglers say, but few good catches have been reported, and for some reason, fish, especially the small mouth bass and river pike, do not seem to thrive properly. Some good catches have been reported by local sportsmen of black bass and rock bass, but more desirable species are not to be found.

E. L. Cunningham, formerly deputy game warden of Lake County, and other local sportsmen, will endeavor to interest State Game Warden Jno. C. Speaks, in the matter of determining why fish are so scarce, and to restock the river with the kinds of species that will thrive best in this locality.

Lentz in Painesville

John J. Lentz, of Columbus, Ohio, addressed a large audience at Utopia theatre, Sunday night, speaking in behalf of the Prohibition amendment. Mr. Lentz is a former congressman and was a democratic candidate for U. S. Senator two years ago. Mr. Lentz says that the Liquor Traffic got his political goat several times and that is one reason he is out to clean up the traffic. He is one of the able men of Ohio and it is a pity such men cannot be kept in the public service. But more than one good man has gone down because he dared to oppose the liquor traffic.

George Rasmussen, aged 25 years, son of Captain N. M. Rasmussen of the Fairport life saving station and himself a member of the Cleveland Life Saving crew, was found dead on the New York Central tracks near Willoughby early Tuesday. At first the identity of Rasmussen was not known but later in the day his mother went to Willoughby and identified the remains. It was first supposed that young Rasmussen was struck by a train but later it was thought that he got knocked from a train on which he was riding to his home at Fairport, as it was his day off duty.

EFFORTS FAILED TO STOP EXECUTION

Americans and Spanish Ministers Worked Hard to Prevent Death.

SAID DEATH PENALTY WAS IMPERATIVE

Minister Whitlock Makes a Report of the Case—Life Sentences Given Nine Civil Guards.

London, England—Efforts of the American minister at Brussels, realizing that the case was hopeless, failed even to delay the execution of Edward Francisco Francisco, the young Cuban, the English author of the civil government under military authority for helping English, French and Belgian subjects to escape from Belgium.

Secretary Hugh S. Gibson left positive assurances from Count de Lalaing, the minister of foreign affairs in Belgium, that the sentence imposed would be kept fully informed of all developments in the case. This promise was renewed as late as 4 p. m. Friday, the night before the young Cuban was shot. It was learned that Francisco had written a letter to his mother in Cuba, that he was calm and that the nurse was to have dined during the night.

Secretary Gibson and the Spanish minister, Count de Lalaing, were present at the execution at Malines, according to the statement of Baron Von Der Lancken governor general of the military province of Belgium. The governor was not well enough.

They listened in consecutively with the minister of justice, Count Lippens, which Lancken explained. Thursday Secretary Gibson presented a strong plea for mercy for Francisco. The Spanish minister suggested and represented to the authorities that these appeals were made in the civil government of Belgium, and that the case was not in the military jurisdiction. Baron Blanken, the military governor, was in Brussels, and was told by telephone of the military decision, which was not well received.

There was no mercy shown. Sentence was passed on Francisco at 10 o'clock Friday morning, and he was shot at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Nine civil guards were also sentenced to death, but their sentences were commuted to imprisonment for life.

Baron Von Der Lancken said that Francisco had been in the civil service of the Belgian government since the occupation by the German forces, and was employed in the department of the interior. He was charged with having aided in the escape of Belgian and French officers and men who had been condemned to death by the military courts, and

TO PAINESVILLE VOTERS

If the Willoughby High Level bridge proposition wins, the share of the cost in Painesville township will be:

Painesville City	$31,702.50
Painesville Twp.	19,687.50
Fairport Village	8,392.50
Richmond Village	3,465.00
Total	$63,247.50

Add the interest on bonds, and the share of the cost to Painesville Township alone will be around $100,000.00.

We believe that this proposition should be voted down in Painesville township by an almost unanimous vote, and it is remarkable that any body of voters has the nerve to even submit such a proposition for a vote.

Fairport village is now so short of funds that a high school has been abandoned and there is serious consideration of shortening the school term to six months.

Painesville city now has a tax rate of $1.50 on the $100 of valuation and it is by the most careful economy that money can be raised for public service and safety funds, and a bond issue is required for every new addition to public comfort.

In the matter of road improvements Willoughby township has already had more money from the county than any other township. It has two brick paved roads from Willoughby across the entire length of the township, another paved road runs from Willoughby to Kirtland, and still another just completed on the Arnold road.

How has Painesville township fared? We have one paved road barely three miles in length. We need paved roads to Richmond, Fairport and south on the Chardon road. We will have difficulty in getting these new roads if we vote $100,000 for the ornamental, but useless high level bridge at Willoughby. The advice of the Herald to Painesville township voters is to vote down the bridge bonds and then get busy and go after at least a share of the paved roads that are being handed out in other townships of the county. Painesville township pays nearly a third of the county taxes. Why spend it nearly all in Willoughby township?

Section 3. That the plans, specifications, estimates and profiles of the proposed improvement heretofore prepared by the City Engineer and now on file in the office of the Director of Public Service be and the same are hereby approved.

Section 4. That the entire cost of said improvement, less one-fiftieth thereof and the cost of intersections, and necessary outlets, shall be assessed in proportion to the benefits which may result from the improvement upon the following described lots and lands, to-wit: All lots and lands bounding and abutting upon said proposed improvement, which said lots and lands are hereby determined to be especially benefited by said improvement, and the cost of said improvement shall include the expense of preliminary and other surveys, of printing and of publishing the notices, resolutions and ordinances required, the serving of said notices, the cost of construction, together with the interest on bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of deferred assessments, and all other necessary expenditures.

Section 5. That the assessments so to be levied shall be paid in ten (10) semi-annual installments, with interest on deferred payments at five (5) per cent per annum; provided that the owner of any property assessed may at his option pay such assessments in cash within sixty (60) days from and after the passage of the assessing ordinance, in which case said cash assessment shall not include any item of interest upon bonds to be issued in anticipation of the collection of deferred installments of assessments.

Section 6. That bonds of the City of Painesville shall be issued in anticipation of the collection of assessments and in an amount equal thereto.

Section 7. That the remainder of the entire cost of said improvement not specially assessed, including the cost of intersections, and necessary outlets, shall be borne by the City at large and shall be paid by the issuance of bonds in the manner provided by law.

WHEN BABY HAS THE CROUP

When a mother is awakened from sound sleep to find her child who has gone to bed apparently in the best of health struggling for breath, she is naturally alarmed. Yet if she can keep her presence of mind and give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy every ten minutes until vomiting is produced, quick relief will follow and the child will drop to sleep to awaken in the morning as well as ever. This remedy has been in use for many years with uniform success. Obtainable everywhere.

Mayor Malin's Adminstration

Has Been One of Progress and Achievement for Painesville.

Here are some of the things that have been accomplished during his term of office:

The Water Works Filtration Plant and Pumping Station have been completed and put in successful operation.

The Ornamental Lighting System has been installed. The River Bank Improvement made. Richmond Street sanitary sewer rebuilt, a portion of Liberty Street sanitary sewer rebuilt.

Storm Sewers built on Liberty Street, Lusard Street, Richmond Street and Jackson Street, and on private right of way to Marion Ave., taking in the Tiber River, and thereby doing away with a nuisance of long standing. Sanitary sewers have also been built upon Jefferson Street, West Prospect Street, Marion Avenue, Charlotte and Litmore Streets.

Liberty Street has been paved. Lusard Street has been paved. East South Street and a section of Walnut Avenue are now being paved.

Wilcox Hill has been cut down and West High Street improved with concrete curb and gutters.

Water mains have been laid upon North State Street, Sanford Street, Astell Avenue, Marion Avenue and Charlotte Street.

More than ten miles of concrete sidewalks have been completed.

The addition to Evergreen cemetery has been laid out and is now being graded and improved.

An addition to the Electric Light Plant which will more than double its capacity is now in progress and will be completed before the year ends.

Miles of electric light lines have been built and more than five hundred new customers added to the plant.

DURING MAYOR MALIN'S TERM IN OFFICE

We have had Clean Streets, Pure Water, Better Street Lighting, Laws and Ordinances Fairly Enforced.

The street flushing system has been installed.

All public work has been completed within the estimated cost, except the Water Filtration Plant which was estimated and contracts made before Malin became Mayor and in the construction of which unforeseen conditions arose necessitating increased cost.

PROHIBITION AND PROSPERITY.

There was a Prohibition parade in Chicago on October 9 in which, among other signs was the following carried by an enthusiastic clergyman from Oklahoma:

"Missionary from saloonless Oklahoma to saloon-cursed Chicago."

If that clergyman participates in any more Dry parades in "saloon-cursed" territory, the managers would do well to require that he carry a different kind of sign. It is a tactical blunder to present Oklahoma as an example of the blessings of Prohibition. Fortunately for the Dry cause, the Chicago Wets lacked the knowledge or understanding to make use of the opportunity this clergyman's blunder gave them. They may know better elsewhere.

Oklahoma was first opened to settlement in 1889. It required five years for the first settlers to get title to their claims. So it is only 21 years since land in Oklahoma has been privately owned. Consequently 21 years ago Oklahoma was a commonwealth of home owners. Residents who did not own their homes were living on government land and preparing to take title. How is it today? With the largest city in the State having less than 100,000 inhabitants, the majority of Oklahomans are tenants. This applies to farmers as well as to city dwellers. Where is there a "saloon-cursed" State with a record of swifter transition from prosperity to poverty?

Of course prohibition is not to blame, unless it had something to do with inflating land values. But that fact will not be clear to persons who do not know that as long as land monopoly is encouraged, poverty and destitution must continue, regardless of whether liquor be sold or not. Such persons the liquor interests can easily convince that prohibition is injuring Oklahoma. They may wake up to this opportunity at any time.

If Oklahoma Drys are wise, they will not delay giving their help to the movement to put an end to land monopoly in that State. A Single Tax measure at the last session of the legislature was beaten in the State Senate by five votes. That defeat gave at least two years' extension of life to poverty-producing conditions in Oklahoma. It extended for at least two years an opportunity which liquor interests have—with characteristic stupidity—neglected to hold up Oklahoma to uninformed persons as a horrible example. Now let the Drys deprive them of that opportunity as quickly as possible by letting the true cause of Oklahoma's plight be known, and by helping to remove the cause of it.

Charlestown, W. Va.—The mystery of the "Old Man of Kelly's Creek," who is alleged to have been one of the most successful bootleggers in the state, is believed by federal officers to have been solved by the arrest of Louis Peters 22 years old. It is alleged Peters disguised himself as an old man, wearing false hair and a patriarchal set of whiskers to sell his liquor. Otherwise he was a miner.

ARE YOU EDUCATED?

A professor of the University of Chicago has evolved a series of test questions for the educated, which, he avows, are the best evidences of a real education. If you can answer "yes" to all the questions you are truly educated, the professor says. Here are the questions:

Has education given you sympathy with all the good causes and made you espouse them?

Has it made you public spirited?

Has it made you a brother to the weak?

Have you learned how to make friends and keep them?

Do you know what it is to be a friend yourself?

Can you look an honest man or pure woman in the eye?

Will a lonely dog follow you in the street?

Can you be high-minded and happy in the meanest drudgeries of life?

Do you think that washing dishes and hoeing corn is just as compatible with high thinking as piano playing or golf?

Are you good for anything yourself?

Can you be happy alone?

Can you look out on the world and see anything but dollars and cents?

Can you look into a mud-puddle by the wayside and see a clear sky?

Can you see anything in the puddle but mud?

A SOLDIER ON YOUR BACK

(By Warren Worth Bailey)

You are a millman, let us say. Are your burdens heavy enough? Do you want to load up a little heavier? You have your family to keep, your children to educate, your home to maintain. In addition you must contribute to the support of your city, your county, your state and either directly or indirectly to your nation. Is not that enough? Do you want still further burdens? Do you want to walk to the mills every day with a soldier on your back?

For years it was the boast in this country that here in America we are free from the menace of militarism. Our campaign orators were accustomed to point across the sea where they declared every workingman carried a soldier. They called upon the American toiler to rejoice that his lot was far happier. It was true that the European toiler carried a soldier upon his back, and now Europe is paying the penalty. The perfect work of preparedness is being wrought in a continent fast being desolated by war. The outcome was inevitable.

But militarism is imperial in its ambition. It seeks to rule in every land. As a result we hear today from press, rostrum and some pulpits the call warning us to prepare; warning us to arm; warning us to shoulder a soldier. The preparedness program starts modestly. It is only $400,000,000 that is asked. It is only 600,000 soldiers that are desired. But does any sane man imagine the demands will stop there? The more ships we have the more we will need because the more we have the more other nations will build. If we start we place our feet on a treadmill and our strivings will never end until the day of the Great War comes. In the end our armament, like the armaments of Europe, will force us to go forth to battle. But during all the years the burdens will grow heavier. During all the years the workingmen must go to the mills with a soldier on their backs.

There is a notion latent in the minds of many men that militarism promotes prosperity. But the men who think that never have felt the burden. They have not discovered that the prosperity does not trickle down to the toiler who is forced to bear the burden of the soldier. Ours is a great country. Our laborers are mighty men. Are they so strong that they must needs each one shoulder a soldier?

PERKINS' NONSENSICAL FEAR.

George W. Perkins is afraid lest after the war, the cost of living in the United States be reduced. Ordinary people see little to dread in such a prospect, but Perkins is no ordinary person. He fears that the war once over, Europeans will dump a lot of goods on our shores that we can use. He wants action taken at once to prevent it. Well, no one is going to force Mr. Perkins to take any of the stuff if he doesn't want it. He will be at liberty to buy as high priced "made in America" stuff as he wants. But why should he want to prevent others with smaller incomes than he enjoys, from getting the advantage of a lower cost of living?

Perkins once said a very fine thing. While testifying before the Commission on Industrial Relations he declared that if a traveler on an airship were to see our great natural resources, comparatively small population, and the large number of unemployed, he "would think this was a lunatic asylum."

If that same traveler were to see foreigners dumping goods on our shores which we badly need and earnestly desire, and yet see us trying to devise legislation to keep the stuff away—what would he think? Would there not be too much moderation in his conclusion that this was a lunatic asylum?

MR. HEARST REJOICES

Mr. William Randolph Hearst quite frankly and with undisguised satisfaction rises to congratulate himself on what he regards as a new convert. In opening a long editorial on "President Wilson's Conversion" Mr. Hearst says:

President Wilson announces that he now earnestly favors adequate naval and military preparation for defense.

We are glad to see his conversion to this sensible and patriotic doctrine.

We congratulate the country upon the fact that Mr. Wilson has abandoned the attitude he assumed nine months ago in the controversy with Representative Gardner and has adopted the attitude maintained, as all the country well knows, for so many years by all the Hearst newspapers.

During these many years all the Hearst papers have fought strenuously and continuously in support of an adequate system of national defense and a great navy as the main support of that system.

We have fought for this policy during many years when it was unpopular.

Mr. Hearst has reason for his rejoicing. But it still remains to be demonstrated that the policy for which he has fought during many years has so gained in popularity as he imagines. There are still a lot of people who do not take kindly to the idea of transforming this republic into a military camp.

Mr. Bryan says it is the duty of the United States if slapped on one cheek, to turn the other for another smack. That is, if we must engage in war, let it be with slapsticks.—Pittsburg Gazette Times.

Of course Mr. Bryan says nothing of the kind. Nor does he imply anything of that sort. What he does say is this: "Don't let the jingoes confuse you. It is not a question of defense. This country will defend itself if it is ever attacked and if that time ever comes the common people will furnish the soldiers." But why expect an organ of Big Business to be even half way fair to the man whom Big Business fears above all other men.

ALFALFA CAMPAIGN

Sufficient Lime Needed in Soil to Produce Good Crops.

Some of our counties had an alfalfa campaign last spring, and as a result they have doubled their acreage. It has improved rural conditions and been exceedingly helpful.

More of it should still be grown and alfalfa growing contests should be established among the boys and girls. The work should be carefully planned and financed by local people.

With the shipping out of this country of the cereals, the principal one of which is the wheat, our farmers should be keeping on a system of keeping up their land. This can and should be done by first seeing that the land has sufficient lime.

This is the time of the year when it ships well; it is dryer when it leaves the quarry, and it is a good time to haul from railroad to the farm—then a little later it is at the farm when the land is ready to receive it, thus saving time. It is not necessary to store all limes under shelter. Get it upon the farm and keep the farm well supplied with this material. It has so many uses upon the farm that no farmer should be without lime. Buy a car and draw it home, have it on the job, then it can easily be distributed at a time when other work is not pressing, and in this way you will keep up the fertility.

Co-operative buying of large quantities of agricultural lime and ground limestone is being considered by some farm organizations and there is no question but what this is a good movement in some sections for it means greater purchasing power and a more general use among the farmers within the territory.

Most of this material is now being sold direct from quarry to the farmer. The use of lime offers a most economical and efficient means of restoring barren areas.

There is small chance for the man's soil that needs lime when he will not make the effort to find out where to obtain it.

Had Duties to Attend To.

The first morning my little brother went to kindergarten he was very good until about ten o'clock when he got up and started out. The teacher asked where he was going. He replied, "I'se doin' to det some lunch." Not living very far she let him go. He returned in the afternoon and was very good until about three o'clock, when he started out again. The teacher called him back and said, "Where are you going now?" He answered "I dee I dota take my nap, don't I?"—Chicago Tribune.

"Hair of the Dog."

When a man is debilitated from the effects of the previous night's debauch he is frequently counseled to take "a hair of the dog that bit him," the meaning being that he should take a little of the same kind of liquor that had upset him. The saying is a remnant of an old superstitious belief that the burnt hair of a dog was an antidote against the ill effects of intoxication.

The Power of Toxins.

One thousandth of a gram of tetanus (lockjaw) toxin is enough to kill a horse weighing 1,300 pounds or six hundred million times its weight. More remarkable still, one-thousandth of a milligram of tubercular toxin will produce action on a man weighing 132 pounds—sixty trillion times its weight.

AS VIEWED BY PHILOSOPHER

Happiness Not Always to Those Who Make Great Catches in the World's Fish Pond.

We have seen men absorbedly fishing for wealth, and we imagine that when they fail to get it they are defeated and disappointed. Neither one. The only men who are defeated in this worldly fish pond are the ones who haul up great bags of gold on their hooks. They are very soon burdened with the catch and unable to march comfortably farther along the road. The only disappointed ones are those who have no real purpose in life, and suppose that fishing is an end in itself.

I had a great-uncle once who died quite happy and bankrupt. Throughout his life he was jubilantly full of schemes for making a fortune. But if his patent flouring mill had ever succeeded or his method for tanning leather had brought him wealth, so that he had been obliged to have two houses and 20 servants and several suits of clothes and bills and accounts and lawsuits, I am sure he would have died miserable.

Unfeeling and misunderstanding persons are forever pitying the old maids and especially those who seem to be always angling for men. But such behavior seems to me quite intelligible and quite pardonable—especially if they never catch anything. Having begun this game in early life earlier than I began fishing, and having founded it on instincts even deeper than mine, they would be silly indeed now to give up so good a sport just because they have found other and possibly more important, objects in life.—Suburban Life.

POSSIBLE TO BE TOO GOOD

Writer in Woman's Magazine Gives Some Wise Advice to Others of Her Sex.

Women mourn and rail at man's unfaithfulness, but it is only fair to remember when such shortcomings are brought up against man as set over against woman, that Lilith was just as truly a woman as was Eve. In our accusations and recriminations we too often forget that man's faithfulness to a good woman is usually encouraged by the wiles of a bad one, and that more often than not a woman stands at each end of the path that stretches from heaven to hell.

We forget too by what dear and lovable things a man may be held to the fair and honest ways of life. An eager comradeship with him in the things for which he cares, good humor in sunshine as well as in storm, an easy-going conscience as to the smaller duties of life, and an abiding love for frills and laces, these are the gentle virtues that will serve to keep sweet and eager the dreariest masculine heart.

Good women have a world of sin and sorrow for which to answer, and a recent chance remark of a famous writer has more truth in it than we always care to believe. "When good women are too good," she said, "to be restful, dainty and sweet, they are being as faithless to their marriage vows as are the tired husbands who no longer pay them homage."—Southern Woman's Magazine.

Our Ideal of Perfection.

The modern world has a new and elaborate dogma of the body, but conviction (if it exist) in regard to the soul is tentative and wary. For many past years the faith has been taught, the belief has been growing, that physically fit of necessity means mentally fit, that physical power is the measure of man's efficiency. The one story of our college life lies in its sports, and education of muscle. The only ideal of perfection now in evidence is an ideal of physical perfection; for this no sacrifice is too great, no case too onerous. Images of perfect bodily development are kept before the young—the Apollo, with beauty of sinew and muscle; but the face of the Christ is growing ever more and more dim before their eyes, and is more and more apologetically presented, if presented at all.—Atlantic.

The American Calf.

Deer hunters are forbidden to kill fawns in most American states. There are laws to protect the baby seal. Game fish under a certain size have their lives insured by official regulation. How does it happen, then, that the American butcher goes on slaughtering the American calf, slashing at the throat of the nation's meat and dairy supply, without audible protest from any quarter? The heifer calf's place in our system of table economy is not a matter of guesswork or theory. The calf that is eaten as veal never develops into beef, nor can it continue the race of its valuable kind. It is a contention of experts that a very definite reason for our dwindling beef supply is the unrestricted slaughter of very young heifers.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

A New Method.

Pastor Simon Stephanoff of Moscow, a merchant of large means, who has abandoned business life to devote himself to evangelism, has adopted the following as one method of reaching people usually inaccessible. He has given into a phonograph an address presenting in simple terms the essentials of salvation and has put the resulting disks on sale. These are readily sold and are used in hotels, private house and cafes.

Fern Was Peeved.

According to an eminent botanist, plants are so sensitive that they resent neglect and are susceptible to kind treatment, showing their gratitude in charming ways. We are therefore the more ready to believe a story told us a day or two ago by a lover of nature. He was watering a fern on a cold morning. He forgot to temper the water. The fern, incensed by the shock, leaped from the pot and bit him savagely in the leg.—Philip Hale, in Boston Herald.

DIET FOR THE BRAIN-WORKER

Should See That Nourishing to the Whole Body, With Special Reference to Nervous System.

A great deal has been said about the value of certain articles as brain food, and one of the pet theories of popular physiology has been that fish and other substances composed largely of phosphorus are the most appropriate diet for brain-workers. But modern science is emphasizing that the best food for the brain is that which nourishes the whole body, with special reference to the nervous system.

Brain power is largely an expression through the nerves of bodily vitality. In discussing this point in a recent treatise Dr. George M. Beard says that the diet of brain-workers should be of large variety, delicately served, abundantly nutritious, of which fresh meat should be a prominent constituent.

In vacations or wherever it is desired to rest the brain, fish may, to a certain extent, take the place of meat. He says we should select those articles that are most agreeable to our individual tastes and so far as possible we should take our meal amid pleasant social surroundings.

In great crises that call for unusual exertion we should rest the stomach, that for the time the brain may work the harder, but the deficiency of nutrition ought always to be supplied in the first interval of repose.

ALL MUST BEAR THE BURDEN

Children, If They Are to Be Strong and Self-Reliant, Have to Learn That Fact.

On the lower deck of one of our river packets a little pile of pig iron was carried on the trip up the river, and when the cargo was unloaded the pig iron was not removed, but was carried again on the trip down the river. When the reason was asked the answer was given: "She travels steadier when she carries a weight." And this is true of men and women. The world has little use for the young man or woman who has no furrow of thought, and no wrinkle of responsibility. And we are not kind to our own children when we seek continually to shield them from the hard things of life. We may wish to spare them some of our own hard experiences, but if they are to be strong and self-reliant they must reach it by putting themselves under the burden and feeling the pressure of some of the difficult things in life. You want your boy to be strong and manly, you must push him off the plank, that he may learn of himself to swim. "Every man shall bear his own burden."—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

Pleasing Husband.

In the Woman's Home Companion a woman living in Wyoming wrote in part as follows her comment on how a woman can continue to please her husband:

"The wise woman is she who keeps neat and trim in dress, dainty in person and alert and poised in mind, that in so doing she may favorably stand comparison with the business women with whom her husband comes in contact.

"Most men, even those well past middle age, place high value upon externals, and the woman who assumes that she can hold a man's love indefinitely, regardless of her personal appearance, is, to my mind, making a grave mistake.

"More than one wife, serene in the knowledge of her husband's loyalty, fails to realize that same loyalty is due more to the man's sense of duty and conscientious self-control than to the fact that his wife possesses the qualities which actually hold him true to her in spirit as well as in deed."

Leave It to the Small Boy.

Leave it to the small boy to put it over—even on the thoroughly seasoned and experienced circus "hinker." The Hippodrome circus was parading along upper Broadway, New York, when one of the clowns was seized with a thirst. Clambering down from his lofty perch he darted into a corner saloon for a little "red eye." When he emerged the cavalcade had vanished. Some side street had swallowed it up, leaving the clown marooned. "Which way did the ballyhoo go, son?" he demanded of a small boy. "I'll show you," responded the lad. For three blocks the clown ran panting after the youngster with an ever increasing army of kids at his heels. "Where is it?" demanded the exhausted clown. "Ha, ha!" laughed the youth. "I gave you a run for your money, didn't I?" The clown might have spanked the youth, but he couldn't catch him. He compromised by hiring an express wagon to convey him back to the Hippodrome to escape the mob of small boys.

"Of'n."

The professor who, in his address on the correct pronunciation of English, said he preferred "of'n" to "often" is on the winning side. No "pronouncing dictionary" with a reputation to lose ever sounds the t in the middle of such words as Christmas, mistletoe, hostler, often, or chestnut. Good actors, whose duty it is to speak trippingly on the tongue, can cite authority to support their pronunciation of "hankerchief and Wen'sday." And no one who knows his way about in the elocutionary field pays any regard to the spelling of such words as "extraordinary."—London Chronicle.

Phosphorus.

The discovery of phosphorus by Brandt in 1668 was first applied commercially as a means of obtaining fire by Godfrey Haukwitz of London, who in 1680, under the direction of Robert Boyle, prepared and sold large quantities. It was used for procuring fire by rubbing small particles between the folds of brown paper, and a sulphur match was ignited from the resulting flame; but as phosphorus was both costly and dangerous, this invention was not long employed.

FARM EXTENSION WORK.

Progressive Farmers Know What Lime Will Do For the Soil.

A few years back when lime was first advocated there was so little known about it in northeastern Ohio that the farmers were inclined to believe that they were getting along all right as they had been in the past and that lime was not needed, but today the progressive man knows more about lime and what it will do for him. The teachings and the missionary work conducted in the past are now fruitful of results.

At the fairs this fall you will see exhibits of an educational nature showing the different kinds of lime—the difference in the degree of fineness, and also the degree of quality which the manufacturers are putting out. They are now selecting those veins of stone which are better for agricultural purposes and are keeping their grade right up to the best. They are building up a business and building up farms.

ALFALFA NEEDS LIME IN SOIL TO DO WELL

Beats Corn For Fattening Hogs and Is Great Milk Producer.

Kansas Alfalfa Experiment Station has recently found out that hogs feeding 100 days upon corn and alfalfa dressed 185 pounds; feeding 180 days upon corn alone, dressed only 75 pounds. So it pays to grow alfalfa. Alfalfa is equal to bran for milk production. It enriches the land and keeps money at home. It increases farm values, balances the corn ration and leads to live stock farming.

Idaho has found it to contain at least 11 per cent of digestible protein. But you must prepare for alfalfa by, first, underdrainage; second, lime; third, good preparation of seed bed and fertilization; fourth, continued effort to grow it. Ten to fifteen pounds of seed per acre is sufficient.

It nearly always pays to inoculate or add bacteria to the soil. Some of the best and largest alfalfa farms are those which contain large quantities of lime. So in northeastern Ohio, if you wish to start in on alfalfa, you should see to the lime question at once. After you secure a good catch it will be well to mulch it, as you would strawberries in the fall of the year. This will prevent winter killing.

There are many beautiful landscapes among the hills and along the valleys in northeastern Ohio. If these hillsides were given an opportunity to grow alfalfa these landscapes would become more beautiful, more productive, would maintain better buildings and support more live stock per given area.

Many new orchards are being set out, modern silos are going up and farm buildings are being improved.

The present outlook for the wheat crop is good and a much larger acreage will go in this fall. It should all be limed. Corn is up, but is being retarded somewhat on account of weather conditions.

Great quantities of seed have been sold and large shipments of lime and limestone have gone forth to improve the farm lands of a state where values are permanent and on the increase. The application of lime has increased the value of all farms from $10 to $20 per acre. It has shown the farmers that their business is a highly scientific one.

"SINGLE TAX WOULD MAKE THE FARMER THE GOAT"

Amendment to Limit Elections and Safeguard the Initiative and Referendum Meets With Approval of Leading Ohioans---Affects Constitutional Amendments Only and Permits Action On the Same Question Three Times In Seven Years.

(BY H. A. M'KENZIE.)

Of all the endorsements of the pending amendment to limit elections and safeguard the I. and R., the statement by Hon. J. Milton Earnhart of Lebanon, a farmer member of the recent Constitutional Convention, drives home hardest the object of the proposal. He says:

"The viewpoint of a farmer, which has been my chosen occupation. You will remember the persistent efforts which were made in the Constitutional Convention and have been made at the polls for the adoption of a measure for the classification of property for taxation, and which is but the hand-maiden for the 'single tax.' If adopted, it would make the farmer the goat. The farmer is willing to contribute a full share, but unwilling to assume additional burdens. And they, together with those persons who realize the necessity of giving this important branch of industry a 'square deal,' should line up solidly for this amendment to curb continual nagging by those who seek to force upon the people something which they do not want."

The amendment commended by Mr. Earnhart and so many others is easy to understand. It reads:

"No amendment of the Constitution shall be submitted to the electors which involves any proposal or part of any proposal which, since Sept. 4, 1912, shall have been rejected more than once by the electors, unless six years shall have elapsed since the last rejection."

This amendment is popular with the members of the Constitutional Convention that framed the "I & R." Here are expressions of approval from some of them:

HON. GEORGE W. HARRIS, CINCINATI.—The initiative and referendum is one of the fundamental safeguards for the preservation of our democratic governmental institutions. A member of the fourth Constitutional Convention of Ohio, I helped make the principle of the initiative and referendum a part of the organic law of the state. It is because I fear that the principle of the initiative and referendum may be obscured or destroyed by the abuse of the right to use this political instrumentality, that I am in favor of the conservative limitations on its use that are set forth in your proposed amendment.

HON. E. B. KING, SANDUSKY.—For one I believe that after a thorough canvass, once repeated, in favor of a given idea, has been had, that the electorate should be given a brief rest and an opportunity to think over the subject, and that six years is not too long.

HON. JOHN ROEHM, DAYTON.—You will find by the records of the Constitutional Convention that I favored a workable I. & R. However, I did not then or do I now favor an I. & R. that will continually keep the people in a turmoil relating to any particular subject defeated year after year. The continual agitation by submission of any such questions year after year must bring the I. & R. gradually in disrepute and will be finally the undoing of what was expected would be one of the great reforms in favor of the people.

HON. F. M. MARRIOTT, DELAWARE:—I have only to say that I am in favor of the amendment, and hope you will succeed in its adoption before the people.

HON. SOLOMON JOHNSON, STRYKER:—You and I may not agree upon some of the propositions that might be presented time after time after they had been defeated, but I am sure that we do agree that after a proposition has been defeated twice that the people ought to have a rest.

HON. JOHN ULMER, TOLEDO:—I am for the initiative and referendum, but the use of these two valuable rights must be within the limits of sound reason.

WHAT THE NEWSPAPERS SAY.

Newspapers of Ohio praise this proposal to limit elections. Excerpts from editorials follow:

CINCINNATI ENQUIRER: — Indorsement by the voters of Ohio of the proposed amendment to the Constitution of Ohio to prevent the resubmission of issues twice defeated until after the lapse of six years will rob the initiative and referendum of none of their potentiality as instruments of popular government, but will restore to the people of Ohio a feeling of confidence and a degree of certainty in its laws. Ohio is committed to the principles of the initiative and referendum, and will continue to employ them unless their constant abuse by irresponsible agitators causes the people to rise in wrath and discard them altogether.

COLUMBUS STATE JOURNAL.—Viewed purely as an abstract proposal, as it should be, it would appeal to almost every thoughtful and steady-minded man. Nothing is gained by anybody, except those who profit directly by agitation, from keeping the state stirred up year after year by new expressions of opinion on the same old recently decided questions. Nothing is gained and much is lost in the way of attention to business and peace of mind.

COLUMBUS DISPATCH. — The fundamental law while it should never be utterly beyond the reach of the amending hand, ought to be fairly stable. Statutes may now be changed every two years. Shall we assume that the Constitution basis of statutes should be subject to change every year? * * * There are other matters of public policy, the consideration of which should not be continually interrupted by futile agitation of questions recently settled.

WAVERLY REPUBLICAN-HERALD.—It would save the state hundreds of thousands of dollars in doing away with elections on twice-defeated constitutional proposals for a period of six years. The people are entitled to rest upon these defeated proposals and besides the State Constitution is not a football to be kicked around at each election and amended each year to suit the whim of some high salaried agitators * * *"

EAST LIVERPOOL REVIEW.—It would be better if a halt were called somewhere. The decision of the electorate should be binding for a little while at least. Little, if any, good is accomplished by keeping the electorate in constant turmoil.

TIFFIN ADVERTISER:—The proposed amendment is aimed not at crippling the usefulness of the initiative and referendum, but at the agitators who would use it ad libitum for the purpose of getting their pet hobby into the basic law of the state by exhausting the opposition.

CINCINNATI TIMES-STAR:—The I. & R. has done pretty well in Ohio. But it should be used as a means by which the people can express their opinion on any public question, not as a device for the waging of continual warfare by one group of special issue enthusiasts against another.

MT. GILEAD UNION-REGISTER:—To be whipped once often settles a fellow. To get two thrashings generally fixes him so that he is willing to wait until he is stout again.

HILLSBORO NEWS-HERALD:—Put away your prejudices and desires so far as certain pet theories of yours are concerned, and look at this amendment calmly, and we are certain that it will appeal to you as fair and reasonable.

MANSFIELD NEWS:—People of Ohio are justly tired of the perennial agitation that is kept up under some guise whereby the community is kept in an uproar about something all of the time, with various elections, proposed constitutional amendments and divers propositions coming up or being brought up with resultant campaigns that are expensive, time-killing and inimical to business conditions and prospects.

PORTSMOUTH TIMES.—If "the voice of the people" means anything it ought to be accepted. But there is no such acceptance under present arrangements. An amendment is beaten by the tens of thousands and blithely those who thrive on contentions and campaigns get up another submission and the work thereof goes on eternally. It all makes for an unsettled and unwholesome condition and the total effect is to make a mockery of popular government."

LEBANON WESTERN STAR.—The Western Star is in accord and sincerely hopes the amendment may carry. As it is now the organic law of the state is little more than a football of politics and we favor the amendment in order that the Constitution may again have some stability.

SANDUSKY REGISTER.—A Constitution has heretofore been regarded as more important than a constable. The organic law has always been held as requiring greater stability, longer tests of its provisions, than a mere tenure of office, from president to coroner.

LOGAN RECORD. — Carry this amendment and when the smoke clears away from the battlefield in November, whichever way the election goes, wet or dry, the internal agitation and clawing and spitting will be over for at least six years.

WOODSFIELD SPIRIT OF DEMOCRACY.—To be continually harassing the voter on the same issue will cause him to become disgusted and when a matter of vital importance does come up he will remain away from the election and not vote at all.

LIMA NEWS:—It would seem that the voters would wish such an amendment to carry, no matter what their individual views on leading questions. For such a great state as Ohio to be continually called upon to vote on the same questions, is childish.

Those who are opposing the amendment to limit elections are especially of two classes:

1. Those who want to make the single tax a part of the fundamental law of the state.
2. Those who find it of profit to harass and annoy the voters of Ohio by placing before them year after year some pet hobby.

Continued Agitation and Higher Taxes

Prohibition is an issue again this year only because Professional Agitators forced the proposed amendment on the ballot.

The voters thought they settled the liquor question in 1912 when they put into the Constitution by 85,000 majority the best liquor license provision ever written into law. The Prohibition amendment would repeal that successful provision of the Constitution.

In 1913 the Prohibition Agitators got the question before the people through the Anti-Shipping Bill. When the voters defeated that by 95,000 majority they were confident they had settled the question.

In 1914 the Agitators put state-wide prohibition on the ballot and that was defeated by 85,000 majority. The voters were sure then that the matter was settled for all time.

But the Prohibition Agitators have forced the question on the ballot again this year. Four votes in four years on the same general issue and majorities against the Agitators every time.

Prohibition agitation pays the professional Agitator well and costs the taxpayer much.

Taxes Always On the Increase

Taxes have increased in Ohio in the last ten years $36,000,000.

Ohio in that time has been without Prohibition. Every taxpayer wants to know what would be the increase in taxes if Prohibition were to carry. This question does not disturb the Prohibition Agitator who does not help pay the bill.

Here Is the Annual Prohibition Tax Bill:

$15,000,000 now paid the state by the Ohio Liquor Industry would have to be made up by the general taxpayer. Thirty per cent of all general taxes, it is estimated, is paid by the Farmer. Hence the Farmers' share of the deficit would be $4,500,000.

$17,000,000 now paid to the Federal Government by the Ohio Liquor Industry would be lost by Prohibition in Ohio. That loss Ohio taxpayers, with other taxpayers in the nation, would have to make up. Instead of taking revenue away from Uncle Sam, right now every patriotic citizen is trying to work out a plan to help secure additional federal revenue.

To Pay Necessary Taxes Is Bad Enough

To pay unnecessary taxes is worse. To at the same time increase taxes and cut down the income from which taxes are to be paid is worst of all. Industries allied with the established liquor business derive much income from it. Farmers alone receive from that industry $8,576,872 for agricultural products used in the making of beer and liquors in Ohio during a single year. Decreased governmental revenue, decreased individual income and Higher Taxes is the Prohibition program.

Vote "NO" on Prohibition November 2 and help make the majority so decisive that paid Professional Agitators will emigrate to other States.

THIRTEENTH INSTALLMENT

CHAPTER XLVI.

By Process of Elimination.

The weapon of the renegade leader Blake was aimed steadily enough. But the fraction of time in which Roleau changed the position he had taken saved the life of one man and cost that of another.

It was the fellow thief, Blake's comrade, fresh from the rendezvous, who fell under the bullet intended for Roleau himself.

Blake sprang forward, groping under cover of the smoke, to find the body of his enemy, stooped, paused, sprang back—it was not Roleau but his own man whom he had slain!

Roleau by this time, with no more ...

... plicating factors here in his own business of finding a victim for the law.

"What do you say now to this, sir?"—he accosted Roleau.

"I say now, your excellency, that yonder thief and leader of thieves, who tried to kill me, knows all there is to be known of the murder. He can tell, if he likes, or if he does not like. He wanted there what we wanted—we will call it a jewel that he sought in her gracious excellency's rooms. He guessed that it might have value with persons high in power in this country. That is why he followed us, that is why murder was done there. They all sought something, and we know what it was."

"You are the accused," said the prefect, turning swiftly to Blake, his own decision made. "What have you to say? Why do you not speak? Confess that you know the secret of yonder murder—the motive for which we ourselves now know. I know you, Blake. Your band is broken now. How do you wish to spend the rest of your life—would you purchase a few more moments at the price of a confession of the truth? Perhaps that may be when you have tested the dungeon— ...

... find some solution to the problem of finding the coin. Where was it? How could it be gained? Upon Count Sachio more than upon any nobleman of the court this question rested grievously. He enlisted therefore as his [illegible] a man belonging to the secret police in Grahoffen, Ladislaw, a cunning chap with courage.

"Ladislaw," said he, "we must go to Gretzhoffen at once. The coin is there. Either that young woman has it or Count Frederick, or the king. The latter is most likely of the three."

It came out much as Sachio had reasoned. In the confusion now prevailing in Gretzhoffen the two passed unchallenged even to the palace door.

As for the king, he was by this time well forward in his wine. He received Sachio and his friend readily enough. Little it mattered to him who came, for all were welcome. He reproved for his hesitation the chamberlain who announced Sachio.

"Let him come to us," said he. "Let them all come. They are welcome. Sachio?—yes, many a bottle we two have spilt together."

Not one, but more than one bottle, forsooth, did they two spilt between them now, and meanlime Ladislaw, secret agent, unnoticed, was here and there, in this room and others, unmolested, as a friend of the king, and busy with purposes of his own.

In the chambers of the king all was given over to wine and boastfulness.

There was one who did not accept thus lightly the issue of the day. Count Frederick of Gretzhoffen, most serious of mind by this time, had turned his steps toward the palace, pondering many things meantime. It was now his own deliberate purpose to demand some decision of his monarch as to the eminent enterprise with which all Gretzhoffen was soon to be concerned. He had given orders, as an officer of the army high in power, to mobilize all the forces of the king ...

MUCH REJOICING IN PRISON CIRCLES

Not a Single Case of Tuberculosis Is to Be Found in the Penitentiary.

BREAKS ALL PRECEDENTS IN INSTITUTION

The New Record Is Due to Many Things, Especially to the Campaign Waged in the Prison Itself.

Special Columbus Correspondent

Columbus

THERE is much rejoicing in prison circles here today. Among the 1,800 prisoners in the Ohio penitentiary not a single case of tuberculosis is to be found. Not only does this fact smash records in so far as other prisons throughout the country concerned, but it breaks all precedents for the Ohio pen itself. Never try are concerned, but it breaks all precedents for the Ohio pen itself. Never before in the memory of officials here has the state bastile been free of the ravages of the "white plague." In fact, when the old type prison cells were in vogue some years ago, tuberculosis was so prevalent and so deadly at the prison that the cell tiers came to be looked upon with dread. Incarceration for normally healthy people almost certainly meant infection. In innumerable cases prisoners were punished first by imprisonment and then by consumption. The new record is due to many things. Generally speaking it is ...

Factory Number Must Be Given.

To make identification easier, State Registrar of Automobiles W. H. Walker will require all applicants for licenses to give the serial factory number of their machine when they apply. This rule goes into effect the first of the year. With this information on file the department will be better enabled to trace the owners of stolen cars. Each application for a license now, in addition to giving the full address of the applicant, must also give the name, make, motive power, style and horse power of the machine. This information is only made a matter of record. To evade detection persons who steal automobiles usually change the number tags and often obtain new tags from the state. Of course, there is no way for the registrar to tell when tags are sought for use on stolen cars. It is his duty to issue tags to all who apply and pay the stipulated fee. "But we will be better enabled to get a line on stolen cars if we have the factory number of the car on file," said Registrar Walker. "The other day we were able to ascertain the name of the owner of a stolen car located in Fremont because of the fact that the factory number had been given when the application was filed. The tags had been stripped from the car and the factory number left the only clue to the identity of the owner." Registrar Walker expects to be able to show a saving of 13 per cent in the operating expenses of his department this year. This will be based on the number of automobile licenses issued, which will be more than 50,000 in excess of the number issued last year. The total number for this year will approximate 150,000. The cost of running the department last year was in the neighborhood of $86,000. Registrar Walker intends to establish a number of new branch offices next year from which licenses will be issued just the same as from the main office in Columbus. Cincinnati, Cleveland and Toledo have such branches. It is probable that new branch offices will be located in Canton, Dayton, Youngstown and Akron.

Passes 44,000 Mark.

The 44,000 mark has just been reached at the penitentiary when Wm. Bilshire, sentenced to the penitentiary from Vinton county, was given the serial number 44,001. This fact discloses that since the serial numbers were instituted in the penitentiary in April, 1834, more than 44,000 men have been incarcerated in the institution. The records show that Amasa Grant, aged 37, was received at the penitentiary in April, 1831, and was given serial number 1. Grant was released about six years later, having been granted a pardon by Gov. Shannon. There have been more men confined in the state prison, however, than the number now specified in the serial files, as no serial records were kept of the prisoners from the time 1815 when the first prison was established on West Main st., where the state arsenal now stands, until 1831. Records show, however, that John Evans, a Franklin county prisoner, was the first man to be officially termed a convict by the state, he having been convicted of assault with intent to kill and confined in the old prison. His brother, Dave Evans, was also connected with the crime and was given the same sentence as that imposed on his brother. A tradition which surrounds the confinement of Ohio's first prisoner, John Evans, is the fact that on the day of his incarceration he wrote on his cell wall, "I am not the only man to be made a prisoner today, as Napoleon is on his way to St. Helena." The prison in those days, consisted of a group of five log cabins.

Hallowe'en

[illegible]

—Martha E. Bales.

To the Voters of Lake County:

We, the undersigned, having investigated the question of the proposed Constitutional Amendment to fix the terms of all County Officers at four (4) years, believe for the following reasons that such an Amendment to the Constitution should be adopted.

First: Increased efficiency will result. Every one knows that our Judges of our Courts of Common Pleas who are elected for terms of six (6) years acquire increased efficiency the longer they are in office. Why not, then, therefore, extend the term of office of other County Officials and thus give them an opportunity to become more efficient when in office?

In the second place, it isn't fair that a County Official should be compelled to go out and to seek re-nomination and re-election for a second term before he has had time thoroughly to master all the intricate duties of his position.

In the third place, such an Amendment separates County Elections from National Elections. Voters will not lose sight of County policies by reason of National issues.

In the fourth place, there are now too many elections. An election involves considerable time and great expense.

In the fifth place, it is not good business to have the terms of County Officials so short. No private business concern seeks new officers and new managers every two years. Why should a County, whose business is so important, make changes so frequently?

In the sixth place, most states of the Union give their County Officers from three (3) to twelve (12) years each, including Pennsylvania, Illinois, Connecticut, Missouri, Delaware, Colorado, Minnesota, Mississippi, North Carolina, Nebraska, Maine, South Carolina, South Dakota, New Jersey, Alabama, Oregon, Indiana, Montana, West Virginia, Virginia and California. Is there not some reason why other states have adopted the longer term.

This is not a political measure. Many private citizens in all parties are in favor of it. So are we in favor of it, and will vote "yes" on this amendment and ask our friends to support and vote "yes" on Tuesday, November 2d, 1915.

Capt. E. G. Huntington—Mayor-Elect of Painesville

"DOLLAR DAY" AND THE HALLOWE'EN PARADE

Last Saturday was an enjoyable day in Painesville and the advertising of local merchants attracted a large crowd of shoppers to the city to take advantage of the "Dollar Day" bargains.

The Hallowe'en parade and festivities in the evening drew a record breaking crowd from surrounding towns and farming community. There was plenty of band music, good illumination, and the fantastic parade was very unique and in size and magnificence would have been a credit to a large city.

Nearly 200 prizes were offered for different representations in the parade, including both floats and individual maskers, and the competition was so great and unexpected that the judges and managers found great difficulty in making decisions fairly.

Nothing has ever been undertaken in Painesville in which the citizens show such universal interest as the Hallowe'en frolic and no doubt it will become an annual event.

No correct list of prizes has been compiled, so the Herald will not attempt to make them public.

Painesville Man Is Killed Shot Down by an Italian

Harry Bain, well-known young man of this city, was shot and almost instantly killed in front of the American Express office on North State street, Saturday evening, as the Hallowe'en parade was passing on that street. The shooting was done by Sam Segalo, an Italian who lives at the corner of Storrs and Elm streets. The motive of the shooting is unknown although there are several stories in circulation. Those who were in the vicinity at the time of the shooting say that they do not know how it happened. Witnesses say that there was no trouble between the two before the shooting took place.

Seggio fired three shots, one going through Bain's upper arm and into his chest, another entering his back near the right side, penetrating his right lung. One shot went wild and hit a horse belonging to Charles Averill of Perry in a front knee.

Harry Bain was 28 years old and a machinist by trade, but was last employed by the B. & O. as a brakeman. On August 29 he was knocked from the top of a box car by the Mentor avenue bridge and had not been able to work since. He had made his home for many years with his grandmother, Mrs. Margaret Murphy of Sanford street. Three sisters, Mrs. A. D. McLean, Mrs. Francis Miltner and Miss Emma Bain survive. He was also a nephew of Chief Appleton. The funeral was held from St. Mary's church Tuesday morning.

Seggio was given a preliminary hearing before Mayor Malin, Saturday night, during which time Prosecuting Attorney George C. von Beseler examined the prisoner. Seggio was charged with purposely and maliciously killing Harry Bain.

During the examination Seggio appeared cool, either being nerved up to the ordeal or not realizing the terrible nature of the crime he had committed. He stated that he was only sixteen years of age but it is said by a few that on different occasions he has given his age as eighteen to former employers.

Seggio claimed that he had never carried a gun before and that the shooting was unpremeditated on his part. The story told by the prisoner and by those who were witnesses to the shooting do not agree.

ELECTION SIDE-LIGHTS

Richmond precinct is still very wet.

—o—

Well, who's here? Mayor Ned Huntington!

—o—

It will be about the same old city council anyhow.

—o—

How the voters did slap that county officers grab of an extra term. It was simply awful.

—o—

Mayor Malin didn't want the job any how. He is a better fighter for others than for himself.

—o—

The "Eagle" is a popular bird once more, and pulled the local republican ticket through—bad spots and all.

—o—

When the election returns were received Tuesday night there wasn't much news to make a democrat happy.

—o—

One year ago Lake county voted 55 majority against Prohibition, Tuesday the county voted dry by majority of 233.

—o—

If we can get about 20 miles more of good roads in Lake county, probably we can worry along without high level bridges.

—o—

John Ellen was beaten for mayor of Willoughby, but the newspapers over there did throw him some beautiful bouquets before election.

—o—

How they did give it to the suffragets in Massachusetts, New York and Pennsylvania. The men know well enough that when the women vote it will all over with this wet stuff.

—o—

Bryan's trip through Ohio helped to cut down the wet majority; but best of all defeated the "stability league" so-called, which would have almost destroyed direct legislation in the future.

—o—

Every precinct in Painesville except one voted a majority for the Rest Room proposition, and that precinct was in Sam Kohankie's ward. The same ward failed to return Kohankie, father of the proposition, as councilmen.

—o—

Some Painesville voters were in favor of spending $225,000 in Willoughby for a high level bridge, and against spending $8,000 in their home town for a rest room. They evidently didn't believe in "Painesville first."

—o—

Frank Kelly, city clerk, has a cinch on his office, if the civil service rules are any good. Kelly and the police force are in office for keeps, unless Solicitor Amidon makes good his charges of "waste, extravagance and inefficiency."

—o—

The last political advertisement before the election, issued by the Republican press committee, and edited by Lawyer Amidon, charged Fletcher Malin's administration with "waste, extravagance and inefficiency." Now let's all get anxious and see what Mr. Amidon as new city solicitor will do.

—o—

When Painesville township gets as many miles of paved roads as they has in Willoughby, Madison or even Perry, it will be time enough to think about high level bridges. Painesville township is helping to pay for about sixty miles of pavement outside of the township and only three miles of pavement within the township. Safety first.

REST ROOM

Proposition Has Majority Vote But Requires Two-third Vote

A majority of the Painesville voters are in favor of building an $8,000 Rest Room on the Park, but for a bond issue of this kind it requires a two-third majority, so it is defeated.

The city councilmen have the vote however, to guide them and may provide some other way to secure for the people something that will satisfy this demand.

The vote by wards was as follows:

Ward	Precinct	Yes	No
1	A	86	98
1	B	60	59
2	A	118	115
2	B	84	60
3	A	86	82
3	B	79	56
4	A	93	72
4	B	73	58

—o—

—o—

Mrs. Perry suffered a stroke in January but seemed to be getting along nicely until death came as the result of a second stroke. Mrs. Perry was sixty-six years of age, being born in Concord in 1848.

CAPT. HUNTINGTON

Ward 1—W. F. Post, 150, beat Sam Kohankie, 94, by 56 votes. Ward 2—E. W. Hadsler. Ward 3—George Eaton; Ward 4—John Spaulding.

FAIRPORT ELECTION

The Citizens' ticket at Fairport won out by an overwhelming majority. F. Fifield was elected mayor by a vote of almost two to one, with the others on the ticket winning by about the same majority. Following is the list of the successful candidates:

F. Fifield, mayor; William Cramer, clerk; John Karhu, treasurer; Fred Johnson, marshal; William Bailey, Louis Bell, Martin Parrish, Mike Pillar, William Stange and John Sippala, councilmen; Mike Locotosk, L. H. Mosher and Charles Histmari, committee on public affairs; J. H. Werheach, assessor.

TOWNSHIP OFFICERS

Following is the vote on township officers:

Trustees, King, 980; Shepard 981; Lawrence 877, Harris 729; Rose 553, Corr 540. Elected, King, Shepard and Lawrence. Township clerk, Mshaffey 905; Caloway 565. Mehaffey elected. Township treasurer, Truisen 1050; Ferron 489. Truisen elected. Cunningham, Graves and May were elected constables and Eggleston assessor.

New Election Plan

Prof. A. R. Hatton, head of the political science department of Western Reserve university, and president of the Civic league, spent Tuesday in Ashtabula, O., witnessing the first trial in America of a form of the election system of proportionate representation.

It was Ashtabula's first experience with the plan under a new charter providing the city manager form of government. The plan was applied to the election of seven members of council.

Ashtabula citizens seemed to have no trouble in understanding the plan Prof. Hatton said. Fourteen candidates were running for the seven council seats. The candidates' names were printed on the ballot in the usual manner, one below the other, and the voter marked his choices by placing the numerals, one to seven, after the names of his favored candidates.

Because of the large number of state and municipal questions the Ashtabula county board of elections announced it would not count the ballots for city officers until Thursday, when Prof. Hatton expects to return to Ashtabula. Prof. Hatton's interest in the form of election lies in the fact that he is an advocate of it and has taught it several years to his classes in politics.

The count in Ashtabula is made by dividing the total number of votes cast by eight, one more than the number of offices to be filled.

The purpose of the plan, Prof. Hatton explained, is to give each party and group of electors representation in council proportionate to its strength in comparison with other parties and groups.

AMERICAN IS SHOT AS VILLA ATTACKS

U. S. Soldiers Endangered by Bullets When Mexican Factions Battle.

CUSTOM HOUSE IS RIDDLED WITH LEAD

Mexican Refugees, Mostly Women and Children, Suffering Severely From Hunger and Cold, Food Having Failed to Arrive.

Douglas, Ariz. — The long threatened battle for the possession of Agua Prieta, just across the border from here, opened Monday afternoon. Gen. Pollas Calles commands the Carranzista forces defending the town. Gen. Francisco Villa is attacking with 13,000 men.

Shortly after the battle began bullets from Villa's machine guns began falling on the American side of the border. The American customs house where a company of American soldiers were guarding Mexican refugees was riddled. L. F. Taylor, an American civilian, was shot in the back as he was hunting cover and it is believed he will die. American soldiers in their trenches breasting the border line were endangered by the bullets.

Carranzista Trenches Stormed.

Villa's columns, after forming on three sides of Agua Prieta, began drawing in about noon. The Calles outposts were driven in and shortly heavy Villa forces, advancing from the east, began storming the outer Carranzista trenches.

At 1:36 p. m. the battle proper began when the guns defending the town opened on Villa's artillery. The Villa batteries immediately replied and in the course of the ensuing ex...

PROHIBITION AGAIN REJECTED IN OHIO

Dry Cause Is Defeated by a Majority Estimated at Over 50,000.

STABILITY AMENDMENT FAILS TO WIN

Sprague, McDermott, County Term Extender and Tax Exemption Fail to Meet the Approval of the Buckeye Voters.

Columbus, O.— Ohio has again rejected prohibition by a majority estimated at from 50,000 to 65,000. The wet majority last year was more than 84,000.

It was a case of the cities and the more populous counties against the rural districts. From the earliest returns it was evident the rural voters had indorsed the anti-saloon proposal by majorities about equal to last year. Dry gains are seen in Cuyahoga and Hamilton counties, but both these metropolitan districts are safely within the wet column.

Reports through the evening indicated that the strength of the wet vote against the prohibition amendment would carry the stability measure to success. Later figures, however, upset the early calculations. The vote for and against the stability measure followed closely the wet and dry vote through the earlier returns. This was particularly true in the rural districts, but the wet city districts failed to give the majorities anticipated. Here the stability vote dragged so far behind the wet strength that its defeat through the state is now indicated.

Wet headquarters estimate that prohibition will be beaten by about 70,000...

WOMAN SUFFRAGE LOSES IN N. YORK

Most Absorbing Issue in Empire State Election Is Defeated.

NEW CONSTITUTION ALSO FAILS TO WIN

Next Assembly Will Be Overwhelmingly Republican, Majority of 50 Being Reduced by Five, According to Late Returns.

New York City.—"Votes for women," the most absorbing issue in the New York state election, was defeated by approximately 200,000. Near midnight 2,467 election districts out of 5,713 in the entire state gave: For suffrage 241,928, against 321,418. This ratio indicated the majority by which suffrage would be defeated.

Incomplete returns give a majority of about 80,000 against the amendment in Greater New York. Upstate districts rolled up more than 100,000 to defeat it.

Result in Upstate.

The upstate fight was not without its ray of hope for the suffragists who scanned the early returns...

PENNSY TURNS DOWN 'VOTES FOR WOMEN'

Keystone State Defeats the Suffrage Amendment by Large Majority—Republicans Carry Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Pennsylvania defeated the suffrage amendment by a majority that will be large, but which cannot be estimated because of the incomplete returns.

Smith Wins in Philadelphia.

At midnight not one division election board in Philadelphia had completed its computation of the suffrage vote, although at that time it was announced officially that the Republican organization candidates for mayor and other offices had been elected by between 70,000 and 80,000 majority. Thomas B. Smith, therefore, will succeed Rudolph Blankenburg as mayor of this city. The majority against suffrage in the city, however, may be estimated as about the same as Smith's plurality. This presumption and the returns so far received from the other districts in the state leads to the belief that suffrage has been defeated by nearly 200,000 majority.

The suffragists, however, polled a much larger vote than was expected...

MR. MANN IN ERROR

Congressman Not Preaching Republican Doctrine.

His Admission That the Country May Exist, Though Under Democratic Control, Not Like the Old G. O. P. Arguments.

Though the clouds of fatuous Democratic politics may gather thick and black, though despair may fill the air, though destruction may threaten farm and factory interests, miner and magnate, the permanent sources of the country will remain. The sun will continue to shed its light and heat. The rich fertility of the soil will still be there. The rains and the dews will not stop.—Congressman James R. Mann.

This is little less than treason to the fundamental Republican doctrine of a special partnership with the Almighty which forbids the sun to shine and the rain and dews to fall and the soil to give forth its increase when the Democrats are in power and the sacred schedules are being touched with profane hands. Mr. Mann talks like a quitter, whom God Almighty hates, as Sam Fessenden said of Joe Manley. Why not say that the big crops are a...

Establishment of Some System of Rural Credits to Help Finance Modern Equipment.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Cincinnati, O.—That the greatest factor in keeping the boy on the farm would prove to be the application of power machinery to farm work through the utilization of the gas engine, was the declaration made before the convention of the Tristate Vehicle and Implement Dealers' association meeting at Music Hall by P. C. Kirtley. Mr. Kirtley told of the change in agricultural conditions. The farmer heretofore has looked to the increase in land values for his greatest profit, but from now on the scientific and intensive cultivation of the farm would be the means of his earning his profits, Mr. Kirtley asserted. This could only be done, he said, by the introduction of power machinery to the farm. The lightening of the drudgery of the farm, with the interest in mechanics which is natural to most boys, that could be cultivated by the manipulation and care of power farm implements would prove a holding power for the country boy, he predicted.

This new method of farming would bring about a big demand for agricultural implements, Mr. Kirtley declared...

MANY QUESTIONS ASKED BEARING ON POINTS AT ISSUE IN OHIO COAL CASE.

INTERESTING LEGAL PROBLEM

Large Number of Interrogatories Addressed to Four Railroads Filed With Commission.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Columbus.—Beginning their contest against the intrastate coal freight rates applicable to shipments of coal from District No. 8, Eastern Ohio, and Cambridge district, a large number of interrogatories addressed to four railways were filed with the State Public Utilities Commission. The queries were propounded by O. P. Gothlin, representing the Pittsburg Vein Operators' Association and the Cambria Coal Company, to the Pennsylvania, the Baltimore & Ohio, the New York Central and the Wheeling and Lake Erie and W. M. Duncan, receiver of the W. & L. E.

The filing of the interrogatories raises an interesting legal question. While there is a section of the utilities law which gives to the commission the power to compel attendance of witnesses and the production of books and papers, and another more general provision which makes the Civil Code, so far as applicable, apply to proceedings, the matter has never been fully tested. In the past, however, in the various proceedings that have been before the commission, answers have...

AS GOD MEASURES

Most Influential People Are Not Always Those Who Stand in the High Places.

"According to the measure of a man, that is, of an angel." Rev. 21:17.

We measure form, the angel measures spirit. We measure actions, the angel measures motives. We measure externalities, the angel measures spiritualities, and so it often happens that the judgment of the outside measurement is strangely altered, if not absolutely reversed, when things are judged "according to the measure of the angel." It might, then, be helpful to us to look round about our common life, and see in what spheres the measure of the angel might seriously alter the conclusions reached by the measure of partially earthly men.

Let us ask, then, in the first place what size is the church of the living God? How shall we measure it? You know what kind of measure is commonly used. We measure the length of the membership rolls in any particular town or city and then we add the totals together, and we say the result represents the magnitude of the church of God in that particular place.

If an angel were to measure the strength and size of the church of God would the result be larger than our combined membership rolls, or less? I have faith enough and optimism enough, to think that it would be larger.

Lesson for Disciples.

Let us look at Jesus and his disciples. The master was always seeking to break down their exclusiveness and to give them a larger measure. They came to him one day very satisfied with a little work they had been doing for him...

PREPAREDNESS AND PEACE

From the Detroit News

Now we're going to end war. Our Victor and vanquished are going to sit down in the midst of the desolation they have made, in blood. They are going to face the most difficult task of rehabilitation that man has ever faced. They are going to build around this world for each sympathy and help as they may find.

In that day, when with wounded, blind and maimed the nations of Europe look bitterness, when blind of a United States are they going to be hold?

Are they going to see a United States, armed to the teeth, standing on her coasts, shouting a challenge to anyhow "We heard you want a fight, come!"

Or are they going to see a United States with all the armament of peace and all the arts of healing and giving vitalized for the help of the nations?

That is one side of the question of preparedness. Which is not revolving in such situation as Bourbon, that no man thought he or will have avail to where we are now.

To be adequately prepared against the contingency, the course of events, we must, and we can—must, and we can—be prepared to meet and to the standard of the best military establishment in Europe on have a standing army of a million men if any other nation has it. In brief, any of I not unprofessionally, we can any other nation has it—in greatly conservative and sound course.

Our main point preparedness, of course, we know that. And that is not only contrary to the ideal—the ideal always, indeed, but it is also the ideal—we may reach out to all with the same, for who knows, the other is war there are going to be and more good standing among. Who knows, who knows the, no one can guess to be walking again to stand the colossal armament race which, falter, and the nations of Europe.

What a place of glorious honor it would be if the United States—the United States which has blundered even to peace—should endeavor to offer a militaristic nation as it very moment the world gets ready a civilized, civilizing forever!

Preparedness gets its only justification if it is done. To prepare for what may be reasonably or entirely. To prepare for what is never come to worse. The whole question and method of preparedness is dependent on a reasonable expectation. And in the light of the terrible misery of blood which the nations are wearily washing themselves and yearning for deliverance, which is the reasonable expectation of the future—war or peace? Is it reasonable to expect war? In days any nation in Europe—even this nation—is there any man who can predict—Middle—the point more war? Is there any nation in Europe today who looks other than forward to peace? Do they not all serve themselves in their new field efforts, by the thought that the end of the war will leave them better prepared?

What if, while all the rest of the world is pushing and preaching for peace the United States alone should be found preparing for war?

Can we conceive any more miserable, more tragic, more ridiculous, more, more sad?

We mean, of nothing prepare for what is coming. But we can prepare our best judgments and answerable. Observe the place of the times in question what is coming. Unprepared—we is a condition to which we are divided or nation plan to be found. But if unprepared for war is to be so passionately conditioned, what are you to say of a nation that is prepared for peace? To be unprepared for peace is to be unprepared for progress—is to be left behind in the most onward movement now known and a higher civilization.

Preparedness for peace means that we have to do scientifically so much for "organs of public opinion," and open its arm wide, it deserves, to think thought than it has received. One may imagine trouble with the editor—unofficial and still pious, that is, the editor of the Herald—and the world in the form of newspapers. The World, officially, is a good, good, good,

If You Want Foot Comfort Wear TREADEASY Shoes

Whether you walk on the hard city pavements or on Nature's carpet of grass you feel the same springy rebound at every step.

The reason for this is in the fact that the heels of Treadeasy shoes are made entirely of new, live rubber.

A cushion insole of cork gives a cool, even pressure on every part of the sole, and no jarring to disturb the nerves.

The lasts on which Treadeasy shoes are made, differ materially from any other lasts, yet the shoes look practically the same as other smart footwear on the feet.

They are made to fit the feet without twisting or pressure, and the heels are broad enough to give real support to the legs, straight under the point where the weight of the body centers.

While Treadeasy shoes are not made in any of the extreme or freak styles, they are good-looking.

They are not made for the woman who looks for and follows the extreme in style, but for that larger class of women who follow the prevailing style only so far as it conforms to comfort.

To this class the Treadeasy shoe makes its strongest appeal.

PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS

County Commissioners Plan to Make Extensive Improvements in the County

Money Saved by Votiog Dowo High Level Bridge Will Go Ioto Much More Desirable Necessities

And Paioesville Towoship is Actually Goiog to Have Some of its Tax Money Expended Where it Beloogs aod is Paid

Among the improvements now being planned by the county commissioners is a new bridge over the Chagrin river at Willoughby; a new bridge over Grand river at the foot of Furnace hill and a retaining wall to prevent part of Madison avenue from slipping into the river.

The commissioners and people of the county realize that the present Willoughby bridge is insufficient for the travel on the main highway between Cleveland and Buffalo. The new bridge being considered will be wider than the present structure and will be somewhat longer, being elevated so that the hill can be cut down and the bridge reached by an easy approach from either end.

The Furnace bridge on E. Erie street is in fair condition but is entirely inadequate for present or future demands. The commissioners plan that this bridge could be taken down and enough material secured to erect a good bridge over the river at Blair's in Leroy. Before a new bridge can be built at East Erie street, the matter of the encroachment of the New York Central company will have to be fought out. Without any legal right, it is claimed, the railroad people built the small, narrow tunnel under their tracks, shutting up all but about 20 feet of the 60 foot roadway. Commissioners have already addressed several letters to the railway people concerning this matter and it may be possible to settle the dispute out of court. The bridge the commissioners plan will be considerable wider than the one now in use and will be elevated several feet.

The building of a retaining wall on the river bank on Madison avenue, opposite the Manchester place, presents many engineering difficulties and will be a very expensive proposition. There is a sheer drop of about 70 feet from the roadway to the river bottom and the bank has caved away until the edge of the roadway has been reached. Without the construction of a retaining wall and arrangement of proper systems of draining, it will only be a short time until this main thoroughfare will be closed by a big cave in causing heavy damage to property and perhaps loss of life. These contemplated improvements, with the paving of Fairport and part of Painesville township, together with the repairs of roads, bridge, culverts, etc., which are always needed, will require a large amount of money and will keep the commissioners busy for some time to come.

Is Painesville Township Asleep?

> "The trouble with Painesville township is that YOU PEOPLE WHO LIVE IN THAT TOWNSHIP ARE ASLEEP and behind the other townships of the county in asking for road improvements. Your township trustees should wake up."—From an interview with County Commissioner Phillips of Madison.

A Review of Improved Roads in Lake County. Showing Mileage, Cost and Share of Tax Paid by Painesville Township.

Paioesville Towoship Taxpayers Pay about 14.5 per cent of Total Cost of all the County Roads, but has less than 6 per ceot of the Mileage.

The Herald has taken the time and space in this issue to make a review of the public road improvements in Lake county, and with the assistance of County Auditor Davis is enabled to publish some figures of interest to the taxpayers of the county. While the Herald has opposed some of the frills, such as proposed high level bridges, we are heartily in favor of necessary road improvements. The figures herewith given are in some instances estimated, but conservatively estimated. It is impossible to give total cost of a road for the reason that funds for many of the roads are secured with bond issues, and the interest on these bonds is not added to the cost. Again some roads are not completed and the figures quoted are the engineer's estimate of cost.

One purpose in publishing this article is to mention the fact that Lake county is rapidly approaching the tax limit, especially should our duplicate be decreased by the removal of steamboat companies, and another purpose is to try and wake up the tax payers of Painesville township to the fact that this township is not sharing in these public road improvements in the same proportion in which the township is taxed.

Painesville Township is by far the heaviest tax paying township in the county, in fact over 28 per cent of all county revenue is raised in this township alone. As the county share of an improved road will average one-half the cost, over 14 per cent of the total cost of all the improved roads in the county is paid for in this township and the total expenditure for good roads exclusive of Painesville city is nearly $800,000. We will say that $400,000 of this amount is the county share, and Painesville township must pay over one-fourth of the expenditure or $112,000. On the same basis as other roads secured in the county, with the county paying half, and the state and township and property owners paying the other half, Painesville township should have at least 15 miles of paved road instead of less than three miles at present. This would connect the county seat with the Leroy macadam road, and the Perry road, give us paved roads to Richmond and Fairport and also a road toward Chardon. Even then we would have less mileage than either Madison, Willoughby or Perry townships, all lesser taxing districts.

Painesville and Fairport and the rural residents of Painesville township should take the advice of County Commissioner Phillips and WAKE UP.

For convenience and to present the mileage of improved roads according to townships we submit a list of the roads, together with costs in each township, also a scale which at a glance gives an idea of the situation.

HENRY FORD For Universal Peace

ALL the great movements which have influenced human life and moulded human character, marking the individual, and through the individual the nation, and through the nation the world—all evolutions in civilization, in education, in religion, have had their starting point in the individual. It has always been and probably always will be one man against the world, and when that man is established on a foundation of righteous justice and true humanity he wins against the world.

The battles of man which have destroyed continents and created nations are those which have been for principles. And now at this most crucial period in the history of man there rises a champion of the everlasting principle of peace, as the absolute necessity of mankind, as the principle which shall govern all nations, if civilized humanity is to be perpetuated.

How can any man or any woman, with visions of the bloody battlefields of Europe, cry out for anything else but peace, peace universal? How can any Christian minister, how can any college professor, how can any editor, how can any publisher, how can any school teacher, how can any mother but speak a word in favor of peace? How can war be considered by intelligent men and women in the light of the civilization of today as anything else but murder, deliberate, premeditated, brutal murder? How can any man look into the soul of his own conscience and justify war? War, the destroyer, the annihilator, the plague, the pestilence, the horror, the very death of humanity! How can any man or woman in all America advocate war, or the preparation for war?

Looking beyond national wealth, or personal interests, Henry Ford calls a halt to the murderous spirit of the ages as exemplified in the horrible wars which have torn nations to pieces and held back the progress of civilization. He stands for peace, universal peace; peace without force, peace wrought through education and faith in the God of peace. Nor is his challenge to the world a cheap platitude for fame, because, he broadly declares, that all of himself and all of his wealth shall be devoted to the establishment of universal peace. His call to the American people should not be misunderstood; it is the appeal of a sincere humanity to begin now, and continue faithfully, to teach present and coming generations, the horrors, wastefulness and folly of wars, and the beauties and advantages of peace, until through this beneficent human enlightenment "swords shall be beaten into plowshares" and wars can be no more.

GERMAN TROOPS GAINING IN SERBIA

Teutons Capture What Is Said to Be Only Arsenal Left to Serbians.

BULGARIANS RECEIVE A SEVERE CHECK

In the East the Russians are Making Determined Offensive Movements, and in the West the Germans Gain French Positions.

London, Eng.—The Serbian town of Krusevac, on the railroad about 50 miles northwest of Nish, has been occupied by German troops, according to official statement given out by army headquarters staff.

With the fall of Krusevac, what is said to be the only arsenal that was left to the Serbians has passed into hostile hands, the arsenals at Nish, Kragujevatz and Pirot already having been captured.

Ninety Miles Into Interior.

The capture of Krusevac marks a southerly march of nearly 90 miles into the interior of Serbia by the Teutonic forces, the city being that distance southeast of Belgrade.

In southern Serbia the fortunes of war are less auspicious for the invaders. There the Bulgarians apparently have received a severe check from the Serbians assisted by French and British troops.

No official confirmation has been received, however, of a decisive defeat of the Bulgarians who are attempting to advance into Macedonia through Babuna pass. South of Strumitsa the French are fighting on Bulgarian soil.

Russians on Offensive.

In the east a determined offensive movement by the Russians near Riga and down along the line of the Dvina river to Dvinsk is admitted in an official Berlin statement. It is declared the attacks of the Russians, however, were repulsed with heavy losses.

In the west German troops, after a lively fight, occupied a French shell crater in the Vosges region. Capture of a portion of a trench on the Hilgenfirst also is reported.

Resources Greater Than Ever Before in Entire History of United States, Says Comptroller Williams.

Washington, D. C.—Comptroller of the Currency Williams has just announced that the resources of the national banks of the United States are greater than ever before in the entire history of the United States. His statement, in part, follows:

"The total resources of these banks on Sept. 2 exceeded by more than $424,000,000 the greatest resources ever shown in any previous call in the history of the national banking system and amounted to $12,267,090,429. [...]"

GIVES DETAILS OF DEFENSE PLANS

Secretary of War Garrison Makes Known System to Be Presented to Congress.

RECOMMENDS THREE KINDS OF TROOPS

Urges 'Continentals' as Well as Regulars and Militiamen—Scheme in Four Years Would Give United States 670,463 Defenders.

Washington, D. C.—Secretary of War Lindley M. Garrison has just given out here a statement showing the details of the plan for the defense of the nation which the administration will propose to congress. The system will provide, when in complete operation, a regular army of 141,843 officers and enlisted men costing $127,234,559.70; a National Guard of 129,000 officers and men, costing the federal government $10,000,000, and a "continental army" of 400,000 officers and men costing $45,000,000.

Accumulation of reserve material, seacoast defenses and other provisions make the total cost of the plan for the first year $182,717,036.06; second year, $212,815,879.70; third and fourth years, each, $238,315,879.70. Thereafter the plan will be in full operation with the cost $162,234,559.70.

Secretary Garrison admits his plan is not ideal from a strictly military point of view, but thinks it is as good as could be devised when regard is had for constitutional and legal provisions and American institutions and sentiments. He says:

Wise Military Preparations.

"The essential, the imperative thing is to make such wise military preparations and take such wise precautions as are presently possible. These reasons dispose of many suggestions which are entirely worthy of consideration from a military standpoint, but which could not be made effective under existing conditions. Military systems based upon universal military service upon conscription or upon national control of the public school system, fall under this head as also does any policy which can only be made operative by a constitutional amendment [...]"

Washington, D. C.—The state department has just made public the text of the note to Great Britain, delivered several days ago on the subject of trade interference. SEIZURE OF SHIPS OR THEIR CARGOES

Will Be Made the Subject of a Special Protest to Great Britain.

WILL PUT QUESTION UP TO CONGRESS

Officials Realized That When They Protested the Blockade of Neutral Ports a New and Grave Danger Arose.

Washington, D. C.—The next seizure and detention by Great Britain of an American ship or cargo bound to a neutral port will be made the subject of a special protest by the state department, which may even demand disavowal of the act. Such a protest, it is believed, will have the effect of throwing into congress the whole question of aggression by the allies on American commerce.

The Pivotal Point.

Neither Secretary of State Lansing nor any of the higher officials of the government will admit officially the character of the next representations to Great Britain. This much, however, is certain. The United States has declared that the blockade by Great Britain of the ports of Holland, Norway and Sweden is illegal. This declaration, whether it be admitted or denied by Great Britain, furnishes the pivotal point on which a protest on new grounds can be made. It is stated that if between now and the time Great Britain answers the note published Monday she stops an American vessel on the high seas which is bound for a neutral port, the United States must ask her to disavow the seizure. If, however, Great Britain in such case should contend that the vessel seized is owned or partly owned by Germans, the case would be duly considered by diplomatic exchanges. Even in such a case the United States will maintain that the evidence of such ownership should be obtained during the actual search of the vessel at sea.

A Grave Danger.

Officials here realize that when this government told Great Britain that her blockade of neutral ports was illegal, a new grave danger arose. It is admitted that the state department must of necessity apply its rule to any case [...]

PARTY'S RECORD BAD

Country's Revenues Wasted by the Republicans.

Millions Thrown Away on "Pork," and Yet Leaders Presume to Advise Democrats as to Proper Method of National Defense.

National defense is not a partisan matter, but it is just as well to say right now that the administration and the Democratic majority in both houses of congress would do well to pay scant attention to Republican counsels.

The present comparative helplessness of the United States is directly and specifically the result of Republican blindness, Republican carelessness and Republican "pork."

The Republican party had absolute control of the nation's affairs for sixteen years. It managed so well that at the end of that time the trained reserve of the United States army consisted of sixteen men. It saw the Spanish war increase our responsibilities and difficulties at least tenfold, yet was content with an army less than four times as great as had sufficed during our previous isolation, while our fleet takes a lower rank among the navies of the world today than it did in 1898.

Through all those sixteen years, in spite of repeated warnings, the Republican party was spending enormous sums on "pork," putting $5,000,000 into a single "fort" on the bleak, inaccessible plains of Wyoming for the benefit of Senator Warren; building navy yards in Maine that no battleship could reach, for the benefit of Senator Hale, wasting the nation's money on every side. And yet this is the party which comes forward now and claims a monopoly of wisdom in the matter of national defense!

Such impudence is sublime, but not convincing. President Wilson and the Democratic majority in congress can get all the advice they need from trained experts in the army and navy. They do not need any counsel from Senator Warren, Reed Smoot, Gussie Gardner, or any other Republican wiseacre.—Chicago Journal.

WHERE NATIONAL DEFENSE IS NEEDED

Mr. Cornelius Donovan, president of the Tenants Union of New York City presents to the conscriptionists of England and the preparationists of the United States some facts which they should consider. Here is one for them to explain with something else than abuse:

"England has not established justice for her plain people, and has forgot to conserve their freedom, and for this neglect and omission she is paying a fearful price. "Recently a Government agitator, in an effort to rouse the patriotism of a great meeting of men and persuade some to enlist, exhibited a collection of cottages, and asked, 'are these houses worth fighting for?'

"A voice from the crowd shouted 'AYE! Let the man that owns them fight for them!' The owner might have been an English Astor.

"It is not unreasonable to ask men to fight for their homes, to strike for their altars and their fires, for the green graves of their sires. But what manner of man will fight for a lodging house, the ministrations of the Salvation Army, or the privilege of decent burial in the potters' field.

"To force men to go off to the trenches to defend a government that has not defended them, though instituted for that very purpose, a Government that has been perverted and made the most potent instrument of their exploitation and oppression, is tyranny indeed.

"The lawyers who are governing Britain have not been good enough to restore to its citizens their ancient right of access to the soil which made them the freest people in all Europe. They have not compelled restitution of the commons stolen from them while they were fighting Napoleon; a perfidy that caused Byron to ask Wellington the question, 'Who, my lord, but you and yours, have gained by Waterloo?' England's government has nurtured a blighting parasite that has injured the saving patriotism of her inhabitants, and now leaves her nearly naked to her enemies.

"Let Americans be warned by the pitiable predicament of Great Britain and wipe from their own Constitution and statutes the great number of parasitic eggs that have been stealthily planted in them by the cuckoos of absorbing privilege.

"Already the soil of the United States is in the legal possession of too few to give employment to myriads of persons who were born in the country.

"If the Congress at its coming session can be persuaded to be Constitutional to the extent or extreme of establishing justice, it will return to the straight and narrow paths laid by the men of '76, revoke the tribute taking titles to the earth, and take for the support of the Government, the annual values of the opportunities of the country collected by the States. The conservatives who control the Congress and the State Legislatures must be roused to an appreciation of the danger of delaying those concessions. An unprecedented hunger and thirst for injustice has come to the masses of Americans. This can only be satisfied by an equitable distribution of the vast wastes of wealth that surround and amaze them. The growing knowledge that the few have become ultra rich and the many condemned to poverty, by the perverted powers of their own Government, is filling the people with anger and anarchy. No strength of Government, no preparedness that can be imagined, can save these traitors and the beneficiaries of the treason from the wrath of an outraged public when at last aroused."

Before Congress proceeds to spend money to ward off a danger that only exists in the imagination of certain excitable individuals, let it legislate against a great enemy that is already at work in this country—Predatory Privilege. Armies and navies are no defense against that enemy, and while it is allowed to oppress the people undisturbed, there is no reason why they should worry about another enemy that has not yet appeared.

WILL THEY TAKE THE HINT?

The defeat of the constitutional amendment extending the terms of county officials to four years brings the following interesting comment upon the same from the observant Columbus correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer:

One mighty good thing came out of the referendum upon the constitutional amendment to lengthen the terms of county officials, which was walloped by a million, more or less. It showed up the alleged strength of the combined and leagued county court house rings in Ohio. For years they have been scaring the General Assembly out of its boots, threatening Governors, ballyhooing the reporters and brow-beating the mere citizens. Last winter they had the lawmakers so badly frightened that only some strong-armed work saved the passage of a law extending the terms of County Auditors. It was only an eleventh-hour difficulty that prevented the same lawmakers from submitting, with their approval, a constitutional amendment similar to the one defeated last Tuesday. The county officials had conned the legislature into believing that the million voters of the state were fairly aching to get an opportunity to vote for the extension. Because no way could be found to provide for the election of Congressmen the resolution was laid aside and before it could be taken up again the adjournment came. Now that the people have spoken the county official seems to have been sized up just about at his proper proportions. Hereafter when they come down upon the General Assembly like the Assyrian upon the ancient Hebrews they won't get any farther than the foot of the steps. In the old days, when politics had its roots in the county conventions, the boys from the court house were some pumpkins, because they could deliver delegates. In this way they controlled the nomination of lawmakers and succeeded in enacting those lovely old fee and salary bills which made some of them rich. The direct primary and the I. and R., it seems, have put them on the blow card. They aren't any more powerful than the next man, and what the people think of them is shown by the returns last week. These few kindly words are uttered in the hope that the court house lads will take a tumble to themselves, because most of them are really good fellows with a disordered perspective. If they hop out next year and try to nominate an Auditor of State, as it now seems assured, good-night and good-bye to the nominee.

"FEAR MEN"

Bradstreet's is authority for the statement that only three per cent of men who go into business for themselves are successful. It is safe to assume that the proportion of successes in other fields, art, music, authorship, politics, social work, etcetera, is as small. The failures are made so through FEAR. Fear of consequences, fear of the future, fear that we cannot finish successfully what we begin, fear of our opponent, and with an apparently impassable arm bars our progress. Those whom fear rules we call "Fear men," because they are not really men at all but men requiring a classification, an apology. There has hardly been a time in American history when men were called on more to overcome their fear than at the present time. Moral strength is needed in politics more than ever before, and moral strength is as far superior to physical strength as the spiritual is above the natural. It is told of Wellington that, before the battle of Waterloo, his knees shook so that he laughed and called attention to them saying "If they knew where I was going to carry them they would shake much worse." That was moral courage overcoming physical fear, and this is the courage that men must have now if America is to go onward and upward. We must have moral courage to overcome the selfish persuasion of the politician, who seeks his own advancement regardless of the public good. Moral courage is necessary to make men follow the dictates of their own conscience, regardless of the arguments of politicians, ministers, leagues or individuals. The time has come for American men to throw off the fetters of fear—to come out boldly for what they believe, to refuse to follow the selfish, money grasping politician or organization and to stand strongly for progress, liberty, decency and social liberty.

ARE WORKERS UNDERPAID

Colonel H. O. S. Heistand of the United States Army in an effort to boost enlistments, shows that immediately on enlistment, a man is given board, clothing, housing, medical insurance, and $15.00 a month. He can deposit his savings with the government and get 4 per cent interest. If he saves half of his pay, he can retire after 30 years service with $9000, which at 4 per cent will give him $30 a month and which added to his retired pay would give him an income of $65 a month. If he cared to study in the army school to become an electrician, musician, baker or cook, he would be worth on retirement $24,000 and have an income of $170 a month.

Colonel Heistand makes one of two things very clear. Either the enlisted man is very much overpaid or the ordinary laborer in civil life is underpaid. If the army cook or baker can get a good living and save enough to retire in 30 years with an assured income of $170 a month, why should not the cook or baker in civil life?

If the enlisted man is overpaid, then he is prospering at the expense of workers in civil life. If he is not overpaid, then there is something very wrong with conditions that prevent the worker in civil life from doing at least equally as well. If the United States government is sure that the soldiers earn all that they get, then it is committing a great injustice against civil workers, when it allows conditions to exist that prevent them from getting as much.

Prohibition was again decisively defeated in Ohio, but by a reduced adverse majority. Evidently Mr. Bryan's week in the state told heavily for the dry cause.

The family came to Painesville from Connecticut, the father having secured work in the Vulcan plant shortly before it shut down. They then moved to Concord and the father got work in Cleveland. Three months ago the mother was taken seriously ill and taken to the hospital in Painesville. She is now being cared for at the home of Mrs. Fred Oliver, a little better but still too sick to go home. This left five children, three boys and two girls, the eldest 14 years old, alone. Kind neighbors took the two little girls and the three boys have been doing their own cooking and work ever since the mother was taken sick. Thursday morning Roy was handling a shot gun and accidentally shot his two brothers, Paul aged 5, and Lorne aged 14, one getting part of the charge in the face and the other in the leg. Rural Credit and Rural Thrift

The South and the West and the Northern agricultural states have much to learn in the way of rural thrift from the New England rural communities. The constant cry is easier credit for the farmer, but what the farmer most needs is more thrift. Some of the Southern states are cursed with crop lien laws which are holding back the rural communities by allowing a man to mortgage his future work and hopes and keeps him continually in debt instead of allowing him to lay something aside. It is an astonishing fact that Massachusetts has five times more savings bank deposits than have twelve southern states. In Massachusetts there are 3,300,000 people and 2,250,000 of them have savings bank deposits. In three years the savings banks in connection with the public schools showed 1,400,000 deposits. Every school in the rural communities ought to have a course of "thrift talks," whereby the teacher could lay before the scholars the necessity of saving a portion of whatever money they might earn. This money could be deposited in savings banks, and, later, when it has grown, could be used to purchase good, safe bonds paying three and one-half to five per cent interest. The child mind, as well as the minds of those who are older, should be impregnated with the fact that it is not what one earns that makes a competency for old age, but what one lays aside.

The Man From Home

Gee, but I'm glad I met you;
Just put it here, old man;
How's that? A drink? You bet you—
And smoke? I guess I can!
There's a table in the corner—
Take a chair, and let's sit down—
Gee, but it's nice to meet a guy
From your home town!

I still get the home town paper—
Mother sends it down to me—
Since that little college caper
I have not been home, you see—
So I've been a sort of exile—
Well; here's to you; drink her down,
Gee, but it's nice to meet a guy
From your home town!

I still read about the doings
Of the people I once knew;
The engagements and the woonings,
And the oyster suppers, too—
Tell me, how are all the home folks,
And my sweetheart, Mary Brown?
Gee, but it's nice to meet a guy
From your home town!

What's that? She's gone to Vassar?
And she drives a limousine—
There's nobody that can pass her?
And she dresses like a queen?
They have cabarets in Painesville,
And on quilting bees they frown?
GEE! But it's nice to meet a guy
From your home town!

Every Barren Spot Can Grow Flowers

"There is no place so small, no rock so barren that it cannot be made to bloom," says Prof. P. A. Elwood, landscape gardening expert of the Ohio State University in urging the use of spring flowering bulbs to restore the barren places and please mother nature in her gayest moods.

"Select a partially shaded spot, a slope if possible for the crocus, snowdrops, narcissus and grape hyacinths," says Prof. Elwood, "and if fertilized slightly in the spring with liquid manure or potash they will appear earlier and produce better and more lasting flowers." The bulbs can be planted in thick clumps or colonies letting these thin out and scatter toward the edges of the planting. Where it is not possible to give good winter mulching, plant an inch deeper than usual. For brookside locations use German, Spanish and Japanese iris. These when planted near each other give a continuous bloom for over a month and a half. The Spanish and Japanese varieties are hardy and their coloring approach that of the orchid.

Lost Hopes

It is understood that Painesville advocates of a bridge here have joined forces with those Painesville business men who are behind the move to get a bridge over the Grand river in Painesville.

The bond issue carried by 102 votes in precincts A, B, and D, but results of precinct G have not been learned. It is understood that considerable opposition to the bridge developed in the eastern part of Lake county and this, combined with the apathetic attitude of the people of this part of the county, combined to defeat the issue.

If advocates of a high level bridge over the Grand river begin their campaign, it is believed that they will be successful because the majority of the county's population lives in the center of the county. And if this bridge bond issue carries, the tax rate of the county will be raised until Willoughby's chances of a bridge will have gone "a-ghmmoring." — Willoughby Delta.

Mammoth Flower

A special car for one chrysanthemum presided over by a bridge engineer of a railroad! Never heard of such a thing! Neither did any one else until arrangements were made by Mr. M. A. Vinson, Secretary of the Cleveland Flower Show, with the New York Central Railroad to transport one of Mr. Adolph Lewisohn's prize chrysanthemums from his greenhouses at Ardsley, N. Y., to the Flower Show which will be held at Cleveland from November 10th to 15th.

The plant is 15 feet across its umbrella like formation and is covered with 1,200 blossoms, making it literally a gigantic bouquet. An object of such a size cannot be loaded on an ordinary freight car and the problem of clearance under bridges was a perplexing one. The matter went to the Engineering Department of the Railroad and a heavy ordnance car was reconstructed to accommodate the plant and provide the bridge clearances. The immense plant will be packed on edge, the lower edge resting within six inches of the rails, and the upper just clearing some of the bridges by four or five inches.

Economical Lunches for School Children

Do you often wonder what to put in the lunch basket for the school children? Do you want to provide a variety which will please them and at the same time be wholesome and economical? Then try the folowing: (1) brown bread and butter sandwich, ham sandwich, apples, water and milk (2) cottage cheese sandwich, bread and butter sandwich, apple sauce and a bottle of lemonade; (3) deviled eggs, stewed prunes, nuts, bread and butter sandwiches and a bottle of milk; (4) chicken sandwich and jam sandwich, a small pickle, an apple and a small piece of cake with some crackers thrown in for recesses; (5) beef stew, cookies, apples, lettuce and bread sandwich. Meat substitutes can be used in school lunches nicely and celery, fruit, and other appetizing food may be added.

HAS MANY WESTERN TASTES

Emperor of Japan Is by No Means Altogether Eastern in His Manner of Living.

A native Tokyo paper has published a series of articles about the home life at the Imperial palace. The late Meiji emperor, it seems, was devoted to native dishes, but his majesty Yoshihito, reared on more modern lines, has broader tastes in food. On the other hand, the late emperor used a foreign bedstead, while the present monarch prefers to lie on Japanese quilts. There is now a billiard room, an imperial bathtub, and electric lighting.

While the Meiji emperor preferred Japanese cooking, particularly of the Kyoto style, which uses more salt than the Tokyo cookery, the Taisho emperor takes more kindly to western diet. His breakfast consists of bread, milk and coffee, as a rule the luncheon also is usually Yoshoku, but the dinner pure Japanese.

His taste in food is that of a connoisseur. The emperor fancies the salmon trout of Lake Chuzenji. During a summer sojourn at Nikko one year, the cook tried a substitute, but at the first morsel it was detected. For reasons of health he does not take any sake, but a little sherry or other wine occasionally.

His majesty wears the uniform of a general, even in private, till after the evening ablution, when he wears a crested kimono.

SHOCK CAUSED HIS DEATH

Soldier's Lungs Burst by the Explosion of Shell That Fell Within a Yard of Him.

The London Lancet tells of several cases of soldiers who have been killed by shells, although the men were not touched.

"M. Sencert," it says, "reports to the Societe de Chirurgie the case of a man who was killed without being hit, though he was less than a yard away from the point of explosion of a bursting shell of large caliber. He had not even been grazed by any metallic fragment and had no external wound, but at the necropsy both his lungs were found to be burst.

"Many deaths under similar circumstances have been noted since the outbreak of the war, for which various more or less complicated explanations have been given. Fulminating toxic gases from the explosion and sudden nervous shock have been suggested as causes. M. Sencert points out that these hypotheses are unnecessary and that a purely mechanical cause is a sufficient explanation."

Explaining His One Little Lapse.

"Hold on a minute, muh brodder!" interrupted good old Parson Bagster. Soldiers' Cinema Instruction.

Twelve months before the outbreak of the war the Germans taught new recruits in nearly every garrison town such minor military activities as mounting guard, getting up tents, bayonet drill, and doing sentinel duty by means of specially-prepared motion picture films. They have used motion pictures also to illustrate other military activities, such as building bridges, destroying railways, throwing up earthworks, erecting barricades for street fighting, springing mines, and laying pontoons. To popularize the army the German government made special films of the great military maneuvers of 1913, and motion-picture houses in all parts of the country exhibited the pictures without charge.

Lost Hand Digging Grave.

Grave digging is not an extra hazardous occupation, even though in excavating graves it is necessary to use dynamite to break hardpan, the industrial insurance department has decided. The department rejected the claim of John Borgford, a Seattle sexton, whose left hand was partly blown off by a dynamite cap.

Although use of explosives generally makes a class extra hazardous, the general occupation of grave digging is such a peaceful one that exception cannot be made when blasting is necessary, the commission holds.—Olympia (Wash.) Dispatch to the Portland Oregonian.

GOT HOLD OF WRONG HOSE

Colored Man Intended to Make Paste, But Instead He Landed in the Police Court.

Covered with white from head to foot, the prisoner looked like a snow man.

"With what is this man charged?" asked the court.

"I saw a white cloud," replied Officer 666, "and I thought he was trying to blow up a building."

"What have you to say for yourself?"

For answer the prisoner puffed out a little white cloud and coughed up enough flour to make a batch of biscuits.

"Can't you speak?"

A negative shake of the man's head sent flour into the atmosphere like hair from a woolly dog.

"Are you a baker?"

This time the man managed to mumble a half-smothered "No."

"Then what on earth are you?"

After several false starts the prisoner finally blurted

"Bill poster."

"Did you fall into a flour bin?"

Rubbing his face until a dusky skin began to show through its white coating, the prisoner explained:

"No, sah. W'en I run out ob paste dis mawnin', I filled a bucket wif flouah an' went across de street, where I saw a big hose by de side ob a building. I put de nozzle ob de hose into de bucket, but at first de handle wouldn't turn. I gabe one big twist an'—an' den it happened!"

"What happened?"

"Dat hose wasn't foah fillin' pails at all; it was foah fillin' automobile tiahs!"—Judge.

HAD CONFIDENCE IN PEOPLE

California Newsboy Lost Nothing by Trusting to the Honesty of His Customers.

Most people are honest, so, at least, reasons a newsboy in a California town, and he has clear justification for his confidence. The reporter of the following incident was in a downtown drug store when a stranger came in with a copy of a newspaper and asked change for a dime. He said that he wanted to pay for his newspaper. Someone remarked that for his part he let the newsboys find their own change.

"This newsboy cannot do it," said the man with the newspaper. "Come out here and look at him." Two or three bystanders stepped to the door, expecting to see a crippled boy with a pile of newspapers to sell. Instead, they saw a tin can with a hole in the top large enough to admit a nickel; a pile of newspapers lying upon the walk, and a card fastened to the can, reading:

"Gone to Sunday school for one hour. If you want a paper, take one, and put your nickel in the can."

The can and pile of newspapers stood unprotected on the walk for more than an hour while their little owner was at Sunday school. Men who passed by and were attracted by the rather odd little news stand would stop, read the sign, pick up a paper and put a nickel—and sometimes a dime—into the little tin can. When the boy returned from Sunday school he found all his newspapers gone, and more nickels in the tin can than there were papers when he left.—Youth's Companion.

Child's Allowance.

Should boys and girls have their own allowance, in proportion to the means of the parents, as soon as they are old enough to know the value of money? This is what many a parent has said in substance:

"Certainly. An allowance is the best safeguard against the habit of extravagance, if the child is taught to spend the money judiciously and to keep a strict account of all expenditures. It is absurd to think that a boy is not capable of buying his own neckties or a girl her handkerchiefs. What if they do make mistakes? They can be taught to profit by them and they must learn to rely upon themselves sooner or later. Children like to be trusted and will seldom betray confidence."

Woman Can Keep Secret.

Can a woman keep a secret? A bishop says she can't. And he ought to know. But he doesn't, say the women. "Don't tell church secrets to your wife," the bishop advised a bunch of laymen, "because they will be no longer secrets." And the women come right back just like this: "The worst gossips and betrayers of confidence are of masculine gender. How do most women who spread secrets obtain possession of them in the first place? From their husbands, of course. Doesn't the fact that a woman usually conceals any truth damaging to herself prove that she can keep a secret?" So there.

Unhandy Coins.

Among the strangest coins in the world are those used in certain out-of-the-way towns and villages in southwest Algeria, on the west coast of Africa, and called the "manilas." In shape they resemble a horseshoe with the two extremities flattened out like a camel's foot. Being made of solid copper, three-eighths of an inch thick, they weigh over eight ounces each. In "face value" seven of these queer coins are equivalent to one quarter, so that a dollar's worth would be an uncomfortably heavy load!

President and the War Power.

The president of the United States cannot declare war on his own initiative. The war rests with the congress, and after that body has declared war the president can proclaim it, but not until then.

GREAT NEED TO STOP WASTE

Lesson That Should Be Impressed on America by the Frightful War in Europe.

Waste is the crime of today, and it is especially the great crime of this awful war: waste in human life, in hope, in love, and in the common savings of us all. Millions of dollars' worth of the savings of the people of this earth, all of them our brothers and our sisters, are daily burned up, exploded, and wasted in the madness of the nations; and even that is a trifle when we compare it to the great human value of the lives that are lost. It will not make any people rich; and we Americans, rarely fortunate in not being involved in the awful strife, shall find our part of the burden to bear. Some time the war will be over, and then waste must stop, it must stop if we are to advance to humanity and civilization over and beyond the yawning gap made by the lust of blood, pride of race, and the vanity of kings. The war has been in progress but a little while and already the cost of it is being borrowed from future generations, extra hard labor and sweat must come from infants now at their mothers' breasts, to make good this debauch of blood and fire. And in the very measure that we waste is the sentence at hard labor upon the rising generation prolonged. We cannot get out of it by being American; the debt is upon us, in unequal measure it is true, but the debt, the obligation to make up the losses, is upon us all.—Atlantic.

PALESTINE MAY HAVE BOOM

Capitalists Planning to Make It a Great Tourist Center After the War.

The allies already have reached an understanding regarding the disposition of the Holy Land and of the mosque of St. Sofia in Constantinople in the event of the fall of the Turkish empire, according to information reaching here from England through missionary channels.

The plan, these reports says, is to make the Holy Land more accessible to travelers and to develop it as more of a tourist center than it has been under Turkish rule. St. Sofia, according to the same information, is to become a cathedral of the Russian church.

British capitalists are represented as already looking over the ground in Palestine with a view to the construction of trolley lines, the development of agriculture and the construction of modern hotels. A seaport which will be adapted to the expected increase in commerce is included in the plan. The capitalists behind the venture are said to be favorable to the Zionist plan of populating Palestine with Jews from other countries. Missionary leaders are interested in the scheme as affording a center of Christian inspiration and worship.

Feel Shortness of Flax.

The shortage of flax and flaxseed is a very serious matter for Ireland, and to a question by Sir John Lonsdale, in the house of Commons, as to what steps the government is taking to obtain a supply, Mr. Russell makes the following reply: "The Department of Agriculture have fully recognized the importance of procuring raw flax and flaxseed for Ireland. They have been, and are at present, in communication on the subject with the foreign office and with various associations and persons in the north of Ireland interested in the flax industry. A considerable quantity of flaxseed has already been imported for this year's sowing, and the department understand that more Russian seed is on its way to Ireland. There appears, however, to be difficulty in obtaining guaranties of the nature required by the Russian government in regard to the destination of consignments."

Fireproof Clothes.

Dr. William H. Perkin, the English chemist, has found a method of making cotton cloth absolutely fireproof, so that it will not burn even when held in a gas-flame. One fireproof garment was unharmed by twenty washings, and another which had been worn for two years and washed every week. Neither could be burned, though the latter was worn almost to rags. This fireproof cloth costs about a penny a yard more than untreated cloth.

Not only will this fireproofed material be found suitable for the manufacture of clothes for firemen, but it may also be used by women for the finest party dresses, the most delicately-colored fabrics being unharmed by the process and even given a softer appearance. For children's clothes it should be particularly desirable, since it is likely to prevent many accidents.

Boer "Seer" Began Revolt.

The British official report on the South African rebellion now issued traced the trouble back to one Van Rensburg, a notorious "seer," who announced that he saw a vision of seven bulls fighting, and a gray bull victorious. The gray bull Van Rensburg recognized at once as Germany.

Van Rensburg is a farmer, who gained a reputation as a prophet in the last war. He made his luckiest hit by prophesying that General Delarey would defeat Lord Methuen, and as the prophecy came off, he has ever since been regarded as a man with miraculous powers. His adhesion to the revolt of Kemp and Beyers had a great influence over the more ignorant Boers.

A MIDNIGHT COON HUNT

Two Experienced Hunters and Two Lake County Farmers Initiate a Party of Painesville Boys Into the Mysteries of the Sport

Did you ever go "coon" hunting?

Well, if you never did, believe this statement—that it is one of the most exciting, exhilerating, wierd and strenuous of all out-door recreations, compared with, which fishing, squirrel and rabbit hunting and kindred sports are insignificant. A couple of "coon" trips will make a corpulent person lose more avoirdupois than a fake fat-reducer ever dared to guarantee for his remedy; the lean and angular fellow, who feels muscle-bound and stiff, will be able to cavort about as nimbly as a colt in a 2-acre lot on a frosty morning, while others, whose joints are stiff and twitch with the pangs of "rheumatiz," will quickly get rid of his charley horse and feel like jumping in the air and cracking his heels together as he did when a boy. Are you worried over business cares or troubled with insomnia? Go coon hunting! If you do not sleep soundly for several nights afterward—well, you needn't believe us,—ask any old coon hunter and he will tell you it is true.

The season for hunting raccoon opened the first of November and a party of Painesville boys was organized for a hunt Saturday night. None of them had ever hunted coon, but all had heard many stories told by their grandfathers and uncles and all were keen to be initiated into its mysteries.

It was decided that a couple of experienced coon hunters should be secured to accompany the party and act as guides, and the boys were fortunate in getting Fred I. Wright and "Ed" Vesey to go along. Messrs Wright and Vesey are the joint owners of a fine hound—Ranger—one of the best coon dogs in Ohio, it is said, and you would quickly say so if you saw him work. When on a coon trail, and the scent is keen, his deep-toned bay rings through the silent woodland and over the cliffs and gulleys with as much vibration as a village church-bell on a Sabbath morning. Mr. Vesey is a real coon hunter, and what he doesn't know about the sport and woodcraft isn't worth knowing. His idea about a coon hunt is to go where the dog goes—and that's going some.

The two hunters suggested that the party go out to Art Gray's place, a prosperous farmer living about six miles south of Painesville, near the Cascade Falls on Big Creek.

Gray is always ready for a coon hunt, they said. Baskets were packed with lunch, lanterns and flash lights were secured and two big autos whirled out in a short time over the macadam road to the Gray farm. But Mr. Gray wasn't at home, his mother said.

"He is expecting you, but went up the road a ways to help a neighbor unload a barrel of cider. He will be back shortly. But won't you come in the house and wait until he returns," she concluded, with true Lake county hospitality.

But Vesey was impatient for the hunt and declined her invitation with thanks. The old hound was the first to leap out of the machine and had made for the woods. The others of the party fell to work getting the baskets, lights and other paraphernalia ready.

"Wait a minute," said Vesey, "I'll go across the road and see if "Gene" Kellogg will go along." Mr. Kellogg is a neighbor of Gray's, and also a successful farmer. He was at home, sitting by the fireside, reading a copy of the HERALD.

"Would he go coon hunting?" His answer was to kick off his slippers, pull on a heavy pair of boots and light a lantern. His wife had already started to prepare a basket of lunch. "I'm ready, boys, if you are." And he sure was. Mr. Kellogg was the oldest in the party—along in the 60's perhaps, but he proved to be the spryest one of all, notwithstanding that he had walked to Little Mountain and back that same day. He certainly has coon hunting enthusiasm.

By this time a "hello" came from up the road and in a moment Gray appeared. "I hardly expected you fellows before 10 or 11 o'clock—you know there's a moon tonight and I'm afraid we won't get any coon unt. she goes down and it's good and dark," he said, with the confidence of one who knew what he was talking about. This rather dampened the ardor of the inexperienced ones, but after a consultation it was decided to take a chance and start at once rather than wait for complete darkness, which is the best time to find coon running.

Kellogg and Vesey led the way back through a meadow towards a deep ravine they were headed while the boys strung along, with Gray near the center and Wright in the rear to keep a watch that none of the slower footed got lost. The trail led along the top of the gulley for a distance, then suddenly the leaders started down the steep incline to reach a small creek, where they had heard old Ranger working. It was everyone for himself going down that hill. "It was like jumping off the bank of Grand river near the city," one of the fellows said, but all arrived safely at the bottom in time. Down the creek the dog started. Back and forth across the run he went and how often the boys had to cross in an attempt to follow, none of them counted. Most of the boys wore shoes, but none got wet feet, for Kellogg and Gray, who knew every foot of the ground, showed the shallow places to cross. The creek was followed until within a few rods of Cascade Falls, when the party turned up the hill and after much puffing and blowing, in a short time stood on the cliff 86 feet above the Cascade Falls.

But during all this time Ranger had failed to scent the track of a coon. Gray was right. It was yet too light. But none were discouraged.

"Boys," suggested Kellogg, "let's follow up Big Creek for a mile or so. It's an ideal spot for coon up there a ways, and by the time we get there and have a little lunch, it will be past midnight and the moon will be down." All were willing. The party did not follow the windings of the creek but cut across country, in order to allow Ranger to "work" a couple of corn fields where the owners said raccoon had been in the habit of feeding. But nothing doing. Finally after a climb up a long hill, a big woods was reached. Traversing this woodland and down another hill the creek was reached and crossed, near a deep ravine. Up this ravine, climbing over fallen logs and creeping through thick underbrush the party went, and the flashes of battery lights and lanterns of the party presented a wierd spectacle in that midnight hour and darkness. A vessel was filled with water from a spring, to make coffee later on and once again another steep hill—"hog back"—Kellogg called it, was climbed. At the top and all around was woods. "Here's where we camp, boys," said Kellogg, and in a twinkling he had scraped a pile of leaves together, struck a match and soon had a roaring fire going. Baskets were unpacked, coffee made, fresh sausages stuck on sticks and roasted and all fell to a hearty meal. The warm meal and fire made most of the party drowsy, and they lay around the fire like a lot of Indians, but comfortable, I guess they were.

"We'll wait here a while and give Ranger a chance to work these woods," said Vesey and no one objected.

"Say, Gene," said Gray, addressing Kellogg, and evidently in a reminiscent mood, as all lay around the fire on couches of leaves, smoking and resting, "do you remember that coon hunt we had up here several years ago, when we found so many coons?"

"Which one?" grunted Kellogg, gazing in the fire, and failing to recall any particular hunt, for he had been out so many times with Gray.

"Why, don't you remember; over there on the other ridge, where we found so many coons in that big red oak tree," continued Gray. "Boys, that was the best coon hunt I ever had. Our dogs chased a big coon for about a mile and he made straight for a big hollow red oak. When we got there the dogs were barking like mad. I held my lantern up, and its an actual fact, I could see the bark on that tree swell in and out as though it was made of rubber. I couldn't make it out at all, but when we cut the tree down, derned if it wasn't packed so full of coons that every time they breathed it would cause the tree to swell in and out. 'We—"

"Listen," said Kellogg, holding up his hand for silence. "I hear your hound, boys."

Gray, interrupted, didn't finish his story, and if he had, it's a bet the climax must have been a beaut.

"Come on boys," said Wright, "that's Ranger, and he's after something hot." All jumped to their feet, baskets hastily packed, the fire banked with dirt so it could not spread and away they went helter skelter through the darkness, falling over logs and underbrush towards the sound made by the deep tongued dog—a mile away it seemed. Vesey and Kellogg were first to reach the tree where Ranger had a coon. The dog sat on his haunches and was emitting the most unearthly howls that only a coon hound can make.

In a short time all of the boys had assembled around the tree, breathless from the long chase which the coon and dog had led them, but all eager to observe what would develop next. One of the fellows, who had carried a heavy shotgun for miles without a murmur, vowed he'd put an end to Mr. Coon if he could get a glimpse of him. But the intense darkness in the tree top was the coon's protection. Finally Vesey, volunteered to climb the tree. He spat upon his hands and with much labor and energy succeeded in reaching the first limb of the oak tree. On the next limb up lay the coon. Vesey climbed to the limb, jumped vigorously upon it and with a crash the coon dropped to the earth below, quickly followed by the hunter. The hound was ready below. No sooner had the wild animal struck ground 'ere Ranger was upon him. For five minutes the struggle was equal, but the dog's "ring" experience proved too much and soon was in his death agonies with the dog's teeth in his throat. A shot from a pistol terminated the coon's career.

About this time most of the party began to feel the effects of the chase. They were a long ways from home. Some lay down on the frost bitten leaves to rest, but not Mr. Kellogg. "Me for the hay," he said, and started homeward. The return trip was in a different direction, but the going was if anything worse. The hills seemed miles down and miles up. The underbrush was so dense that at times one had to crawl under it. The creek was crossed and re-crossed several times. All at once the hound again sounded his cry of chase. Weariness and exhaustion were forgotten in a moment. Down into a big revine the dog went and at the bottom started to bay. It was a big 'possum, which didn't have time to tree before Ranger had him. Nothing further eventful occurred, until within a quarter of a mile of Kellogg's home, in a corn field, the dog struck another trail. All hastened forward. But Wright, who was in the lead, yelled to the boys to keep back. "Twas a skunk, he said. That game being out of season, the dog was called off and the odoriferous feline was allowed to pursue its nocturnal course unmolested.

When Gray's house was reached, a vote was taken to decide whether to continue hunting or go home. It was then 3 A. M. "I'm sure there's coon running in my woods, come on." Seven of the boys were game, including Gray Vesey and Wright. The others returned to Painesville. It was broad daylight when those who remained got back to the Gray home. They had treed one coon but it had holed in a hollow tree and was safe.

Then a fire was built, and all sat around listening to Gray's stories.

When they returned to the house Mrs. Gray wanted them to come in and have some buckwheat cakes and maple syrup, but as all wanted to get home, they declined.

Rev. Betes and wife of Fairport were painfully bruised when their Ford car struck a telephone pole near Unionville. The accident was caused by trying to dodge the machine of a rural carrier who was on the wrong side of the highway.

A Japanese, telling of his own marvelous economy, explained that his family used a fan for several generations. "We open the fan," he said, "but we don't wear it out by waving it. Oh, no! We hold it still, like this, under our nose and wave our face."

Mrs. W. C. Austin escaped serious injury in a runaway accident on State street Saturday. She was thrown from a buggy but her injuries were not serious. Esther Ames, a little girl who was with Mrs. Austin, also escaped. The buggy was totally wrecked.

Dr. Harriette D. Dilla, professor of economics and sociology, Lake Erie college, has been in attendance at the state convention of the Ohio Woman Suffrage association in the Hollenden, Nov. 11 and 12. Dr. Dilla spoke Thursday evening as vice chairman of the state committee on organization. On Friday afternoon she spoke on the New Jersey campaign in which she participated this summer. She was the only Ohio woman who assisted in that campaign.

Without any doubt Monday evening, November 29 will be the biggest evening musically that the people of Painesville will have the opportunity to enjoy this year or any other year when Evan Williams appears here. The seat sale begins this coming Saturday and the hour will be announced later. Prof. I. M. Snyder announces that his studio will be open this week and appointments may be made by calling Home phone 353.

The new barn on the Pike farm on the North Ridge road in Unionville was dedicated Friday evening, when over six hundred and fifty friends of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond L. Pike assembled there to inspect it. The barn was constructed at a cost of $10,000 and is as near perfection as possible in regard to ventilation, lighting and sanitation. Without a doubt it is the most perfect structure of its kind in this part of the country.

Madison Library Site Has Been Selected.

Madison, Nov. 13.—Rep. Carl Kimball of Madison, stated last evening to a Beacon representative that the site for the new Carnegie library to be built in Madison had been selected. It will be located on the north side of Main street at the northwest corner of the park, west of Schworm's shoe shop on parcels of property owned by Dr. Shearer, Dr. Park of Painesville, George Hollister and Dr. C. H. Quayle. The property is 105 feet front and about 80 feet deep. The building will cost $10,000 and will be quite similar to the one in Geneva, which was built for a like amount.

Last evening at W. C. Behm's furniture store was held a meeting of the finance committee of the library. It is up to this committee to raise by a subscription of about $3,000 for putting the lot in shape for the building and other incidental expenses so as not to draw on the $10,000 fund for building purposes only. This means a systematic canvass for funds, but Mr. Kimball believes that the money can be raised, as the Madison people will surely appreciate a library.

Commissioners Will Insist on Sixty Foot Roadway

A conference of engineers of the New York Central and members of the Board of County Commissioners was held at the court house Monday and the plan of widening the road at the foot of Furnace Hill was thoroughly discussed.

In anticipation of paving this road the commissioners will insist upon the railway people furnishing a full sixty foot roadway under their tracks instead of the present twenty foot tunnel.

At the time the tunnel was constructed it was plenty large enough to care for the traffic but in these days of fast-running autos, motor trucks and great wagon loads of nursery stock the tunnel comes far from being satisfactory. Many accidents have occurred at this point and many others have been narrowly averted.

There is no reason why a railway company should appropriate two thirds of the width of a state road and the commissioners have politely notified the New York Central people that it is "their move."

Since this church has been made station and put under my charge, the preaching hour has been changed from 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon to 10:30 in the morning, the Sunday School following the preaching services at 11:30 A. M.

A most cordial and earnest invitation is extended to the general public.

The first Father and Son banquet of the season will be held on the Dock Road, Friday evening. It is under the direction of the County Y. M. C. A. and is for the purpose of getting the men and boys together to talk plans relative to organizing a Y. M. C. A. group in that community.

Mr. Willis Harris will be the toastmaster of the evening. The speakers will all be local men.

Born and Died in Perry

Jacob Haywood, life-long resident of Perry, died at his home in that village Wednesday morning after an illness of three weeks. A wife and two sons, Verne Haywood of Kendalville, Ind., and Will Haywood, of Perry survive.

Funeral services will be held at 1:30 Friday afternoon from the late residence.

Bruised in Auto Accident

Edward West of Perry suffered a wrenched back when the Ford car he was driving turned turtle on the Lane road Wednesday morning and pinned him underneath.

Orson Gardner of Lane saw the accident and secured help to lift the machine off the boy. Dr. Black found that no bones were broken although the lad was blistered by the gasoline that saturated his clothing.

The accident is said to have been caused by the driver losing control of the machine when he ran into some plowed ground at a turn in the road.

Peter Diamond Wins

The case of M. Pollock vs Peter Diamond, which was on trial in Common Pleas court this week, was decided in favor of the defendant, the jury being out but a short time.

The case came from Justice Goddard's court in Madison and Pollock claimed that Diamond was indebted to him in the sum of $44.50 for fruit, horse feed and other articles.

During the hearing of the case in Common Pleas a number of witnesses testified that they would not believe the plaintiff under oath.

Brayton Home

Bequeathed to Episcopal Diocese, for Purpose of Establishing Home for Old People—The Bequest Will Have a Value of at Least $50,000, With Maintenance Fund

The Brayton Home for sick and delicate women and children is provided for by the will of Annie Flower Brayton which was filed in Probate Court November 10.

The Brayton Home will comprise the beautiful property at the corner of Wood and High streets in this city and the personal property left by Annie Flower Brayton and her brother Hobert C. Brayton will provide a sufficient fund for the maintenance of the Home.

The will of Annie Flower Brayton was drawn in December 1892 and the first clause recites that all her property real and personal, including the homestead and furniture, three and three-fourths acres of land, an interest in six acres of land lying east and south of Lake Erie College, 60 shares of the capitol stock of the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company, eight shares of the capital stock of the American Express Company and certain monies on deposit in Cleveland and Painesville banks shall go to her sister, Mary, and brother, Hobert, during their life time.

The second clause of the will reads as follows:

"Unto the Protestant Episcopal Church, Diocese of Ohio, I give and bequeath all my property personal and real which may be remaining after the death of my brother Hobert and sister, Mary. Our family homestead which shall be called the Brayton Home, shall, with its dwelling house and contents, and the several lots of land belonging thereto, be permanently retained as a Home for sick and delicate women and children and men. All my property which shall be remaining other than the family homestead, shall constitute a portion of a permanent fund for the maintenance of said Brayton Home and the necessary expenses of keeping in good condition the burial plot of the family of Johnson C. Brayton, clergyman, deceased, in Evergreen cemetery."

A codicil to the will, written in May 1915, appoints R. E. Gregory and Dr. E. H. Tillotson as executors of the estate and life trustees for the care of all property during the life of the sister, Mary.

The will of the deceased brother, Hobert C. Brayton, was filed in Probate court in 1898 and this document also made provision for the establishment of the Brayton Home, all his property to go to such an institution after the death of his two sisters.

The estate of Annie Flower Brayton has not been appraised but it is expected that the personal property will exceed $25,000 and the Brayton homestead is valuable property.

Many years ago a select school for boys was maintained at the Brayton homestead, the principal being Rev. Johnson C. Brayton.

Mayor Elect is Busy

"This is my busy day" is the sign which promises to become a permanent fixture in the office of Mayor-elect Huntington. Every day he devotes most of his time to entertaining would-be office holders and citizens who wish to tell him just how the affairs of the city should be conducted.

"Whatever you do, don't appoint ———" one heavy taxpayer will tell him and inside of ten minutes another man will come in and produce facts and figures to show that this same Mr. ——— is the only man in Painesville qualified for the job.

Senator Burrows Dies

Painesville relatives have received notice that Ex-Senator J. C. Burrows died at his home in Michigan Tuesday night. Death came suddenly, on the eve of his departure for the Pacific coast.

Senator Burrows was a brother of the late Judge J. B. Burrows of Painesville, and for many years was one of the leading men in Washington as congressman and senator, and took a very active part in Republican politics, being chairman of the National Republican Convention at Chicago.

Literary programs in the Perry village schools will be held Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 23d. At this time a special effort is to be made to have the patrons visit the schools and especially the women.

In addition to the program by the pupils it is hoped to have an outside speaker. Try to give your support to the schools by taking a portion of the afternoon for this visit.

PROSPERITY IS REAL

Longworth's Ridiculous Charges Easily Refuted.

Reports on Conditions of Business Make the Statement of the Ohio Congressman That Bankruptcy Is Near Appear Silly.

The American people, gentlemen, under this administration, are riding hell-bent to bankruptcy and paying for the privilege with a war tax. Their boasted prosperity has not come. Want and misery have prevailed in the land. Some industries, it is true, are prosperous, but they are industries which are not supplying the American market but the markets of the warring countries of Europe.—Representative Nicholas Longworth.

The news items of a single day give us a speedrate on this rush "hell-bent to bankruptcy."

The demand for pig iron and various fines of steel "is in excess of the producing capacity of the furnaces and mills of the United States," according to Chairman Gary of the United States Steel corporation, and these "satisfactory conditions" are only "more or less affected by the war business."

"Merchants everywhere tell our 800 salesmen that business is booming," reports the National Cash Register company, one of the largest concerns in Mr. Longworth's state.

Ocean shipping is enough to take care of an export trade more than double the usual volume for the season. But it still falls so far short of the trade offering as to impose a virtual embargo on quantities of grain and goods moving outward.

This is a sort of bankruptcy which American business will be able to endure and even welcome. But it threatens a real bankruptcy for the calamity politics which would frighten business to a standstill on what might happen after the war.

Country's Business Booming.

WANT GUARANTEE FROM SEIZURE

Shippers Are Sending Requests to State Department for Protection.

VESSELS MUST BE OWNED BY AMERICANS

Must Have Substantial Evidence as to Stockholders and Officers in Company to Accompany the Demand for Release.

Washington, D. C.—The demand of the American Transatlantic Steamship Co. for a guarantee from the state department that its steamer, the Winnebago, will not be seized by the British, has precipitated many similar requests. Most of these come from the cotton shippers of the south.

Shippers Request Protection.

In their letters and telegrams to Secretary Lansing the shippers cite the last note of this country to Great Britain as a reason why United States should guarantee their vessels against seizure. In announcing that it does not recognize the British orders in council, the shippers declare this country puts itself on record in a position where it must guarantee Americans that their cargoes and vessels will not be seized.

In the case of the Winnebago Secretary Lansing Friday again indicated that this government is powerless to guarantee that a vessel will not be seized when it was obtained under registry challenged by Great Britain. The latter country, if it challenges the ownership, is within its rights in seizing the vessel and holding it until a prize court has determined whether it is "enemy owned." It is the position of the state department that if the Winnebago is seized and subsequently it is proved that it is owned solely by American interests, the owners can then demand damages from Great Britain.

THEODORE E. BURTON

The candidacy of former Senator Theodore E. Burton of Ohio for the Republican nomination for the presidency received considerable impetus by the formal withdrawal of Gov. Willis of Ohio from the race and his announcement that he would throw his support to Mr. Burton.

RESOLUTION ADOPTED AND WAR ON BLINDNESS IN OHIO WILL SOON BE WAGED.

FORTY-THIRD ANNUAL SESSION

Over 300 Hear Many Good Talks By Men Prominent in Health Circles—Sanitary Engineers Present.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Dayton, O.—The Ohio State Board of Health convened in forty-third annual session in this city with upward of 300 delegates in attendance. Many matters affecting the health of the commonwealth will be discussed at the meeting. Dr. H. T. Sutton, of Zanesville, president of the board, opened the meeting with an address and was followed by L. H. Van Buskirk, director of the division of laboratories of the state health department, who told how health officers may improve condition in their respective communities. Dr. R. O. Patterson, director of the division of public health, education and tuberculosis, spoke on legislation and the methods of preventing blindness. Others who spoke were W. H. Dittoe, of the department of sanitary engineering, and Dr. Francis M. Hollingshead, division of child hygiene.

At the night session Dr. J. Morton Howell, member of the state board, spoke on "Observations and Deductions in the Matter of Preventive Medicine During the Past 25 Years." Dr. B. L. Arner discussed "Public Health Accounting," Dr. E. R. Heyhurst, "Rural Housing and Hygiene," and Dr. E. F. Campbell, secretary and executive officer, "The Increase in Mortality in Persons Over 45 Years of Age." Sanitary engineers from many cities were also here for the convention. The state board of health, at a separate session, granted Lebanon an extension of time to install a sewage plant.

BIG POTATO CROP IN OHIO

Over Seven Million Bushels Raised in Buckeye State During Past Year.

Columbus, O.—Ohio raised a potato crop this year that will be sufficient to give to every person in the state, men, women and children, about a bushel and a half of the tubers. The total crop is estimated by the state board of agriculture in the November crop report, given out, at 7,014,256 bushels. They were raised on 96,453 acres, averaging 73 bushels per acre.

The cold, rainy September was wholly unfavorable to the work of wheat seeding and in consequence, in spite of the probability that the war will cause high wheat prices for the next year or two, the farmers of Ohio will have a much lower acreage of wheat for the harvest of 1916 than for that of the current year. 1,930,111 acres were harvested this year and only 1,592,129 acres have been sown for the next harvest—82 per cent of this year's acreage. The condition of the growing wheat is none the best at that—the state board estimate being only 86 per cent of a full average condition for this time.

The same general condition is reported also for rye. The harvest of 1915 was taken from 19,034 acres, while only 16,646 acres or 87 per cent of that acreage has been sown for the coming harvest. The rye condition is put at 91 per cent. The corn prospects for the 1915 crop is estimated now at 92 per cent of a full average, which makes it a fairly good yield. The clover seed yield is estimated at 45 per cent of a full average.

GIVE GOD THANKS

Especially at This Time His Children Should Not Fail to Show Gratitude.

"Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits."—Psalm 103:1-2.

The Feast of Tabernacles, which was the Jewish thanksgiving festival by divine appointment, may suggest to us in large part the spirit and manner in which our national Thanksgiving day can be most fittingly observed. The people were directed to turn aside from their accustomed secular pursuits and devote the time being to celebrating the goodness of God in grateful and joyful recognition of all that he had done for them. It was a religious feast, but had its social features, which were also of beneficial effect.

It was intended to specially impress upon the minds of the Israelites a proper sense of God's gracious dealings with them, and to call forth their gratitude in consequence. He had kindly cared for them, had brought them into the pleasant and fertile land. He had promised them, and had given them bountiful harvests, and it was a good thing for them to have an annual thanksgiving feast during which to recall his blessings to them and praise his great goodness.

Ingratitude is a great sin and a very common one. There is too much of a disposition to forget that all our blessings come from God. There is also an inclination to dwell upon the seeming evils and disadvantages of life. It is eminently fitting, therefore, that we should pause at times in the midst of our worldly cares and occupations, and review the mercies of God toward us and see how much reason and occasion we have for gratitude to him.

Thank Him for Gifts.

Thank God for your being and for all the mercies with which he has crowned your lives. Thank him for your homes and their comforts, for health and friends, for sustaining grace under trouble and deliverance from evil, for the privileges and blessings of his Gospel and his church, for this highly favored land in whose pleasant places your lines are cast, for abundant harvests and the large measure of prosperity that has attended us as a people. Thank him too, for the trials and sufferings that have come upon you and which under his directing hand have issued in some form of good. Men are prone to thank God for those prosperities of vine and mead and shop and ship which made life easy and comfortable, but they are rarely grateful for those happenings which make life difficult and great. A man is specially and divinely fortunate, not when his conditions are easy, but when they evoke the very best that is in him; when they provoke him to nobleness, and sting him into strength; when they clear his vision, kindle his enthusiasm and inspire his will.

Another purpose that the Thanksgiving Feast of Tabernacles subserved was that it taught the supreme importance of spiritual realities. It directed attention to that which is higher and better than that which pertains exclusively to the worldly life. The people were to turn their thought for a while specially to God and his goodness and his worship. They were to remember that true life is found in the way of righteousness, in useful service for the glory of God and the good of man. Our thanksgiving must have its true counterpart in thanks living. We must give the chief place to spiritual and eternal things. This will make life what it is designed to be.

Home the Foundation of All.

The Feast of Tabernacles afforded an opportunity for the reunion of families and friends and for social intercourse. In keeping with this is the character of our Thanksgiving day.

Saying Farewell to the Pet

There is a dawning in the sky
Which doth a world of fate imply,
And on each casual passing face
A look expectant you may trace.
The signs the veteran turkey sees
And with a deep and mournful sigh
He calls his numerous family nigh
And murmurs, pointing to the trees,
"Roost high, my little ones, roost high."
—Eugene Field.

Gratitude

I AM thankful that I have the power to feel the glorious sunshine or the gray rain. My heart fills with joy that I can see the leaves and the sky and hear the music of the brook. Grateful am I that I can appreciate the height of the mountain or steeple and the depth of the shadows, and I am glad that I can be uncomfortable in the intense heat or cold, for that means a joyous sense of relief when it comes.

WHICH one of us is not glad of the power to judge? From the many recurrent cases we can induce a rule, a law, a generality. And from this we can make applications to specific instances. Is it not wonderful, and are you not glad?

FOR my power to decide for myself I am thankful. My freedom of will is a precious jewel that I pray I may duly treasure.

... happy phrase, the clever story, the quick parry and thrust—all are necessary to balance the heavy parts in the life play.

I AM grateful for the bumps that I have had in this life. The retort courteous, the cut direct, the infamous lie, the cruel knock—all have done something. The world is a great teacher.

FOR my friends let my heart be always grateful. One can't help relatives, a mere accident placed a great aunt in the same family, but friends are chosen. I am glad that I have dear congenial souls on my visiting list.

MEMORY, my constant companion, makes me grateful. Whether it be a little verse of sunshine, a book, a play or some past joy or sorrow, I must give thanks for the gift of remembering. It doubles life.

AND I am glad that today I am not fearful of the Great Beyond.

BARBARA LEE.

NATION HAS BEEN BLESSED

Multitude of Reasons Why This Year Gratitude Should Be Widespread and Fervent.

It is one of the frailties of human nature that when all is going well with us we are apt to be thankless. But when peril is imminent, when danger or death threatens our loved ones, how quickly and instinctively prayer rises to the lips and how grateful the heart returns thanks when the crisis is passed.

HE ROSE TO THE OCCASION

One Time When Mr. Blank Proved His Capacity for Thinking Quickly in an Emergency.

There was a party at Blank's house—a mixed party. Smith and his wife, Jones, his clerk, and sweetheart, and a Mrs. Swifte, a charming widow.

The widow was at the piano singing "I Love the Cows and Chickens," the others were joining in.

Oh, no, Mrs. Blank was not there, she was far, far away, a hundred miles away on a visit.

Suddenly the telephone bell sounded and Blank answered it.

"Mother wants me to stay another week, dear," she said, "and I thought—I thought—what's that?"

Blank waved his arms frantically for his guests to cease singing and playing, but they didn't see him.

"What's what?" he stalled.

"John Blank, who's in our house? Who are those women singing? What does this mean?"

"Wait a minute and I'll explain," he shouted, and rushed over and made everyone cease at once. Then he went back to the phone.

"Sorry you heard it, dear. It was a surprise I got for you—a talking machine. I was trying a new record."

"Oh, you darling boy. I'm so sorry I spoiled your surprise," she gurgled over the wire.

And the very next day Blank had a talking machine sent home. And one record was a quartet singing, "I Love the Cows and Chickens."

TIRED OF WINDOW ENTRANCE

Jeweler Finally Forced to Post a Notice to His "Customers" Traveling on Bicycles.

Jim Simpkins was fond of cycling, and was more or less of a scorcher. He reveled in pace-making and he boasted that no hill was too steep for him to take full tilt.

One day, however, he altered his opinion about rushing down hills, for instead of going around the corner at the bottom of a very steep descent he went straight on and smashed through the window of a jeweler's shop. In due course, he crawled out of the hospital and paid the jeweler a good round sum for damages.

But history has a way of repeating itself. It did in this case, anyway, and another cyclist entered the jeweler's shop by the window. Then it became apparent to the shopkeeper that it was time to take action. When a third window had been put in, an amused crowd stood outside and read this notice:

"Cyclists are particularly requested to enter this establishment by the door."

Not Satisfactory.

A young man entered the haberdashery shop and approached the lordly salesman behind the counter.

"I bought this necktie here day before yesterday," he said, "and I want to return it."

"But this tie has been worn," objected the salesman after examining the article closely.

"Sure it has," replied the customer. "I wore it last night when I proposed to my best girl and she refused me. That's why I want to return it."

An Outsider.

"I suppose you'll be in the gay social whirl this winter?"

"Who? Me?" replied Mr. Cumrox. "Not a chance. The further my wife gets into society the more she realizes that I don't belong."

THE PLEA FOR DEFENSE

"We have it in mind," said Woodrow Wilson in his speech before the Manhattan club, "to be prepared not for war, but only for defense," and in so saying gives responsible echo in this country to the timeworn plea of the militaristic parties of Europe. What ruler of a mighty nation ever said otherwise under similar circumstances? History—and the president of the United States is a historian—holds in its records proof positive that those who have spoken for the German government during the last fifty years have picked their words with the fine discrimination that the president shows in picking his. Upon more than one public occasion during the last two decades the German emperor has assured his subjects and the world that he and his responsible ministers sought only such a military and naval establishment as would serve "for purposes of defense." Even France, burning with the desire to avenge the days of '71, never dared intimate to the world that it was her purpose some day to attack her traditional Teutonic foe. Always and everywhere armies and navies have been gathered together for defense. Were this nation deliberately arming against a foe already named in the mind of our government, it is unlikely that belligerent intent would be in the public utterance of any of our public men. It is and always has been the policy of those who make wars possible to talk of peace while they plan that which [illegible] makes for hostilities.

Those who have viewed the advances of the preparedness [illegible] in this country with [illegible] alarm find in [illegible] recent utterances [illegible] only upon the advisability of [illegible] fense program, [illegible] such a step. President Wilson [illegible] in terms that hint [illegible] future dangers, but [illegible] aces. He says:

"I would not feel that I was discharging the solemn obligation I owe the country were I not to speak in terms of the deepest solemnity of the urgency and necessity of preparing ourselves to guard and protect the rights and privileges of our people, our sacred heritage of the fathers who struggled to make us an independent nation."

No one who loves his country, who values its well being can read those words without feeling that the president of the United States has said either too much or too little. There is an unbridged gap between his utterances. There is an implication of impending dangers concerning which the people of this country have not been informed. Either President Wilson has caught the catchwords of the preparedness proponents with a new vision or he has failed to realize that there is now going on in this country a well-defined movement to precipitate hostilities with a foe already selected by the leaders of the militarist cult. Within a time so recent that every man remembers, President Wilson, speaking not only to the people of this country, but to the world, declared that no cloud appeared upon the horizon of our foreign affairs. We were at peace with all the world, he declared. No foe threatened us. There was no cause for alarm. The country was reassured in ringing terms. Woodrow Wilson, in fact, even went to the length of throwing down the gauntlet to the alarmists.

If President Wilson was right in his message of 1914, then he is either mistaken now or is withholding matters of grave moment from the people of this country. Since there is no ground for a departure from the policy of pitiless publicity, the inevitable inference is that the president is mistaken.

President Wilson's declarations before the Manhattan club must be considered in the light of the interpretation placed upon them by those who have most diligently labored to forward the preparedness program in this country. Sooner or later the president must realize that sinister agencies are now endeavoring to capture the program of patriotic preparedness contemplated by him in the interest of ends not now countenanced by the administration. Of all the forces that have been brought to bear in support of the preparedness program the New York World has been the most ably consistent. And there is no possibility of misconstruing the position of the World. That organ of militarism, that disturber of the public peace, has well defined purposes in mind. For the army it would force upon us. The military establishment is needed first of all, bluntly declares the World, to hold in check the alien portion of our population. The World and its allies is prepared to persecute and prosecute American citizens of foreign birth, just as Dreyfus is persecuted and prosecuted in France. The World argues for an army in order that it may be able to declare a race war in this country. The World questions the allegiance of all aliens, with the exception of the English and the Welsh. All others it brands as disloyal. And it does this because it has from the first supported the policies of the allies and from the first has been anti-German. The attitude of the World is the attitude of the metropolitan press of the whole country. The most powerful publishers and the most powerful editors of this country for months have insisted that the American citizen who was not pro-British was a traitor not only to the cause of humanity, but to this country. The militaristic propaganda has but small patience with the attitude of neutrality that has to the present time characterized our foreign relations in their broader aspects. The militaristic influences in this country are committed to the policy of selecting for us an enemy. The fact that President Wilson does not so declare does not blanket the fact that those who speak for him so declare. The people of this country have been surprised when William Jennings Bryan has insisted that we must not be drawn into the pending war. And yet with the metropolitan press day by day laboring to lead the public to the view that this nation has an enemy across the seas there is revealed a reason for Mr. Bryan's fears.

It is only necessary to review recent expressions of opinion to realize that the greatest blessing that has ever cast its light on this nation is to be found in the fact that the United States was not prepared for war when the hostilities in Europe began. Patriots can but shudder when they realize to what uses a great military establishment might be put in the future if the counsels of the militarists are to prevail.

In forming an opinion of President Wilson's preparedness program it must be remembered that it has so far only been interpreted from the standpoint of those pro-British in their sympathies. Woodrow Wilson speaks of defense and hints of dangers. Those who profess to speak for the president locate those dangers in unthinkable sources. The chief executive in his most recent utterance has but served to emphasize the fact that if there ever was a time when the military party in this country needed curbing that time is now.—Johnston Democrat.

BACK TO THE FARM

Country editors in Southern Illinois have taken up the back-to-the-farm idea. Fourteen of them have agreed to devote one page of each issue to this movement. The need of it is shown by the fact that 9[illegible] of the 102 counties of the State lost population between 1900 and 1910 in two or more rural townships, while 50 counties actually declined in population. Similar conditions prevail in Missouri and Iowa.

These editors can do much to turn the tide if they go about it in the right way. Population has been forced out of the rural districts through inflation of land values. In some cases this inflation has tempted farmers to rent their farms and retire, to live at leisure off of the rents. In other cases, it has discouraged the sons of farmers from remaining on the farm. When there are several sons in a family, the old farm is too small for all, and inflated land values prevent them from buying additional land. In the same way, newcomers who do not want rent are kept away. This situation must be met if the back-to-the-farm movement is to succeed.

The way to attack this price inflation is through taxation that will force into use land that is now withheld. That means the Single Tax on land values. Perhaps some of these editors are prejudiced against that idea, or do not understand it. If so, it is up to them to lay aside prejudice and inform themselves properly on the matter. The Single Tax will be a benefit to every farmer who uses his land, and will be burdensome to none other than the land speculator.

Illinois farmers are now taxed on everything they own. Under the Single Tax, they would pay no taxes on their livestock, furniture or other personal property, or on their buildings, fences or other improvements. They would pay on the value of their bare land alone. That means that the improved farm would be relieved while the owner of farm land held out of use would have his taxes increased. The speculator would then find it to his interest to either use the land himself or let some one else do so. Either event would make it necessary for some one to go back to the farm. The forcing of land into the market would put an end to inflated prices.

Until the tendency to inflate land prices will be checked, the tendency to leave the farm must continue.

SUFFERER FROM INDIGESTION RELIEVED

Kirtland

Last Saturday evening about fifty young people were invited to an old fashioned "husking bee" at the Morse farm. There was more fun and frolic than work but they did husk some corn after which, lively games appropriate to the occasion were enjoyed in the large old house which has been the home of the Morses for several generations. Sandwiches, doughnuts and sweet cider disappeared with astonishing rapidity and much pleasure to the hungry guests. A wagon load of Harvey Morse's young men friends came out from the city and spent the night on the farm.

Last Friday evening, Miss Pratt, Miss Bente and Mr. Rand were delightfully entertained at dinner by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Freshley in honor of the twentieth birthday anniversary of their daughter, Miss Marie, who knew nothing of the pleasant surprise awaiting her return from Wickliffe.

Miss Lois Frank, a companion of Mrs. L. B. Sanborn during a portion of her California sojourn and Mr. and Mrs. Perry Johnson were recently entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Sanborn.

Mrs. Ada Markell is visiting Mrs. Helen Sanborn in Chardon.

Minot Allen spent last week in Cleveland and this week has begun regular work there in a shop.

A Cleveland hunter had his arm nearly shot off while hunting rabbits on the Dr. Bingham farm Saturday. In some way, he discharged his own gun, which he had placed on the ground by a hole where a rabbit had disappeared, and his arm was so badly injured that amputation was necessary. It is feared that the accident will prove fatal.

The South Church bazaar has been announced for Wednesday, Dec. 1st. Particulars will be reported later.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Churchill and youngest son intend to leave Wednesday for a ten days' visit with relatives and friends in Wauseon, Ohio.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Caleb Strang, Sunday, Nov. 14th. Mother and child are doing well.

The tenant house on the Sweet farm now owned by C. C. Markell occupied by Eugene Martin and family for about ten years past, was burned to the ground Sunday afternoon and many of the contents were destroyed. The origin of the fire is unknown. After the fire was discovered, there was plenty of help but it could not be brought under control and all energy was spent on saving Mr. Martin's goods.

Mr. Walter Johnson was taken to the hospital Sunday to be operated on for appendicitis.

Bishop J. A. Becker motored to Cleveland Sunday and brought Mrs. Becker's sister, Mrs. Hess out to her home in Mentor. Mrs. Hess has been in the hospital several weeks.

Mrs. Dale Curtis entertained the lady teachers of the High School building at dinner last Tuesday evening.

Mr. William Liston of Kirtland, and Miss Zela Hemminger, of Toledo, were united in marriage at Toledo, Thursday, Nov. 4th.

The literary program given by the High School Friday afternoon was very good. The Glee Club furnished two numbers and there was other music as well as recitations and a debate—Resolved That the European war will be beneficial to the United States. Affirmative, Harry Port and Samual Schupp; negative, Lee Martin and Arland Fenner. The affirmative won.

After spending two years in Willoughby, Mrs. Edward Moore and children moved back to Temple Hill last week and Mr. James Moore and family have moved out near Hudson, Ohio.

Several ladies were entertained in their honor Thursday evening at the Whitmore home and Friday evening, Miss Springer and Miss Brown were the guests of Mrs. M. S. Brewster and daughters.

Mr. Cyril Harty is recovering from a serious operation.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By Gen. Isaac R. Sherwood.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 14, 1915.

EDITOR HERALD:—The harsh November winds that blow across the classic Potomac from the direction of the Manhattan Club are ethereal mildness compared with the short ship cold air currents from Calumet Hill, the home of William Jennings Bryan, and the White House cupola. No sooner had President Wilson fired his first gun in his national defense battle than Bryan fired his first gun in reply. All the politicians, statesmen and prophets in the national capital are predicting an unusually lively winter on the Potomac.

Bryan has announced that he will stay in Washington this winter and to the best of his ability try and defeat the well planned and thoroughly exploited propaganda for expending some $500,000,000 more money than usual on militarism. It will be seen at once that Bryan will be seriously handicapped in a contest with the president. Bryan is only a private citizen—a retired statesman if you please; while the president has at his command and disposal the immense patronage of one hundred millions of Americans, all with only a few exceptions, the big journals of Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis, etc., and the trust owned magazines. And it is now understood that the Republicans in congress will line up with the president and vote for the big army and navy program in order to bankrupt the treasury and compel a new tax law and the revision of the tariff or a big bond issue. Then if the extravagant appropriations are enacted into national law they will make the vital issue in the presidential campaign of 1916 on the failure of the Democratic party to keep the most important pledge in the Baltimore national platform of 1912 to reduce the expenses of the government and abolish useless officers and useless offices.

Most of the salaries in all of the 13 departments of the government are fixed by law. Hence the only two departments where it is possible to retrench and economize are the war and navy departments. Here as has been repeatedly shown we can reduce expenses by at least $150,000,000 without impairing the efficiency or safety of the public service. In the presence of the solemn pledge of the Democratic party in national convention assembled, to retrench and economize, how will it strike the average citizen if we increase the idlers of the army and navy from 150,000 to 280,000 and increase the army and navy budget from $248,000,000, in round numbers, to $748,000,000, or an increase of $500,000,000, at a time of profound peace with all the world and no threatening dangers anywhere. Really is there any sanity or sense in this wild and wicked extravagance?

A SLOGAN INVENTED SOLELY TO SCARE AND FOOL THE PEOPLE.

When the present barbarous war in Europe is ended every nation engaged will be bankrupt in men and money and munitions and morals. The insane gabble now in the mouths of the jingoes that some unnamed empire 3,000 miles away with a deep ocean between is going to attack the United States is the gabble of fools. Let us see about New Jersey. Look at your map and you will see that New Jersey has a long exposed east shore line of 120 miles on the Atlantic Ocean. From Holly Beach on the south to Sandy Hook on the north the whole shore line is exposed. The secretary of war lives in New Jersey, also our great peace loving president. Nowhere on this continent is any shore line so much exposed to the navy of an enemy as New Jersey. And nowhere on this continent has the so-called defensive program of the secretary of war and secretary of the navy been so thoroughly advertised and exploited as in New Jersey. And this exploitation has been going on in New Jersey for the past two months; and yet the elections in New Jersey on Nov. 2, 1915, show that the Jerseyites who voted that day evidently were not afflicted with "military hysterics." Verily, the time is due and overdue for every patriotic man and woman to get busy and help save this great republic of our love and hope from the grasp of this military cabal.

Let us read soberly and seriously the words of the great constructive statesman, Thomas Jefferson. I quote from the author of the Declaration of Independence in a letter to Eldridge Gerry in 1799:

"I am for relying for internal defense on our militia solely till actual invasion and for such a naval force only as will protect our coast harbors from depredations and not for a standing army in time of peace which may overcome the public sentiment nor a navy which by its own external wars in which it may implicate us will grind us with public burdens and sink us under them."

In 1801 Thomas Jefferson wrote:

"Hamilton is ardent for the introduction of monarchy; eager for armies, making more noise for a great naval establishment than better patriots who wish it on a national scale only commensurate to our wants and our means. This class ought to be tolerated but not trusted."

I made a speech before the Kenilworth Club of Toledo recently in the parlors of the Kenilworth avenue church, the club being made up of church members, lawyers and representative citizens. A supper was given after the speech when my position was discussed on the question of preparing for war and there was only one dissenting voice among all the members of the club, a lawyer named Price. I find that my speech was very generally approved by the farmers in this section without exception. I only received one letter of protest and that was signed anonymously.

Mentor

Nov. 15, 1915

The beautiful weather still continues, in spite of the predictions of the much respected "weather man" who was going to have a tornado strike this part of the map one day last week. When Cleveland people held him up; and asked what had become of the wind, he made reply that it had spent itself before it reached here—which proved quite satisfactory to all concerned. If there had been a high wind yesterday morning the whole of West Mentor village would have gone up in smoke, but as Samantha Allen says, "More, anon!"

Mrs. Blish and her two daughters the Sawyer ladies, and their two husbands, the Messrs Ed and Will Sawyer, were invited over to Willoughby yesterday to eat Sunday dinner with Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Dickey, the happy occasion being the joint birthday of Mrs. Blish and her brother, Mr. Dickey.

Mrs. Charles Fox of Mansfield, is the guest of her Lake Erie College roommate and friend, Mrs. Robert Case, at present writing.

Miss Lucile Davis of Willoughby, was the guest of Mrs. E. S. Harrington over the Sabbath.

Quite a number of our people attended the "Flower Show" in Cleveland last week, and all came home enthused over the big chrysanthemum and other beauties to be seen up there.

Rather more fruit and ornamental trees are being planted out this fall than usual, many seeming to think that if the stuff lives through the winter, it will have just that more of a start in the spring. Moreover, they think possibly they may stand a better chance of getting what they buy and pay for, if they send in their orders when nursery-men are not so driven with work. However, as this is a painful subject, we will subside.

The paving is all done! Hallelujah! Oh no, persons are not yet allowed to drive on the new pavement—just to walk thereon, and that too, very gingerly, so's not to make a dent! Men are going along the sides now, with pick and shovel, grading down and hauling away the surplus dirt, and soon everything will be in apple-pie order.

Speaking of apple pie, that most delicious commodity will be served at the "Chicken Supper" to be given at the Methodist church dining room by the Ladies Aid of that persuasion, on Friday evening of this week, at a quarter a plate. Object, to help pay for "doing off" the basement, same being much needed for Sunday School purposes.

Thanksgiving services are to be held in the Disciple meeting house on Sunday, Nov. 21st, at 11:30, same to be in charge of the minister, L. P. Clark, and will be in the nature of Union services as has been the custom for many years. All who are really thankful that we have no "war" on hand, or anything else to prevent fervent thanks to an all wise and loving Father in Heaven—ought to be sure to be there. An offering is always taken on that day for the poor of the township.

Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Sawyer returned on Friday from their three months trip to the great west, where they visited the Panama Exposition to their heart's satisfaction, toured through California, visited friends in several states, and have returned looking and feeling much better for the change of climate and the enforced rest.

The Apron Sale begins at three o'clock in the main Sabbath School room of the M. E. Church on Friday afternoon, the nineteenth, and will contain many useful things for Christmas presents.

The last illustrated lecture was quite well attended, and the next will be given in the Disciple church on Sunday evening, Nov. 28th, and will be well worth attending. No admission of course, as usual, for these lectures.

The Pipe Organ concert given by Mrs. Robert Case last evening, was much enjoyed—more so than any playing by any one since the dedication when one of our former Mentor girls presided, i. e. Mrs. Minnie Luce Mills of Columbus. Mrs. Case declares that she played only simple things but there are too many Mentor folks who understand "Chromatics" and "sich like" horrid hard stunts in music, to be fooled. Her playing just satisfied some of us, and we regret that she will be away all winter, so that a similar treat must wait until spring.

Mrs. Charles Fox sang "Unto the Lord" several selections last evening and the wonder was expressed in our hearing how consecrated Christians who have a "voice" should ever consent to sing the world's "stuff" when they might win some soul for Jesus Christ, by singing unto Him.

On Sunday evening, Dec. 5th, Miss Carrie Barge, a National Field Worker sent out by the Woman's Foreign Missionary society, will speak in the Methodist church, and everybody is urged to come and hear what she has to say—for it will probably be an eye-opener. No admission, but just a "silver offering" will be taken, we understand.

Very excellent news has just come from Houghton, Mich., where one of our Mentor boys is taking the Engineer's course in the Mining school up there. We refer to our Hugh McCrea, who stands at the head of his class of which he is the president, as well as the editor of the College magazine. Hugh is taking a thorough course in metallurgy, as well as in everything else connected with the business he loves, and intends to make his life work.

The next organ recital will be given by Mrs. Carl Woodruff of Cleveland, in the Methodist church on Thursday evening, Dec. 2nd, to which everybody is invited. No charge, as usual—but an offering for the [illegible]ment fund. Mrs. Woodruff comes on invitation of the Methodist Ladies Aid and as she is well known here, and her husband is another Mentor boy, we bespeak for her a full house.

E. parsonage, in Madison, by Rev. O. B. Jones. They left the same evening for their home in Lincoln, Neb. Our teachers and pupils are "delighted" in the occupancy of our new school building. Arrangements have been made for a general public opening on a date about the first week in December and everybody will be expected to be there. Prominent speakers have been engaged for the occasion. In the meantime the first public entertainment will be given in the auditorium on the evening of November 26th. It will be the first number of the Wickliffe Community Lyceum Course, arranged for that date, the only available evening on which the excellent talent desired could be secured.

CHAPTER XVII.

A Terrible Taken.

Earlin, unconsciously confirmed Sachin with the smile which Kitty Gray so well loved, and which she well so dreaded. "I know you are a good man, Harry," she added, "and I know, in spite of appearances, you are honest in every way in your own record."

"Well then," she began, facing him, at her home door, clenched her spare finding. "Take it that you what?"

"Oh, well, many things, my dear, I mean, I don't know, I don't know, I make all the knowledge you have of the affairs of this distracted blunderer here. There is more than one bonehead here—you!" it has a broken coin and a broken partnership as well—that Together they may mean something. Take it that I don't know, I don't care, all of a sudden you seem to whose the interest of our kingdom—we need them both—not over them.

He felt in his pocket for his silver cigarette case, and would have taken a liquid. As he opened the case the broken coin fell out on the floor and dragged one side and stands for any the arm.

"Put on now!" he said. "I'm not foolish. I may as well say it—we are going to part, we will, I know, we are born the city of Grabbed. I'm sorry, I don't care, I don't care, I'm such enough to speak. Take it from us.

"I am thinking you will not so sure make your excuse the next time. We have enough to do without your deep disappointment, Grabbed, Harry, and Kitty Gray.

"Take it," he said, and spoke. We must earth.

"Ah, well and kitty Gray. It should not grey so difficult. I am sorry, I don't care, I don't care, I am sorry—I am sorry I have spoken to you.

"Understandin' said Sachin, it is life to waste words. Take over to me for place of Grabbed." Kitty Gray said to him.

"Do not, and she calmly "Sachin, Sachin, Sachin! Take away from her what she has—be careful not to do it more."

She was helpless and realized it. Sachin sprang from her side and the frightful place of performance which she had undertaken.

"Well, then," said, she, "come you, resort to such measures, have to it I do not dare. I fear, I do not fear. At least it is as much into so to speak, I am not afraid of you. I am afraid of myself, I know that, as I what it means, I am afraid of myself, I never dare to do it."

"Very well, then," said Sachin. "We will see in our own time and in our own way, sooner or later time. Now we will go home."

At the conclusion of the interview, Kitty Gray vanished and remained the future of her disappearance, for all had uniform search in except that Kitty Gray disappeared alone of all those with whom she mingled in the course of the day. Harry Carlisle had left her on the way, and any portion of the palace which had been frequented by her as a prisoner.

Troubled deeply Count Frederick once more turned to his friend, Jack Hamilton, who proceeded to the engine room, once more the young woman whom he sought for reasons of her own had hid her way back in a place where the gang of Sachin would not search for her. Jack was one of his workmen and could furnish any knowledge where she was. They had not seen or heard nothing of her presence.

Count Frederick called to him one of his most trusted men.

"Jack Hamilton, do you know the whereabouts of a young lady in the palace—the one who has been here so long?"

"Yes, sandstorm," replied the man immediately.

"Very well, then, I know you are a man of honor, and I can depend upon for me as well as my sister."

Having taken these measures, perhaps hastily hastened, yet the only ones of further to do, the Count Frederick turned herself once more to the room where Kitty was.

"Now, I am alone to the case, a small thing which changed the course of greater consequence. As I mentioned the palace grounds so lonely the more the palace itself was so lonely. Yet, yet, yet, the palace itself was so lonely the broken, alone, the short, lonely—the space of vital and solitude.

Hardly a person was in the palace, the full of special, dangerous, and dangerous. Hardly a person was in the palace, the full of special, dangerous, and dangerous. Hardly a person was in the palace, the full of special, dangerous, and dangerous.

Atlanta, Ga.—When William H. Burden, 76 years old, advertised for a bride, the ad was answered by Miss Lula Douglas Thomson, 26 years old. It is reported the groom settled $300,000 on the bride before the wedding ceremony. Burden has adult grandchildren.

INVESTIGATE

INVESTIGATE the activities of the business group pecuniarily interested in increased appropriations for army and navy, which has become so active in pushing its selfish demands. Congress ought to at once appoint a committee to investigate. It is more than a lobby. It is a concerted attempt to misinform the whole nation with a view to the securing of enormous profits at the expense of the tax payers. Publicity is the surest weapon with which to meet an evil of this kind. Let the people once know the real motive back of this movement for preparedness and it can not succeed. Exposure will kill it. TURN ON THE LIGHT and let the country see the fraudulent character of the pretended patriotism which is now being paraded before the country by men who claim a superior attachment to the nation, but are in fact nothing but leeches and parasites. THE INVESTIGATION OUGHT TO COMMENCE AT ONCE. — W. J. BRYAN.

Don't Get Excited.

Editor Herald:

Military preparedness seems to be the most important talk of the time.

For many years it has been the boast of America that here we were free from the burdens of large standing army and extensive navy.

It now looks as though our proud boast might become a vain delusion.

We have heard for many years of the tremendous military burdens of England, Germany, France, et al. American policies have always been adverse, claiming she needed no large armies or powerful navy, and this has been a powerful element in our prosperity.

A man may be an excellent soldier or sailor but he produces nothing. A dozen washer-women produce more than a thousand soldiers. The glory of life is not to the spender, it is to the producer, and it costs a large sum to maintain an army of two hundred thousand men. We need no such army. The crowned heads, the aristocracy, the contractors, army and navy officers, and some politicians favor a large army and navy regardless of the welfare of the common people. Everybody knows the people, the industrial classes bear the greater burden, they pay the price; and yet England, Germany, France and other countries have much better reason for large armaments than ours by reason of adjacent countries and environment.

It is proposed to spend $400,000,000 in the next five years on socalled preparedness; that means about twice that amount within the time limit. It means 140,000 soldiers to begin with, besides the state militia. Does anyone suppose the number will ever grow less? Ever since the dawn of civilization the armies of all great nations have increased even in times of peace. It is proposed to spend more than the above amount in the time mentioned on the navy.

The program includes ten dreadnaughts, six battle cruisers, eighty-five coast submarines, fifteen sea-going submarines, fifty destroyers, fifteen scout cruisers, and five gun boats, two dreadnaughts are to be built each year.

The first year's bill will provide $28,000,000 for completion of ships already authorized.

Bonds must be issued to meet this enormous expense, to be paid by this, and future generations.

Gunboats like autos first cost does not equal subsequent expenditures.

The life of a battleship is from 12 to 15 years, costing together with armament from 8 to 10 millions of dollars. You may build all the battleships you please and not one of them will ever discharge a hostile shot. A submarine is liable to destroy the largest ship in fifteen minutes. It puts one in mind of what the Irishman said when he saw an iron padlock on a leather mail bag. "Phwat's the use of the iron lock? The leather bag just makes me knife blad laugh."

What nation is coming here to fight us? We are at peace with all, and all the powerful nations have been shot to pieces, and are already bankrupt and borrowing all the money they can get, besides being reduced in supplies and provisions at home, and the war is not over.

In the House of Lords, on the 8th inst., Earl Loveburn said: "Revolution or anarchy for Europe if the war continues indefinitely. Unless the collective common sense of mankind prevails before the worst comes, the great continent of Europe will be little better than a wilderness peopled by old men, women and children." If such conditions are only partially true extensive preparedness is worse than idle folly.

Lord Loveburn says fifteen million men have been killed or disabled for life in the present war. The gingoes believe, or pretend to believe, that as the great nations grow weaker and weaker our defense should grow stronger and stronger.

When the present war is over there will not be another war worthy of the name in a hundred years.

The real fact is this country, since it had a flag or constitution, was never so safe from foreign invasion as now.

Is human sacrifice worth nothing? Human blood of no avail? Will the nations of the earth learn nothing from experience and the present conflict? If not, not one is worth saving. Then preparedness for what? Mr. Bryan says, "to satisfy a lot of gingoes, and he might have included certain politicians, army and navy officers and contractors. Governor Cooper, of Kansas, says if the Washington militarist budget carries, "gingoism is in the saddle and militarism is rapidly getting where it will be a power to reckon with as it never has been in the United States."

He further says: "Just before Europe's war broke out our navy appropriations for 1914 were $139,893,614, Germany's $111,300,000.

Our naval expense that year exceeded any nation of the globe, except Great Britain. Yet the administration is now proposing an increase of 50 per cent. for defense. There is pretty good authority for saying that political influence built some of our army posts. Senator Lodge of Massachusetts has to his credit Forts Revert, Heath and Standish. Senator Warren of Wyoming, for years at the head of the Senate military committee, has in his state Fort D. A. Russell, which cost more than $5,000,000. Army officers say Fort Russell is worthless. All these forts would have been abandoned except for political interests.

Navy influence has much to do with the pending measure. Navy officers holding positions for life naturally and vigorously support the bill. Theirs is a profession, and of course they favor any amount of expenditure on the navy, while they maintain the most arrogant aristocracy in naval, military or other circles.

I sincerely hope our country will never be afflicted with a large and continually growing army and navy, the curse of the industrial classes of the world. "Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord."—(St. Paul to the Hebrews, 12:14).

DOCTOR REFUSES TO SAVE BABE'S LIFE

Mother Also Objected to an Operation Which Would Have Stayed Death.

PRESENTS A PROBLEM TO THE WORLD

"When a Child Is Born Defective in Mind and Body Shall That Child Die by the Hand of Society and Science?"

Chicago, Ill.—Baby Bollinger, the three-day old son of Allen and Anna Bollinger, died at the German American hospital at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday night just after being christened, a victim of one of nature's blunders.

During all of its brief life it was under sentence of death as a defective, [illegible] years.

Child Is Baptized.

The water of baptism trickled through the scant brown hair of the child while science withholding the easy gift of life, stood by waiting, while the mother, weeping in her bed assented to the death penalty, while the coroner, whose concern is not with the living, waited for the end.

"John, I baptize thee in the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost."

As the words were spoken by a wet eyed woman, Miss Catherine Walsh of the Catholic church of St Ann de Brighton, the baby quieted down in his crib. The dullness of death was in the eyes. Miss Walsh saw and added a little prayer: "God grant that this child's life shall not have been lived in vain."

Even as the prayer was spoken it was being answered. For at that moment millions of men and women all over the world were reading the story of little John Bollinger, were searching their consciences, weighing a mighty problem, preparing to settle an issue older than civilization.

The Question.

This is the question: When a child is born defective when its infant body is deformed, when its best life prospect is an existence of helplessness in an invalid's chair, perhaps in an institution for the mentally weak—then shall that child die by the hand of society and science and civilization?

The verdict was death in the case of John Bollinger. But on behalf of the thousands of defectives yet to be born, there is to be an appeal an appeal that will find a thousand tongues of eloquence. There will be a decision —and that decision will be the contribution of John Bollinger to the world that fed him for six days and killed him.

In less than a week the condemned baby became famous, fulfilled his mission on earth and then passed on.

And the storm was breaking a storm of impassioned and clashing opinions. Dr Haiselden was the storm center, because it was he who had willed the death of the child. It was he who, confessing that he could have given life to the baby, refused to do so. By a simple operation, he declared, the life could have been saved. "But it would be wrong to save this life," he said. And quietly, resolutely he braved the frantic denunciations of those who thought otherwise.

BELIEVE A SETTLEMENT OF LUSITANIA CASE NEAR

Germany Probably Will Yield on Proposal to Arbitrate and Admit Obligation to Pay Indemnity.

Washington, D. C.—Progress is being made by the United States and Germany on the settlement of the Lusitania case and a definite announcement of the agreement may be expected at a reasonably early date.

Germany has made the following proposals: That the United States agree to arbitrate the question of Germany's obligation to pay indemnity for the loss of American lives as well as the amount that should be paid. That the United States accept Germany's sincerest regrets for the loss of Americans on the Lusitania in lieu of a disavowal of the act of the submarine commander in torpedoing the vessel.

The United States has replied that this government cannot consent to arbitrate questions involving the lives of American citizens, and it expects Germany to acknowledge without equivocation her obligation to pay indemnity.

Settlement probably will be reached on the following basis: The United States will not insist on a disavowal and will accept as sufficient Germany's formal expression of regret, coupled with her assurances that there will be no repetition of the act.

Germany, on the other hand, will yield on her proposal of arbitration and will admit her obligation to pay indemnity. Representatives of each government will be appointed to agree upon the amount of indemnity.

The Lusitania case has been the subject of negotiations between Secretary Lansing and Count Von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, ever since the Arabic controversy. The exchange of views has been accomplished for the most part by letter.

Germany has refused steadfastly to disavow the sinking of the Lusitania. Her position is that the commander of the submarine which sank the Lusitania acted on general instructions which authorized him to torpedo without warning.

Germany holds that the situation was entirely different in the Arabic case, because the instructions to submarine commanders had been materially changed after the Lusitania incident. It was admitted that the officer who sank the Arabic had disregarded his instructions and consequently the act was disavowed.

Burton, in a speech here Thursday night before members of the chamber of commerce, came out strongly for a policy of preparedness on which the present administration is working. STEADILY FORCING BACK THE SERBIANS

They Are Expected to Make Last Stand on the Kossovo Plains.

PART OF FORCE JOINS MONTENEGRINS

News From South Serbia Says That British Forces Have Arrived at Monastir; Situation Reported Quiet on French Front.

London, England.—The Austro-Germans, despite great difficulties of rain and weather, are bringing their subjugation of Serbia to a conclusion.

Troops under Gen. Von Koevess have occupied Novi Bazar according to the Berlin headquarters report Sunday. They have taken 4,400 more prisoners. Other groups have pressed [illegible] the Montenegrins until they are now defending their last positions on the Sanjak. Gen. Von Gallwitz and the Bulgarians under Gen. Royadjieff are trying to force the valley of the Lim.

Their ranks rent and torn, their country under the conquerors heels, the Serbians are being steadily forced back to the great Kossovo plain. On this historic battleground they will make their last defense.

Not All of Army in Net.

Not all of the Serbian army has been caught in the invaders' net, however, according to dispatches. Part of the harassed forces is reported in an official statement issued by the Montenegrin consulate at Paris to have succeeded in joining the Montenegrins on the River Lim.

The statement says: "Our troops, together with Serbian forces, sustained heavy attacks on the River Lim on Friday. In the Sanjak of Novi Bazar our forces have been obliged to retire upon their principal positions."

Another Serbian force won a victory of some proportions at Lescovac, south of Nish, according to information given out by the Serbian legation at Rome. Heavy losses were inflicted upon the Bulgarians.

Important news comes from the south, where it is reported British forces have arrived at Monastir. Deep mystery has cloaked the situation in this region for several days, the Bulgarians in the last dispatches having been reported in possession of the town. The British are believed to be part of the reinforcements which are being poured ashore at Saloniki and hurried to the front.

Quiet on French Front.

On the French front the situation is quiet. Large numbers of Bulgarians are being kept busy, however, lightening the pressure on the Serbians elsewhere. An important fact is reported in the French communique which states that allied troops are still being sent in numbers to the Balkans by way of Saloniki.

The Austro-Germans are meeting with tremendous obstacles in their advance on Kossovo plain, dispatches from correspondents at the front report. The territory across which they are moving, difficult under the best of circumstances, is made doubly so by the bitter Balkan winter, which has now closed down. The greatest difficulty is the transport of artillery.

The attitude of the Greek government to the allies is still unsatisfactory. The king, through his cabinet, has again affirmed his "friendliness," but has not taken the steps required to prevent Greece from being counted among the friends of the central powers.

The present position of the allied troops appears to be that if they are forced to retreat into Greek territory Greece will prevent the Germans from following, but the allied troops must leave Greek territory and not remain to re-form or receive reinforcements to again attack the Austro-Germans and Bulgarians. It is believed a settlement of the question will be arrived at favorable to the entente powers.

Five Men Drown.

New York City.—Five men of a fishing party of seven lost their lives Sunday. Two were rescued. They figured in one of the most thrilling accidents in the history of New York waters. Of the two who escaped one is in a serious condition and will probably die. For two hours the seven men were tossed about in a 19-foot dory that had become disabled off Rockaway point. The waves, 30 feet high, were knocking their little craft about like a cork.

Breaks His Fast.

Youngstown, O.—Joseph A. Anderson, a telegraph operator, Sunday ended a 47 days' fast, during which time no food of any kind passed his lips. During his long abstinence from food he lost 40 pounds in weight, being reduced from 120 to 80 pounds. He fasted to cure stomach trouble and believes a permanent cure has been effected.

Says His Pal Slew Men.

Lima, O.—The police here received a telephone message Sunday night from the police at Warren, O., stating that one of three men arrested there Sunday for a fight in a boarding house has confessed that one of his pals, in jail, had killed a man in Lima about three weeks ago. Police here believe that if there is any truth in the man's story the solution is in sight of the murder of John F. Hauenstein, wealthy realty owner, killed in his office in the Phoenix building here Nov. 1.

Find Bomb Near Home.

Tarrytown, N. Y.—That four sticks of dynamite with wire and caps, wrapped in paper, were found Saturday on the estate of John D. Archbold, president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, became known Sunday when the financier issued instructions to increase the number of guards. Chief Bowles of the Tarrytown police is looking for a man who was seen Friday near the place where the explosive was found. The explosive was found near a [illegible] by the superintendent of the estate.

GEORGE C. CAROTHERS

George C. Carothers special agent of the state department with the Villista forces, bids fair to add one more difficulty to the puzzle facing the United States in Mexico. Gen. Alvaro Obregon has protested to Gen. Carranza, saying that Mr Carothers "is dangerous to the tranquility of the de facto government."

LAY CORNERSTONE OF M'KINLEY MEMORIAL

Building Will Be Erected on the Site of House in Which the President Was Born, at Niles, O.

Niles, O.—Officiating on behalf of the people of the United States, officers of the grand lodge of Ohio F. and A. M., here with formal ceremony and ritual laid the cornerstone of a birthplace memorial to William McKinley, 25th president, martyred by the bullet of an assassin in Buffalo in the summer of 1901.

Men of prominence in the United States were present. Among the speakers were Myron T. Herrick of Cleveland, L. C. Dyer of St. Louis, commander-in-chief of the United Spanish War Veterans and a member of congress; James H. Hoyt of Cleveland, Oscar T. Taylor of Pittsburgh, past commander-in-chief of the Spanish War Veterans, Joseph G. Butler of Youngstown, and Mrs. A. J. Duncan of Cleveland, sister of the martyred president.

When completed, some time next summer, the memorial will be a magnificent white marble building occupying the greater part of a block in the downtown section of the city and fronting on the principal business street. It will contain a great auditorium, library, relic room and assembly rooms for the G. A. R. and other patriotic and military organizations. The building will stand almost on the site of the little weather beaten two-story frame building that was the McKinley homestead. The building will be erected with funds collected by popular subscription in every state in the Union.

WILL ORGANIZE FOR HELP IN CASE OF WAR

Woman's Section of the Navy League to Inaugurate a National Service Department.

Washington, D. C.—The woman's section of the Navy league Sunday announced the inauguration of a "national service department" to enroll American women for active service in the event of war involving the nation.

"Committees will be organized in every locality that will have charge of the registration of the women of their district for this work," says the statement. "Nurses, expert needle women and women of executive ability who could fill a particularly useful niche in the economy of the country in case of war will be registered for the work for which they are fitted."

Following the woman's national defense conference, held here last week, the woman's section of the Navy league has organized a campaign for a million members. Mass meetings of women in various cities are planned to aid the defense program.

The American Defense society Sunday outlined its plans for assisting the defense program, but stipulates that the administration "can help itself greatly by making public the reports of the army and navy boards and the special report of the navy board made last August."

Cows Burned to Death.

Gallipolis, O.—Fifteen cows were burned to death early Sunday in a fire which consumed a large barn owned by George L. Stage, near here. It is believed the fire was of incendiary origin and William Banks, colored, is being held by the authorities, until an investigation is made. The general store and postoffice at Maleby, near here, was damaged by fire Saturday night. As oil was found on the roof of the building, it is believed that the flames were of incendiary origin.

A New Blast Furnace.

Youngstown, O.—An announcement was made Saturday that the Republic Iron & Steel Co. has authorized the erection of another blast furnace here. The new stack will have a daily capacity of 600 tons of iron. It will cost approximately $500,000 and will require six months to complete. The new furnace will give the Republic eight stacks here, [illegible] in this district, increasing its capacity for producing pig iron [illegible].

PLAN FEDERATION OF COUNTRY CHURCHES

Commission on Church and Rural Life Will Inaugurate Movement.

OBLITERATE DENOMINATIONAL LINES

They Will Be Made to Serve Country Communities in Some Way as Chambers of Commerce Fill Needs in Cities.

Columbus, O.—Definite plans by which rural churches will be made to serve country communities in the same way as chambers of commerce now fill needs in cities were disclosed in reports of the National Commission on Church and Rural Life made public here today.

The plans are intended to dim denominational lines eventually by combining or federating country churches in Ohio and establishing community churches. These will be expected to be active in promoting the causes of good roads, scientific farming, public health and sanitation, temperance, public recreation, community beautification, better schools, library circulation and contentment with rural life.

The campaign probably will be initiated at the national convention of the Commission on Church and Rural Life, which will be held in Columbus Dec. 8, 9 and 10, in connection with the meeting of the Federal Council of Churches, with President Wilson and Gifford Pinchot as the principal speakers.

Here is a general outline of campaign plans: First, country districts will be flooded with newly developed publications telling of the success of a few community church enterprises in Ohio and other states. This will prepare the minds of ministers and rural leaders for possible church mergers later. Then it will be urged that several churches in a township or community effect a federation by choosing delegates to an interchurch committee.

This committee will assist in co-operation of its member churches in any community interests. Each church may retain its individuality and its own minister by this plan. Eventually, however, it is considered desirable by leaders in the movement that these churches would employ a common preacher.

Denominational identity might be retained in order to keep churches in touch with strong sectarian organizations but these lines would not be observed closely within the community.

The campaign in Ohio will proceed on facts discovered in the rural survey, which has been in progress for the past several years and which is not yet completed. It is said to be the only comprehensive survey of the kind ever made of an entire state. Further results announced today are these: Eight hundred of the 5,000 rural churches in Ohio have been abandoned. Only one-third are growing and two-thirds have either ceased to grow or are dying. Eighty-three per cent have a membership of less than 100, 21 per cent have less than 25 members, 27 per cent have between 25 and 50, 34 per cent have between 50 and 100.

REOPENS MURDER CASE

MAN CONVICTED OF MANSLAUGHTER GIVEN A NEW TRIAL BY COURT OF APPEALS.

Toledo, O.—Judges of the court of appeals Friday reversed the decision of Wood county common pleas court in the famous Nyeswander murder case. It will go back to the lower courts for retrial. Charles Nyeswander, a prosperous farmer living near Deshler, was indicted for murder in the second degree after the body of his father-in-law, W. E. Binder, had been found near Nyeswander's home Dec. 13, 1913. Binder had been killed by a blow on the head. A jury in common pleas court at Bowling Green convicted Nyeswander on the charge of manslaughter.

Given Five-Year Term.

Morris, Ill.—"Guilty, as charged in the indictment," is the verdict of a jury which for eight weeks has been trying Charles B. Munday for conspiracy to wreck the LaSalle Street Trust & Savings bank of Chicago and its affiliated institutions. His punishment was fixed at five years' imprisonment. The jurors were unanimous in their belief that Munday, as president of the LaSalle Street bank, conspired with William Lorimer, erstwhile United States senator, and H. W. Hutting of Muscatine, Iowa, to loot the bank and its allied concerns out of more than $3,000,000.

Will Meet Heavy Losses.

Sandusky, O.—Cabbage growers throughout the northern part of Ohio stand confronted with heavy losses because, owing to the war in Europe but little sauerkraut is being exported, according to W. H. Erdrick of Bellevue, president of the National Kraut Packers' association. "Hundreds of tons of cabbage will not even be harvested," said Erdrick. "Less kraut is being made than usual because there is no export trade. Accordingly, the price of cabbage is so low that harvesting the crop doesn't pay."

Refuse Gowns to Agent.

Paris, France.—The Paris dressmakers' syndicate has refused to sell gowns to a man named Kurzmann, said to have been commissioned by Mrs. Norman Galt, President Wilson's fiancee, to purchase wedding finery for her. The Paris dressmakers at a meeting Friday decided to blacklist two customers in America because of German ancestry and Kurzmann appeared to be one of the two. The dressmakers are willing to supply Mrs. Galt direct with any gowns she desires [illegible].

NO NATIONAL ISSUES

President's Policies Not Affected by Recent Elections.

Contests in Off Years Have Not for Some Years Past Had a Great Deal of Effect on National Campaigns.

After surveying the results of the recent elections, the New York Sun remarks:

"There has certainly been no spontaneous or spectacular demonstration of increased confidence in and popular approval of the domestic policies of President Wilson."

Quite true. And what, may we ask, did this year's elections have to do with the domestic policies of President Wilson?

The American people have quit voting on national issues in local elections, a circumstance altogether creditable to their intelligence. They determine their presidential politics in presidential years and attend to other affairs in the off years. Now and then a candidate for office who has reason to know his own political weakness tries to pin his candidacy to the national administration and pretend that a vote for him is a vote for the president, but his constituents know better.

President Wilson's domestic policies had no more to do with election results this year than had Mr. Bryan's lectures on the Prince of Peace. The voters of New York were not thinking about the president. They were thinking about the new constitution, woman suffrage, the direct tax and the Whitman administration.

In Massachusetts they were electing a governor, and they chose an able man in preference to a very good Democrat who has already had two terms. Massachusetts Progressives, having a lucid interval, supported Mr. McCall. In Maryland and Kentucky, where the Democrats elected governors, there were bitter contests with in the party over local issues, and it is unlikely that one voter in a thousand gave a moment's consideration to national affairs.

Possibly the Sun means that the general result of the elections reveals a tendency toward political reaction, as shown by the triumph of Tammany in New York county, the victory of the old Republican machine in Philadelphia, the rejection of municipal ownership in Detroit, the repudiation of prohibition in Ohio and the general failure of woman suffrage in the great eastern states. That may be true, but the worst defeat of all was sustained by the new constitution in New York, which was framed by a conservative Republican convention and championed by the ablest of conservative Republicans, Elihu Root. In fact, the majority against Mr. Root's constitution breaks all previous records in American politics. It is unique.

Partisans are entitled to the satisfaction of deriving whatever measure of comfort they can from off year elections, but they deceive nobody except themselves. The time is past when national campaigns can be won or lost in such contests as those which were decided recently.

Would Go Light on Tariff.

Our foreign trade is spoken of as marvelous, and it is so when compared with our own records. Compared with like figures in relation to populations and wealths of foreign countries, it is small, and capable of being made permanent instead of accidental. In fact, foreign trade is a life preserver for our domestic trade through the demands created by our exports to pay for our imports. It would be contrary to Democratic principle to take a reactionary course upon the tariff for reasons so impermanent as those of the war. The less done about the tariff the better, consistent with the needs of the treasury.—New York Times.

Something to Be Figured On.

There are only 23 more Democrats than Republicans in the national house of representatives, and only 26 more Democrats than Republicans, Progressives and Socialists combined, and yet some of the standpat brethren are figuring that if the opposition unites it will be necessary to detach only 13 Democrats in order to deprive the administration of the support of that body. How is the detaching to be done, and what price will have to be paid?

Small Working Majority Best.

However satisfactory it may be to the Republican party that the Democrats will have a working majority of only 25 in the next house, it is more satisfactory to the country. A top-heavy majority is a license to do the unwarrantable thing, while control by a small margin often insures good legislation.

Voters Know the Facts.

Pretermitting the question of the tariff law as a reform not yet tested, and reforms yet to be enacted, what administration in 50 years has such a record of constructive achievements as Mr. Wilson's has?

Of course, it is the law of politics for the minority party to find all the faults it can, real or imaginary, but how can it hope to convince the people in the face of the remarkable record which lies to the credit of President Wilson?

Not a Republican Victory.

From a national standpoint, the election will be interpreted as showing a drift towards the Republican party. Both in extent and in character, however, the results are too meager to justify any emphatic conclusion to this effect.

Ouch!

Mr. Taft says that the Republican party is stronger than it was in 1912. One would hope so, eight electoral votes [illegible].

BUSINESS IN CANADA IS GOOD

Successful Crops and Big Yields Help the Railway.

The remarkable yields that are reported of the wheat crop of Western Canada for 1915 bear out the estimate of an average yield over the three western provinces of upward of 25 bushels per acre. There is no portion of that great west of 24,000 square miles in which the crop was not good and the yields abundant. An American farmer who was induced to place under cultivation land that he had been holding for five years for speculative purposes and higher prices, says that he made the price of the land out of this year's crop of oats. No doubt, others, too, who took the advice of the Department of the Interior to cultivate the unoccupied land, have done as well.

But the story of the great crop that Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta produced this year is best told in the language of the railways in the added cars that it has been necessary to place in commission, the extra trains required to be run, the increased tonnage of the grain steamers.

It is found that railway earnings continue to improve.

The C. P. R. earnings for the second week of October showed an increase of $762,000 over last year, the total being only $310,000 below the gross earnings of the corresponding week of 1913, when the Western wheat crop made a new record for that date. The increase in C. P. R. earnings for the corresponding week of that year was only $351,000, or less than half of the increase reported this year. The grain movement in the West within the past two weeks has taxed the resources of the Canadian roads as never before, despite their increased facilities. The C. P. R. is handling 2,000 cars per day, a new record. The G. T. R. and the C. N. R. are also making new shipment records. The other day the W. Grant Morden, of the Canada Steamships Company, the largest freighter of the Canadian fleet on the Upper Lakes, brought down a cargo of 476,315 bushels, a new record for Canadian shipping. Records are "going by the board" in all directions this fall, due to Canada's record crop. The largest Canadian wheat movement through the port of New York ever known is reported for the period up to October 15th, when since shipments of the new crop began in August, 4,265,791 bushels have been reloaded for England, France and Italy. This is over half as much as was shipped of American wheat from the same port in the same period. And, be it remembered, Montreal not New York, is the main export gateway for Canadian wheat. New York gets the overflow in competition with Montreal.—Advertisement.

Hard Work.

A visitor was being shown through the editorial rooms of a great newspaper.

"Is that the man who writes those profound editorials on affairs of state?" he asked, pointing to a man whose corrugated brow indicated deep thought.

"Oh, no," replied his guide. "That's the baseball editor trying to think up a new rumor about the Federal league."

Luck.

"Do you believe in luck?"

"Of course I do. Aren't the other fellows getting it all the time?"

PATENTS

UNIFORM OF STATE SEEMS TO ATTRACT

No Lack of Applicants for Positions as Guards of State Institutions.

PAY IS SMALL AND EXPENSES ARE LARGE

Gas Companies Want to Raise the Price and the Consumers Will Fight; Many Cases Before the Utilities Commission.

Special Columbus Correspondent.
Columbus.

ONE of the most puzzling things about political patronage is the appeal it makes to the mind of many citizens. This appeal, unreasoning from any economic standpoint, was illustrated yesterday when competitive examinations were held in several cities throughout the state for the position of guard at various institutions. These positions pay an average of about $75 or $80 a month. The applicant not only must go through an examination, physical and mental, but must then get certain influence to get an appointment, for the reason that three persons are certified for every job. And if the applicant does land the job, he must move to Columbus, unless he lives here, and he must stand personally all the cost of moving and the inconvenience and the trouble, and he must buy uniforms and other equipment at his own expense, and he must undergo the cost of living at the capital, which is higher than in most of the cities of the state. Looks as if the state would have a hard time to get men for the places, doesn't it? But no, the facts are just the opposite. To be a guard at the penitentiary or at some other state institution seems to carry a peculiar, mysterial appeal for certain classes of people, who often are willing to give up better places to don the uniform of the state.

Exercised Over Court Ruling.

State taxing officials are considerably exercised over a ruling by Judge Walter D. Jones of the Miami county common pleas court holding that county commissioners practically have a free hand in providing for levies for road improvements. They declare that if the decision stands that this will mean the ruination of the Smith 1 per cent, which places a limit on the tax levies that may be made. Under the decision the commissioners can order levies without getting the consent of the people. The attorney general recently held that commissioners could not make these road levies without a vote of the people except in cases of absolute emergency, for example where funds might be needed to make badly needed repairs because of floods or other dire happenings. Under the Jones ruling the county commissioners could call any road job an emergency and make a levy which would compel the people to pay increased taxes for unrestricted road improvements. The tax commission has asked the attorney general to fight the ruling and take it to the supreme court, if necessary, to obtain a reversal.

Gas Rate Question.

The gas rate question is going to be an interesting one in Ohio during the next few years. Everywhere the indications are that the gas companies are determined to make a fight for higher rates for natural gas, while, on the other side, the gas using communities seem determined to resist the effort. The state public utilities commission now has several cases under consideration involving the clashing of the opposing interests, and other cases apparently are on their way to the commission for arbitration and settlement. The argument of the gas interests for an increase of tariffs generally is that the cost of producing the natural product is increasing and the supply decreasing, while the consumer is always paying less, because of the consumption reducing contrivances that are being invented. The argument in the behalf of the consumer is that since gas in many places has become an article of general use for heating as well as lighting, any increase in the price will create hardships among the poor or the moderately well-to-do consumers.

Teach Traffic Rules.

"Will you please send me 40 copies of the 'Traffic Rules and Regulations;' I want to use them in my school," was the request State Highway Commissioner Clinton Cowen received from Supt. D. A. Leake of Croton, Friday. He said that he believed it just as essential to teach things of that sort as many other things that are taught. Commissioner Cowen would like other schools to take up the study of the traffic rules and regulations which his department has prepared. These rules and regulations are designed to make the highways safer and are for the protection of pedestrians and drivers alike.

Marion Man Gets Appointment.

Attorney John W. Thompson of Marion has been appointed warden in the state insurance department at an annual salary of $2,100. The appointment was made by Judge Frank Taggart, state insurance superintendent. Thompson succeeds Harry L. Goodbread of Nevada, Wyandot county, who was a member of the house of representatives from that county before entering the department. Thompson is a Republican, while Goodbread is a Democrat. Supt. Taggart was appointed by Gov. Willis. He has made few changes in the department.

Averse to "Easy" Punishment.

There are six men now in the penitentiary for killing policemen. All are serving life terms, and yet there is not a little averse sentiment owing to the fact that all have escaped the electric chair. Four of the victims of the six men were killed during the discharge of their duties, and this fact is being put forward as an extra argument against the "easy" punishment given the assailants. A seventh man is now in the annex, however, and his day of execution has been fixed. Attempts are pending toward the commutation of his sentence.

Says People Can Live Longer.

That the people of Ohio can add to the span of their lives by the promotion of community health is one of the interesting contentions of Dr. Eugene F. McCampbell, secretary of the state board of health, in the latest issue of the Ohio Public Journal of Health, published by the state board. "We must eventually reach a point where a community which has a high death rate and pays no attention to matters of hygiene is to be looked upon as being in a semi-civilized state," says Dr. McCampbell. "Being in such a state," he adds, "such a community becomes immediately the matter of concern for all other communities in order to watch and adequately protect themselves." The promotion of health and the prevention of things that destroy health constitute the big problems of the hour, the health secretary avers. He holds that the death rate can be reduced by better community living and the eradication of numerous things which sap vitality. By taking the necessary precautions and the proper steps for the betterment of general hygiene the medical author holds that the length of life of the average person can actually be increased, and he maintains that it will be if the public conscience can be fully awakened to the health menaces of the modern day. The author makes eight different suggestions on health problems, which he says must be solved if the people would conserve life and postpone death until the "full limit of life expectancy." Here are his suggestions in brief: Reduction of infant mortality, since 27.3 per cent of all deaths occur under the age of five years and 19.3 per cent below the age of one year. Attention to the conservation of the lives of school children through adequate supervision of the physical health of pupils and the consequent prevention of the spread of communicable diseases. At least 70 to 75 per cent of all the school children in Ohio are defective, the author states. The elimination of tuberculosis, which now kills 7,000 people within the state every year. Increased attention to elimination of health hazards in industries and to the betterment of health conditions among working people. An absolutely pure water supply for every community. Protection of the food supplies of all the communities. Food eaten by most of the people in Ohio is not insured by public inspection, the author holds. Provision of the proper disposal of sewage and all other waste. Better sanitation in the rural sections where typhoid fever is particularly rampant.

Conciliation Courts an Institution.

Courts of conciliation are becoming an institution in Ohio. They are based on the theory that the least litigation is the best for all the people, and so they strive to settle claims without real process of law. Cleveland has one which permits every claim of $35 or less to file a petition without cost and without the aid of an attorney. When a claim is filed the court notifies the defendant by mail and he comes into the tribunal to talk things over. If A says that B owes him $20 and B says that the amount is not more than $15, it is usually not difficult to have both reach an agreement as to the reasonable settlement. Many times the would be litigants "split the difference" and go away happy. The experience has cost them not a penny. Cincinnati has been trying the same sort of stunt, but not in an official way. Other cities are talking about it. Columbus is about to try an experiment patterned after the Cleveland plan, excepting that the amount of the claims to be settled by conciliation will be smaller. Here in Columbus only claims of $15 and less may be subject to the jurisdiction of the new court, which will be simply a part of the new municipal tribunal just created. And the amount is made smaller for the simple reason that if it were made bigger the lawyers would kick on losing fees. Yes, sir! The lawyers don't like the new idea a little bit, for it spells lack of litigation and lack of litigation means a smaller income for the legal profession. In Cleveland they started in to make the conciliation claims $50 or less, but the lawyers kicked and got the maximum reduced to $35.

Ohio Has Best System.

Ohio has the best school system in the land, according to J. L. Clifton, assistant state school superintendent, just back from a national educational meeting at Nashville, Tenn. From reports made at that meeting by school men from all over the country he is convinced that the Ohio system is the best. He was one of the speakers at the gathering. He told of the new Ohio code and what results were being obtained under it. Many of the delegates saw Clifton after he completed his address and pressed him for more detailed information about the Ohio plan.

Lay Themselves Liable.

County treasurers who draw six months in advance funds for payment of bonds and interest and place them to their personal account in banks of their own selecting are liable, both criminally and civilly, so Attorney General Turner holds.

Fixes Time for Trial.

The supreme court has fixed the afternoon of Dec. 6 as the time for the hearing of the suit to determine the legality of the action of Gov. Willis in removing Byron L. Clendening of Cincinnati, Democrat, as member of the state liquor licensing board because of his activity in behalf of the referendum on the McDermott liquor license act, which was defeated at the recent election. The finding of the court will establish whether it is wrong for a licensing official to take any part in a referendum affecting the liquor business.

Too Near State Line.

Three counties are out of the running for the new state normal school that is to be established in eastern Ohio, namely, Columbiana, Jefferson and Noble. The commission appointed by Gov. Willis has announced that these counties will not be considered for the school and will not be even visited. This is disappointing news to those counties, which have been planning to entertain the commission and show off sites which they believe would be suitable for the school. Harrison and Belmont counties seem to stand the best chance.

HIGHWAY ACROSS BUCKEYE STATE

CINCINNATI TO CLEVELAND BY WAY OF COLUMBUS, SUGGESTED TO COMMISSIONERS.

PLAN A MODERN HIGHWAY

It Is Planned to Have the Road Cover the Shortest Route Between the Three Cities Interested.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Cincinnati, O.—A modern highway between Cincinnati, Columbus and Cleveland was discussed by the board of county commissioners. The suggestion was made by the Cleveland Advertisers club in a letter to the commissioners. In a resolution adopted by the Cleveland club the advantages of such a thoroughfare were pointed out.

It is planned to have the road cover the shortest route between the three cities interested. The pike would have to be built by the State Highway Department, but the co-operation of all boards of county commissioners of counties where the road will be located is requested. The local commissioners informed the Cleveland club that they would give their hearty support and co-operation to the movement.

Judge Wade Cushing, of the common pleas court, urged the support of the commissioners in building two roads east and west through Ohio and two roads north and south. He suggested that the east and west roads be the Lincoln highway and the Old National road. One road should run from Ironton to Cleveland and one from Cincinnati to Toledo. He urged that the commissioners advocate the construction of these roads out of concrete or brick.

TRACHOMA STAMPED OUT

Girls at Industrial School Are Out of Danger.

Delaware, O.—Trachoma, a dreaded disease of the eye, which prevailed among the inmates of the Girls' Industrial school at Delaware, has been successfully stamped out, and the last of the girls suffering with it has been pronounced out of danger. Special attention has been taken to guard against the spread of the disease at Delaware as at all other institutions, but the constant arrival of new inmates has made it almost impossible to detect the disease in its first mild form.

JOHN D. HAS TROUBLES

About Tax Collections to Be Aired in Cincinnati Court.

Cleveland, O.—It is likely to be a hard winter for John D. Rockefeller if the Cuyahoga county tax commissioners are successful in their appeal in their suit to force him to pay approximately $12,000,000 taxes. Judge John H. Clarke, of the federal court, allowed the commissioners an appeal from his injunction restraining the collection of the taxes. The case will be heard before the United States circuit court of appeals in Cincinnati.

CITY MANAGERS AT DAYTON.

Dayton, O.—City managers representing 14 different cities and almost as many states were in attendance at the meeting of the second annual convention of the association. The opening address by City Manager Waite, of Dayton, was brief and to the point. He welcomed the delegates to Dayton, and suggested an outline for the program. Response was made by Chas. E. Ashburner, of Springfield, after which the visiting delegates were taken on a trip of inspection through the various city departments.

TRIP COST THREE THOUSAND.

Cleveland, O.—Wm. J. Bryan's flying trip through the state in behalf of prohibition cost $3,613.89, according to a sworn statement of Rev. W. M. Hindman, filed with Secretary of State Hildebrant. Mr. Bryan did not receive pay for the speechmaking trip. The Pullman cost $360, railroad fare and accommodations amounted to $3,131, and $68.70 was paid to W. B. Matthews, of Delaware, who acted as Bryan's bodyguard.

LAD LOSES HIS LEFT FOOT.

Toledo, O.—After his shoe caught in a switch on the Lake Shore railroad tracks, Roscoe Jones, 16, extended the upper part of his body as far as possible from the rails and waited for a fast passenger train to hear down upon him. His left foot was severed above the ankle.

MORGAN TO OWN COMPANY.

Cleveland, O.—Control of the White Company, the largest manufacturer of motor trucks in the world, has practically passed into the hands of J. P. Morgan & Company, fiscal agents for the allies. In banking circles it was said that final arrangements might be concluded soon. A new corporation with $100,000,000 capital it was said would absorb the White Company. The deal when completed will establish the supremacy of J. P. Morgan & Company in the automobile field.

CHILDREN IGNORANT OF TRAGEDY

Clarington, O.—All of Monroe county was shocked by a double tragedy in which John W. Richards, after shooting his wife to death, blew out his own brains. The murder and suicide took place in a room of their home. Their seven children were not awakened by the shots and none of them knew of the tragedy until the eldest son, Howard, upon arising from his bed, emerged from his room only to stumble over the dead body of his father.

EASTERN DIVISION FIRST

Highway Practically Complete From Cincinnati to Knoxville.

Cincinnati, O.—Ten Ohioans attended a meeting of representatives of points along the eastern route of the Dixie highway at Knoxville, Tenn. Thanksgiving day, 1916 was fixed as the date for the formal opening of this division of the route. Judge M. M. Allison, president of the Dixie Highway association, in an address to the eastern delegates, said that there was no longer any doubt but that the eastern division, from Cincinnati to Knoxville and Chattanooga, would be completed first, and that it would thus get the preference and doubtless become the most traveled route. Sectional reports showed the route practically completed from Knoxville to Cincinnati, save through the mountainous counties of Kentucky, from which reports received showed that the highway work is well enough along to insure the completion of these short links by the date fixed for the opening.

FISH DISTRIBUTED BY STATE.

Cincinnati, O.—Ten thousand members of the finny tribe, comfortably ensconced, or rather, entanked in the "Buckeye," the special fish car of the fish and game division of the Ohio board of agriculture, rolled into Cincinnati. Within a few hours the passengers, consisting of silver catfish, rock bass, blue gills and other specimens, were released in the waters of the Great Miami river at Fernald, Oxford and Hamilton, and along the Whitewater river, below Harrison. Other pioneers were sent swimming away in the Little Miami at Symmes and Foster's and to Lacser's creek. Mill creek near Mt. Healthy also was restocked for the first time in its history.

WIRES ARE A MENACE TO LIFE

Columbus, O.—The Cincinnati and Suburban Bell Telephone Co. have asked the state utilities commission to compel the Interurban Railway & Terminal Co. to change its 11,000-volt high tension wires on Ohio pike, near Cedar Point. The phone company says the wires are on the poles just below theirs and that if their wires should break and come in contact with the railway wires the lives and property of its subscribers would be endangered.

BUCKEYE BREVITIES

Dayton, O.—The Ohio Hotel Men's association will hold their annual meeting in Dayton, December 7 and 8, and more than 150 persons are expected to be in attendance.

Columbus, O.—Call was issued for a meeting of the state bar examining commission here to prepare questions for the bar examinations which will be held December 7 and 8.

Ravenna, O.—Jim, 41 years old, said to have been the oldest horse in the United States, and owned by C. L. Rodman, of Ravenna, died. Jim lost his teeth and starved to death.

Columbus, O.—Addresses are to be made by Governor Willis of Ohio and Ferris of Michigan, at Toledo on Nov. 24. The occasion will be the unveiling of the terminal monument of the Ohio-Michigan boundary line.

Cincinnati, O.—Following the close of the Cincinnati Laymen's Missionary convention in Emery auditorium, ministers and churchmen all over the city will join in a sympathetic campaign to carry out the program of missionary work and church financing, as suggested by the convention leaders. These plans will be carried out in every denomination.

Elyria, O.—Frederick O'Brien and wife are named as defendants in a $2,000 suit brought by Miss Frances Conabee, who claims she was gored and trampled by a bull belonging to the defendants, which broke her arm.

ANOTHER "INSIDIOUS" LOBBY.

In 1913, soon after taking office, President Wilson electrified the country and started a stampede out of Washington, when he charged that the capital was infested by an "insidious lobby" which he was determined to smoke out. The hegira which followed this presidential warning left Washington hotel men to mourn the good old times. There was never before such a hustling to get out of the City of Magnificent Distances.

But the "insidious lobby" of 1913 was a negligible force in comparison with the more insidious lobby which now infests the capital. The lobby which challenged presidential attention in 1913 and which fled before the scourge which the White House brought into view was frankly selfish. It made few if any pretensions of patriotism. It was not saving the country. It was not buttressing our shores against a threatened invasion. It was not particularly anxious about the flag. It was troubling itself little with the Yellow Peril or the German bogey. It was there merely to get all that was to be had for the railroads, for steel, for sugar, for glass, for ship yards, for powder mills, for gun factories, for lumber and for all the other pets of privilege which republicanism had been nurturing for so many years.

The word from the White House gave this lobby a great shock and occasioned unconcealed alarm in many quarters, but it was highly effective. The hotel business in Washington was never so poor as it was in 1913 and 1914. But it must be improving now. For there is another and an infinitely more dangerous lobby infesting the capital of the nation today. It is a purely "patriotic" lobby, a lobby which has wrapped the flag about it, a lobby profoundly concerned over the welfare of the nation and the perpetuity of our sacred institutions, a lobby which is in deadly fear of some imaginary foe, a lobby that thinks in terms of air ships, submarines, dreadnaughts, 16-inch guns, torpedoes, shells, a huge standing army and a navy greater than a Hobson ever dared to propose.

Even the railroads when carrying forward their successful campaign to force the government to permit an increase of freight rates, flooded the mails with no such a deluge of literature as that which the Preparedness lobby is today disseminating. Never before in the history of the country has an equal activity in any behalf been witnessed. Evidently this lobby is richly endowed. It is magnificently organized. It is splendidly equipped. And it is carrying forward its work with a thoroughness and with an indifference to the cost which may well challenge the curious interest of the American people who are being asked to approve of vast expenditures on the "national defenses," the implication being that our shores are menaced by some powerful oppressor.

The ramifications of this lobby are widespread. Scores of leagues, societies, clubs and associations have been formed to push particular phases of the general campaign. There are national security leagues, national rifle associations, national aero clubs and national organizations of various sorts designed to arouse the country to some impending peril and to bring it to a realizing sense of what is expected of it in the way of funds for buying battleships, cruisers, dreadnaughts, submarines, destroyers, air craft, powder, war material and equipment and for the increase of army and navy to a war footing in a time of profound peace. Schools, churches, political organizations, the magazine and newspaper press, chautauquas, the lyceum, everything which contributes to the molding of public opinion, is being utilized by this lobby as far as possible in spreading the gospel of preparedness and in dragooning popular sentiment into an acceptance of the fantastic notion that preparation for war is a guaranty of peace.

The President might well turn his attention to this lobby. The one driven by him from Washington two years ago was praiseworthy by comparison. There was little false pretense in that "insidious" aggregation which haunted the halls of congress and besieged the departments of government in pursuit of favors. But the lobby of which the Army and Navy league, the National Security league, the National Rifle association, the Aero Club of America and scores of similar organizations are the visible expressions, is of the very essence of false pretense. It is greed masquerading in the vestments of patriotism. It is militarism cloaked in the garb of peace. It is selfish ambition posing as disinterested public spirit. It is imperialism of the sordid sort whose democratic habiliments do not conceal the iron hand or the two-edged sword. That it should indefinitely pursue its sinister work unchallenged seems unthinkable. The President and congress should both call it to account and force a revelation of the secret springs of action and the secret sources of supply. And the country will be much disappointed should the President and congress fail to turn on the light.—Warren Worth Bailey.

NOW LOOKOUT

When a cold hangs on as often happens, or when you have hardly gotten over one cold before you contract another, lookout for you are liable to contract some very serious disease. This succession of colds weakens the system and lowers the vitality so that you are much more liable to contract chronic catarrh, pneumonia or consumption. Cure your cold while you can. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a great reputation. It is relied upon by thousands of people and never disappoints them. Try it. It only costs a quarter. Obtainable everywhere.

These Men Pioneered the Way for You

When, about 1831, Stephen Girard trusteed his estate; when, later, George M. Pullman, Marshall Field, Chief Justice Fuller and others appointed trust companies in preference to individual executors of their estates, the wisdom of this course had not been so overwhelmingly demonstrated as it has been since. They were pioneers. They had to rely largely on their own judgment. They could not know that the few scattered trust companies of their time would grow to several thousands; that these companies would administer tens of thousands of estates, amounting actually to billions of dollars, without a single instance of loss through dishonesty or mismanagement.

In view of that record you, today, can dismiss from your mind all doubts as to safety, stability or intelligent management.
In each great city there is generally a strong, dependable company like The Cleveland Trust Company, which—though it dares to be "old-fashioned" when the old is good—yet has and deserves a name for being aggressive, for pioneering the way in new methods, new ideas, new policies and plans.

The Cleveland Trust Company gives particular attention to all classes of trust business. It has the system and organization to handle them well. There is much in the way of helpful suggestion that can be gained from even a brief interview with The Cleveland Trust Company. Such an interview will be both confidential and without obligation. Please feel free to consult with the Company's officers at your pleasure on this or other subjects.

The BROKEN COIN by EMERSON HOUGH

From the Scenario by GRACE CUNARD

COPYRIGHT 1915 by WRIGHT A. PATTERSON

Novelized From the Motion Picture Drama of the Same Name Produced by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

SYNOPSIS.

Kitty Gray, newspaper woman, finds in a curio shop half of a broken coin, the mutilated inscription on which arouses her curiosity and leads her, at the order of her managing editor, to go to the principality of Gretzhoffen to piece out the story suggested by the inscription. She is followed, and on arrival in Gretzhoffen her adventures while chasing the secret of the broken coin begin.

SEVENTEENTH INSTALLMENT

CHAPTER LX.

The Plotters of Grahoffen.

In the court of Grahoffen, meantime mixed sensations occupied the minds of those responsible for the disappearance of Kitty Gray and her servant, Roleau. Old Cortislaw and his redoubtable aid, Count Sachio, foregathered in the palace rooms immediately following the acts which had meant the forced deportation.

"She has gone, then, Sachio?" demanded the king.

"Without a doubt, your majesty! I myself from a distance saw the two hoisted inboard in freight nets—as so many cattle. They went into the hold of the vessel beyond any question—whether or not they come out again is their concern, not ours!"

"I am not so sure," said the old king thoughtfully, "not so sure. True, we have rid ourselves of potential trouble, but at the same time we have deprived ourselves of potential aid in questions not yet solved. They might have been useful, perhaps—"

"You mean the girl?"

"Yes. She has a mind, be sure of that. But what she might have done of use to us we may no longer ask with profit—she now is beyond our recall. That is only as to her knowledge, whatever it may have been, of the broken coin. As to this other enigma, this scrap of paper, which may or may not be connected therewith—who knows? I declare, I am like a horse in the dark—ready to shy at any such trifle as a scrap of paper blowing on the wind."

"We still have it, your majesty—we took it from her."

"Yes, but when we separate the two—the scrap of paper and the scrap of a girl—what do we actually accomplish? We have only a larger secret left, a deeper mystery. Curses on all women anyhow! They only make us trouble. Mysterious themselves, they solve no mysteries. The best I hope for yonder traveler is that she sinks at sea. I swear sometimes our little kingdom bids fair to sink in its own waves of trouble."

"Well, now, your majesty," said Sachio, who disliked this discontent of his sovereign, at no time safe for any courtier, "let us see what we ourselves may be able to do in solution of this mystery..."

"But if he knows nothing whatever of that scrap of paper—if he never heard of it—"

"All the more he will be willing to part with it if we ourselves can find it. As to that, we do not know. This is but a dragnet sort of move on our part, but it may take some fish—who knows?"

"Good! Then what is our next move, as you perceive it?"

"Why, let us make a cautious move to feel out their point—as a fencer tests his adversary's wrist, to feel his strength at the hilt. Let us send a note of friendship to Michael and ask him if it be not better that these two little kingdoms, separated by so narrow a stretch of land, should not henceforth meet in harmony, and no longer join in armed encounters. Let us point out to him that there are other nations greater than either of us—or both of us—which perhaps some time may look our way. Let us show him the virtue of an alliance between these two kingdoms. Let us play upon his fears, his vanity, his weakness, until we have convinced him that friendship with us is a thing desirable for him. Let us ask good Michael if he is not graciously disposed to be our friend today—to be our magnanimous and powerful friend!"

Sachio grinned broadly at his own irony, and his monarch gave vent to a loud laugh, his gray beard curling at the thought of his courtier's cunning as well as his loyalty to his own king.

"Excellent! Sachio, excellent!" he exclaimed. "Nor do I doubt the success of this thing as you plan it, if you yourself shall carry it forward. Do you then write that humble missive that you suggest—do you yourself ask Michael to be graciously generous to a weak and pleading friend! Ha! ha! Sachio, what next lies on the board for us?"

"Why, then, your majesty, we are alongside the fence that lies between us. We do not know how far it may be until we come to a gate or a gap, but sometimes there will be a gate or a gap through which we may pass. In some way I doubt not, I and others may perhaps gain access to the palace of Gretzhoffen. That gives us our footing. As for them, they sleep and revel. As for us, we act. It is the man of action who succeeds. Let them dream—we will act!"

"Your counsels jump with my own, my dear Sachio," said Cortislaw. "I have small use for the man who dreams or the man who waits. It shall be as you say. A test of this at least cannot harm us and may prove of extreme value. Go forward with it then, as you have said."

Mentor

Those of our people who were expecting to get off for Florida last week, were enabled to do so, although Mr. and Mrs. Robert Case were not able to get the desired tickets until a day or so later than they planned, but left here at noon on Friday.

Mrs. Jane Lawrence accompanied her daughter, Mrs. Robert Case to the Mentor depot, where they "ways" parted for the time being, Mrs. Lawrence going to Buffalo, to spend some weeks with her son Mr Frank Lawrence and his family, expecting to go down to Florida for the rest of the winter.

Mrs. Stephen Remington goes to Cleveland tomorrow, where she will be with her daughter, Mrs. Judge Wing, for the present.

Mrs Helen Blish was most delightfully surprised last Sunday, when her brother Mr. Wallace Dickey of Chicago, walked in unexpectedly, as his sister and his youngest brother (who were celebrating their joint birthdays, over in Willoughby at the residence of the brother, Mr Edward Dickey).

The Snell sisters are getting along finely, both being able to sit up and make an attempt at walking. No other cases of typhoid fever here.

Mrs. George Hicks of Metamora this state, has been spending the week just past with her sisters, the King girls.

Mr Lucius Tinker has gone to New York state, where he has charge of a manufacturing plant and a good position.

Mr and Mrs Bert Gerhardt are intending to move to the city for the winter months, and have arranged to leave some time this week.

Mrs. Brockway, whose illness from paralysis has been mentioned in these letters is said to be very much better, and hopes are felt that she may in time, recover.

Mrs. Florence Brainard will remain in her mother's house all winter we understand, as care-taker of the property, at the request of the administrator, Mr. T. G. Hart. This nice little home belonging to Mrs. Weed is for sale, as is also the Woodford corner at the Center, just opposite the new school building.

There seems to be all at once a general cry against catarrh and colds in the head; many school children quite badly afflicted.

Mrs. Harry King was in Hudson over Sunday with her mother Mrs. Della Ellsworth, at their old home down there.

The Thanksgiving sermon delivered in the Disciple church by the pastor was listened to by a good congregation and thoroughly enjoyed. Somehow, just the reading about twenty thousand little children wandering about in the woods of Servia eating the bark from trees digging roots and eating them—eating anything in fact to keep from starving to death, makes one feel to give thanks that our American little folks are, as a rule, well fed and warmly housed.

Mrs. William Beebe died of bronchial pneumonia last Tuesday morning at her home with her daughter, Mrs. Earl Gerhardt, the funeral being held Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Beebe was Miss Jeannet Freeman before her marriage, had lived in Mentor some fifteen or twenty years, was seventy five at her death, and was one of the most unselfish, motherly and lovable women it has ever been our good fortune to know. She was one of those "Keepers at home" of which Scripture tells us, and who did as unto the Lord faithfully whatever her hand found to do. Mrs. Beebe had mothered and brought up five different children besides her own daughter. She was a dear woman who will be missed by her neighbors and the friends who were so devoted to her, who certainly have our loyal sympathy.

This week we are full of trouble and heartache and there is no use to pretend anything different. Miss Delilah Hammond died last evening at about ten o'clock, and the funeral will probably be at her home at the Center sometime on Tuesday. Miss Hammond has been afflicted with some form of kidney trouble for some time and has been cared for by her niece Mrs Lucius Tinker who with her husband and family moved here from California some months ago for that purpose, and will probably remain here permanently now. Her nephew, Mr. Henry Hammond of Buffalo, together with his wife were also here with her at the last. Miss Hammond was a constant member of the Methodist church, a most devoted Christian—and faithful in all her relations in life. Some of us who have known and loved her all our lives recall the sweet patience with which she cared for her invalid mother, and the three little children of her brother whom she took at their mother's death and brought up, clothing and sending them to school. No one around the Center can ever take Delilah Hammond's place in the hearts of all who knew her.

Mrs. Robertson, more familiarly known as "Old Lady Robertson" passed away Saturday afternoon at her residence opposite the Methodist church, and the funeral is to be this (Monday) afternoon, after which her body will be taken to Cleveland for burial by the side of her husband, who died here in Mentor some years ago. Mrs Robertson was a Scotch woman who came to this country when she was twenty years old, and has lived right here in our little village—a most quiet life, so that very few felt acquainted with her—for fully eighteen or twenty years past. Rev. F. I. Dunbar, a former pastor, has been called from his home in Twinsburg, to have charge of the services this afternoon.

The Ladies' Aid cleared some seventy-five good dollars at their "bazaar" and supper on Friday evening, although the weather was horrid, and for that reason many stayed at home and hovered over the fire. Some ten dollars alone was cleared from candy—which was "home-made" and very good indeed.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Corning, who now own the old Ingersoll place and before that, known as the Webster place, have closed the house for the winter and moved into the city.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Murray moved "up home" to Cleveland for the winter on Saturday afternoon, and except for occasional visits down here on sunny Sabbath days, no neighbors will see their faces until another April.

So many are going South or into town for cold weather; those of us who are left to shovel snow and coal—feel decidedly forlorn!

Especially is Horace's corner—desolate!

Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Stocking of the County Seat were kind enough to come out in the moisture of Friday evening to the Mentor supper, same being most highly appreciated by our people, and the kindness will surely be returned by some of us—sometime.

In the disastrous fire of a week ago, Miss Ruth Bradway lost her surrey also a good road-wagon, harness and carriage robe. But for the presence of mind of Mr. Loomis, who though so badly burned himself on the face and hands—went back into the burning building and rescued the fine little horse owned by Miss Ruth, or it too would have perished.

The last Miscellany Club met at Sandilands, the country home of Mrs. Harry King, and the afternoon was a very pleasant one. Mrs Robert Case read a paper on Grand Opera, which was further illustrated by several records on a Victor machine (not a Victrola) and they seemed to be very much enjoyed we understand. Miss Elsie Hayford gave a short talk on DeKoven, Mrs Lyman Perry on the great musical leader "Thomas" and Mrs Christiana Johnson on "Sousa." The roll call which is always interesting was responded to by naming "favorite songs" and Mrs. Tyler (who is always up-to-date) named "The Little Old Ford, That Rambles Right Along."

The next Miscellany is to be in the nature of an anniversary meeting, when members will invite their partners to attend and partake of the always fine refreshments, and listen to some elocuting from Cleveland parties—who come representing the Cleveland school of Expression.

Word has come from Mrs. John Elsasser nee Miss Nellie Woodford, and has been passed round the village among her many friends, that she is not at all disappointed in southern Florida, but on the contrary is so much pleased—that she NEVER wants to see Mentor again! (Kind of hard on Mentor—and Mentor folks!)

Mr. Warren Rexford has just butchered an eight months old piggie that weighed three hundred and seventy-five pounds dressed, and declares if any other farmer in Lake County can beat that—he wants to know it!

The paving job is all done, bricks and things all cleaned off the sides of the street nicely graded down, and all is right apparently and as per contract. The last bit of roadway was opened Friday afternoon and it was quite amusing to see how soon the automobiles began to tear past here at a break-neck pace as though to make up for lost time.

Really unless the village council takes the matter in hand very soon, and enforces the speed limit there is going to be trouble as sure as you're born! Even now—with not more than ten thousand passing through every day, it is not safe for a child to try and cross the street, so how will it be when most of the million or more are rushing for Little Mountain or for Painesville fast as ever they can go?

Mr and Mrs Ben Warren move over onto Mentor Ave this week and will have the use of their sister's pleasant home during the winter as Mrs Anna Warren Shumaker and her brother the ex-treasurer are soon to leave for Florida.

Mrs Howard Ingersoll and her small daughter Marjorie were recent guests of her uncle Mr Warren Rexford and his good "other half" for a short time.

Miss Luella Kerr has been a tonsillitis sufferer for a number of days past but is somewhat better at date, we are glad to say.

Next week Thursday evening the second of December comes the organ recital by Mrs Carl Woodruff of Cleveland and is sure of being well worth attending. Mrs Woodruff taught in the Primary room at the Center at one time.

At the township Sunday School convention held in the Disciple church last Sunday evening the following officers were elected: Miss Jeannette Munson President, Mrs W. G. Otis Vice President, Mrs Will Hagenberger, Secretary, Lynn Carleton, Treasurer; Harry C. King Supt of Adult Classes, W. G. Otis, Supt other classes.

There will be union services in the Disciple meeting-house next Sabbath evening, which will take the form of a stereopticon illustrated lecture on "The Women of the Orient" the machine run by Mr. Clark, the talk given by Mr. Schaffner. These lectures are very educational and are taking well with our people, who surely will have more interest in all Missions—when the winter is over and the lecture course finished.

Mr. and Mrs L. B. Clark entertained their Sunday School classes last Saturday afternoon, and gave them a nice supper at the parsonage. This school is growing rapidly all the time, and that too without any contest being back of it as a short-lived stimulant.

We are glad to hear that Rev George A. Lord of Painesville has consented to speak in the Disciple church next Sunday morning at the usual time, eleven-thirty. We seldom tack the word "Reverend" onto the name of a minister—not believing it to be Scriptural and so many of the "brethren" will not allow it.

PASTOR SHELDON ON PREPAREDNESS

Kansas Minister Takes Issue With the President On His Military Program

[EDITOR'S NOTE:—Rev. C. M. Sheldon a few years ago an obscure pastor in Kansas, became a national character as the author of a book, "In Jesus' Steps," and later endeavoring to manage and publish a newspaper, for one week, as the Nazarene would have done were He living today. The book created a profound sensation throughout the country and had an enormous sale.]

President Woodrow Wilson,
Washington, D. C.

Mr. President: In your speech in New York you are reported as saying: "If men differ with me in this vital matter, I shall ask them to make it clear how far and in what way they are interested in making the permanent interests of the country safe against disturbance."

I am one of those who differ with you very positively on your program of War Preparation, and I believe the men of the West generally differ with you. You say, "No thoughtful man feels any panic haste in this matter. The country is not threatened from any quarter. She stands in friendly relation with all the world." If that is true, why all this military program for an enemy we do not possess? In the entire course of your speech, you do not mention one single reason for an increased army and navy. You do not name one nation in the world that has any design to threaten or invade our country.

Mr President, I have lived in the West over twenty-seven years, and within the last year have been in every Western state, and faced over one million and a half of the people, and your program of militarism will meet with earnest and intelligent opposition from this part of the country. Much as I would wish, as a citizen who loves his country, to stand by the President in matters of vital concern, I for one cannot and will not uphold you and your advisers in this matter.

Mr. President, you advise men who differ with you "to make it clear how far and in what way they are interested in making the permanent interests of the country safe from disturbance."

If the money you and your advisers declare is necessary for military preparation against an enemy you do not name, were to be used in the education of the people and the Christianizing of the world, we could put an end forever to the war-lust of the world. If we took a small part of the people's money which your program will take from the people to buy powder, and put it into a campaign for National Prohibition of the liquor traffic, we could prepare our country for a Christian program of conquest over other passions.

If we took the price of one battleship and put it into the building of good roads in one of our states, we could prepare our people for a happier and cleaner and saner life.

If we took a small part of the immense sums your program calls for in the enrichment of munition factories, and spent it in Christianizing Europe after the great war is over, we could once and forever remove even the needless fear of war which exists in this country.

Mr. President, the program you propose to the people of this country to strengthen the military power of this Republic is contrary to the spirit of Christianity. What would Jesus do? Can we imagine him at this crisis in the world's history calling on a nation to spend vast sums preparing itself for war by creating a great army and navy? It is not thinkable. We know what he would do. He would call on the people of this country to give at least a dollar apiece to preach and practice the gospel of justice and brotherhood here at home, and to take what battleships we have and load them with the best of our sons and daughters, and send them around the world to evangelize the nation that will be ready for it as never before and put an end to war by teaching and practicing the principles of the Prince of Peace.

Over against your program, we who differ with you place this program of preparedness. It is more practical than yours. It is the only program which will in the end bring about the brotherhood of man.

With voice and pen and all the influence I possess, I, as one American citizen, will oppose this program of militarism to the full extent of my power, for it represents not the spirit of the Master, the Prince of Peace, but the spirit of the old-world fear and distrust and hate which has kept alive through all the centuries that which the United States does not represent either by her traditions or by her history. After all these centuries of Jesus Christ, we should have learned the lesson which he has been trying to teach us: "They that use the sword shall perish by the sword."

I am, very respectfully yours,
CHARLES M. SHELDON,
Central Congregational Church, Topeka, Kansas.

Diversity of Farm Enterprises

In most cases where studies on the profits in farming have been made, particularly in our oldest agricultural districts, such studies indicate that the most successful farms are those which have from two to four major sources of income; i. e., they have a well-balanced and diversified business. In certain instances it may pay better to have only one enterprise, but usually when one crop pays much better than all others the production of it increases rapidly and soon the price falls to the point where other crops or products are equally as profitable. Diversified farming is often confused with farming where there is a little of everything and not much of anything. Either extreme lessens the chances of success. When the price of certain crops is very low then live stock usually becomes desirable. However, if the returns per animal are poor, cash crops even at a low price are essential. A well-balanced business insures against losses and provides a much better utilization of the labor and equipment.

MEETING TO DISCUSS AGRICULTURAL SCHOOL

Will be Held at Madison, Ohio, Tuesday Evening, December 7th

A public meeting, for the purpose of electing officers for the Agricultural Extension School recently granted this county by the Board of Trustees of the Ohio State University, will be held at Madison on Tuesday evening, Dec. 7. The local committee in charge of the arrangements invites everyone interested in agricultural education to be present. The officers to be elected are president, secretary-treasurer and special committees. Other important business will come up for consideration. An instructor from the College of Agriculture will be present to help organize and answer any questions that may arise concerning the school.

The College of Agriculture furnishes the teaching force for this Extension School, which will last one week. In a limited way it will be an Agricultural College, with several courses under experienced professors. All who are interested in agriculture should thoroughly appreciate this opportunity. From the interest manifested by the people of this community who made an effort to get the Extension School, it is thought that a good attendance will be present at the organization meeting. This is necessary in order that satisfactory arrangements can be completed for the school which will be held the week of Jan. 10, 1916.

No Trespassing

(From the Utica Press)

There is a Warren county farmer who grew tired of having his signs reading, "No trespassers allowed," ignored, and thereupon tore down the old signs and substituted one that read as follows:—

NOTIS

Trespassers will be pirsecuted to the ful extant of 2 mongrul dogs which ain't never been ovrely sosbnle to straingers, and one dubble har'l shot gun, which ain't loaded with sofy-pilars. dam if i ain't gettin tired of this helrasin on my proplty.

Whereas the nicely-printed signs were ignored, the last one attracted much attention, which resulted in the 'helrasin" being entirely stopped.

STARVING, DESERTS GERMAN FORCES

Soldier Escapes in Female Attire and at Last Arrives in Holland.

FROM WHENCE HE SAILED AS STOWAWAY

He May Be Deported and Netherlands Government May Return Him to Germany, In Which Event He Will Be Shot.

New York City.—Carl Schulz, the first deserter from the German army to reach New York, arrived here Thursday on the freighter Noorderdyk, on which he stowed away at Rotterdam.

He was taken to Ellis Island today and his exclusion from this country may mean that he will be returned to Germany by the Netherlands government. In that event he will be shot for desertion.

Story of His Escape.

The story of his escape from his regiment—the king of Saxony's light infantry—reads like a drama of the "movies."

Here is his story as he told it to a reporter on the deck of the Noorderdyk, to which he was brought under guard from the ship's brig.

"I know that there is nothing meaner or more contemptible than desertion. But I could stand it no longer. Our regiment was in ignominy because every battle in which it had engaged had been lost. Our commanding officer had been demoted and sent back and the king of Saxony's light infantry was covered with shame.

"After a three days' battle we were repulsed, but were told that we were nearing Paris. This went on for weeks. We lost count of time and one day at the approach of what proved to be a serious defeat for our arms we were told that Paris was only a few miles distant. The signs identifying the towns were torn down and we were kept in ignorance of our exact locality.

"We waited there for weeks. Half rations was the order of the day and later quarter rations. Some days there was no food at all and the men were ...

VIGOROUS ACTION BY ALLIES EXPECTED

Austro-Germans Will Not Be Allowed to Keep Constantinople Route Open.

POSITION OF RUMANIA MORE DEFINITE

Reply of Greek Government to Latest Note of Allies Has Been Delivered and Is Understood to Be Favorable to Demands.

Paris, France.—Vigorous action by the entente powers in the Balkans is believed to be imminent. That the Austro-Germans will not be allowed to keep the Berlin-Constantinople route open is indicated by latest developments.

Field Marshal Kitchener reached Paris Monday after his visit to the near east and Italy. The Temps announces that a war council of the allies will be held in Paris.

The position of Rumania is becoming more definite. Her early intervention on behalf of the allies is expected.

Favorable Reply.

The reply of the Greek government to the latest collective note of the entente powers has been delivered. It is understood to be favorable to the demands of the allies.

Dispatches to the Temps from Bucharest state that the Rumanian government has decided to act, the only difference between Premier Bratiano and MM. Jonescu and Filipesco being one of date and method, which difference may be expected to disappear shortly. Demonstrations against Austro-Germans have occurred in Bucharest and many have been obliged to leave the city. Interventionist agitation is increasing.

Railway Congestion Is Claiming the Attention of Shippers and Commercial Organizations in State.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Toledo, O.—Railway congestion is claiming the attention of shippers and commercial organizations throughout the state, and the matter has been called to the attention of the Utilities Commission. That body has been keeping a close watch on the situation, and will do whatever is in its power to make the situation less harmful to manufacturers and shippers. There is a possibility that it may issue orders reducing the time limit for unloading cars or increasing the demurrage charges to expedite unloading. Traffic Commissioner H. G. Wilson, of the Toledo Chamber of Commerce, sent to the Utilities Commission a detailed statement of conditions confronting big manufacturers and large shippers in his section of the state.

LIBERTY BELL IN OHIO

Great Throng Waited in Patience For Historic Relic.

Cincinnati, O.—Amid the cheers of an army of 60,000 school children and the shrill blasts of factory whistles, the Liberty Bell entered Ohio via Cincinnati aboard its special car. Hardly had the car been shunted into place before a march of the children began. Eight abreast, the children tramped over the observation platform built especially for them. Their eyes glowed with patriotic fervor as they gazed lingeringly at the historic relic. Had the bell broken its long silence and again pealed forth its summons to the city, it hardly could have brought together a more patriotic "army." The ...

DEATH OF BISHOP MOORE

... Churchman Preached Funeral Sermon.

Cincinnati, O.—The death of Bishop David H. Moore meant more than a loss of one of the church dignitaries to those friends in Cincinnati who had been his intimates during his stay in this city. It meant the passing of a friend on whom the greatest trust could be placed. At the Western Methodist Book Concern offices there was genuine grief among the men and women who were there when Bishop Moore took an active part in the affairs of the Western Christian Advocate. For eleven years he was editor of this publication, only severing his connection when he was raised to the rank of bishop in 1900.

Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church attended funeral services for Bishop David H. Moore at the Walnut Hills M. E. Church, McMillan street and Ashland avenue. Brief eulogies of Bishop Moore were paid by the other Bishops. A deputation from Fred Jones Post, G. A. R., to which the decedent belonged, was honorary pall bearers. Interment was made at Athens. The Bishop was buried by the side of his wife, who was laid to rest four years ago.

STATISTICS OF CHURCHES

Officials Announce That 800 Churches Have Been Abandoned.

Columbus, O.—Officials connected with the rural survey now in progress in Ohio announced that 800 of the 5,000 rural churches in this state have been abandoned. Only one-third are growing and two thirds have either ceased to grow or are dying. Eighty-three per cent have a membership of less than 100, 21 per cent have less than 25 members; 27 per cent have between 25 and 50, 34 per cent have between 50 and 100. Only six per cent have individual preachers, while 26 per cent share ministers with another church, 23 per cent have one-third the time of a minister, 27 per cent have one-fourth time; one per cent have one-fifth time, five per cent have one-sixth time, and several ministers try to attend to seven or eight churches.

Analysis of the Elections in Massachusetts.

Republican Claims That It Was a High-Tariff Victory Are Idle in View of the Condition That Prevailed.

In his essay on political lying, Swift remarks that a short memory is essential to the interpretation of political events, or the interpreter will find himself repeatedly "swearing to both sides of a contradiction." In Massachusetts the annual elections require an abnormal brevity of recollection. The Republicans are pointing to McCall's vote of 235,918, with its marked increase over the 198,600 votes he received in 1914, as evidence of the sweeping nature of the Republican triumph. But they forget entirely to look at the figures of Governor Walsh's increase. In 1913 he received over 183,000 votes, in 1914, over 210,000; and this year, though defeated, he polled over 229,000. An extraordinarily large vote was brought out on all sides this year in Massachusetts, and into the result it is easy to read too much by simply looking at one side. As it is, it could be contended with force that the Democrats received a share of the returned Progressive vote. Similarly, examination of the facts makes it impossible for the Republicans to claim the election as a high-tariff victory. Salem, with its cotton mills, was a Walsh city; so was Gloucester, so were Chicopee, Holyoke, Lynn, Brockton, Woburn, Lowell and Fitchburg. Eleven of fourteen of the larger manufacturing cities were carried by Walsh. It was obviously an election with an unusual number of cross-currents.

Prominent People Appointed on the Ohio Peace Monument Commission.

WILL BE ERECTED IN CAPITOL SQUARE

It Will Commemorate More Than Fifty Years of Peace Between the North and South; Presented Mexican War Relic.

Special Columbus Correspondent.
Columbus.

WELL known citizens of Ohio have been appointed by Gov. Willis to represent the state officially on the Ohio peace monument commission, which is being organized jointly by patriotic organizations and the Ohio State Board of Commerce to raise funds for the erection of a peace monument in the Capitol square in Columbus to commemorate the more than 50 years of peace between the north and south. The men appointed on behalf of the state by the governor are: Ex-Senator Joseph B. Foraker of Cincinnati, who was also twice governor; former Gov. James E. Campbell of Columbus, Gen. J. Warren Keifer of Springfield, former speaker of the national house of representatives, and Attorney Hugh Huntington of Columbus, prominent member of the Franklin county bar. The Women's Relief corps inaugurated the movement for the proposed monument some time ago and will give a fund it collected for this purpose to be made a nucleus of that to be raised by the peace monument commission. The legislature was asked to appropriate $20,000 for the erection of the proposed monument this year, but it declined to do so. The G. A. R. will be represented on the commission by Gen. R. B. Brown of Zanesville, past national commander in chief of the organization, John Feberenbach of Cincinnati, Nelson Purdin of Chillicothe, T. W. Hill of Cleveland and W. S. Mathews of Columbus, all prominent in Grand Army circles. The Women's Relief corps will be represented on the commission by the seven women who comprise the ...

Presented Flag Relic to State.

Nearly 70 years ago patriotic women of Athens made and presented Ohio soldiers who enlisted to fight for this country in the war against Mexico a beautiful flag. These brave men carried this banner to victory all through the Mexican war. It inspired them to noble deeds. When they entered Mexico City, triumphant this flag was at the head of the column. Saturday this flag of sacred memory, its original beauty gone, bearing little resemblance to its former self because of time's ravages and the vicissitudes of a long and useful career, was turned over to the adjutant general's department to be placed in the archives of the state, where it will be tenderly cared for for all time to come. The Mexican war flag was carried by John Peters of Middleport, who was color sergeant of one of the Ohio regiments that served in that war. Peters distinguished himself in that war, serving from the beginning to the close of it. When he returned home he brought the old flag with him and guarded it as he would have guarded one's life. Two years ago he died, and the banner he loved so deeply became the possession of his daughter, Mrs. Augusta Peters Ruble. She has just presented it to the state. Inscribed on the flag in black letters, barely discernible, are these words: "Our Country's Call Obeyed." There are 22 stars on the flag, one for each state in the Union when the Mexican war occurred.

Cannot Agree on Appointment.

Because the state board of administration, which has charge of all state institutions, and the state civil service commission cannot agree upon the method by which a permanent matron is to be chosen for the new Marysville reformatory for women, the opening of the institution is being delayed. The board wants to appoint a non-resident matron, while the commission favors a resident of the state.

Divorce Politics From Judiciary.

Complete divorcement of politics from the judiciary is the aim of the members of the bar of the Second district, which takes in Franklin, Montgomery, Champaign, Darke, Fayette, Greene, Madison, Miami, Preble and Shelby counties. A year ago the Democrats of this district refused to put up any candidate against Judge James I. Allread, Republican, one of the three judges of the court of appeals of the Second district, and now the Republicans have agreed to leave the ...

SOME REFLECTIONS ON GIRLS

Call "Girls," and those of sixty look around just as quickly as those of sixteen.

When the door bell rings, every girl in the house steps to the nearest looking glass.

It is particularly important that a girl should be taught the virtue of always being right; she can never be president.

Distinction sometimes comes easy. For example. It comes to the girl of sixteen who has the largest number of boy correspondents.

Never trust the making of your bread or the spending of your money to a girl who lingers on street corners to make goo goo eyes.

A girl's idea of being equal to an emergency is to be prepared to make a three weeks' visit when she has been invited to remain only three days.

The better looking the young man, the louder the girls squeal at his jokes. A very homely man has to say something really witty to get even a smile.

Tell a girl before marriage that she is going to throw herself away, and she is indignant. Tell her after marriage that she might have done better and she is flattered.

A girl of sixteen may demand that a man write a Spencerian hand, or not dare look at her, but after she falls in love she doesn't care if his writing looks like a doctor's prescription.

Once upon a Time a Girl who had a Good Job and a Big Salary and no one to Spend it on but Herself, Married a Man who was so Penurious he Courted her with Wild Flowers and Gum Drops. Being Proud and Reserved, she Never complained to her Friends, and they Never Knew that her Purse was Stuffed with Dry Goods Samples to make it Look Fat or that her Pallor came no Longer from the Druggist but from the Flour Barrel. But it is noticed that whenever she sees a Cow or a Colt tied in a field with a Very Short rope and with the Grass eaten as far as can be Reached, she Sheds a tear of Sympathy and ...

Canada Ordered by Empire to Commandeer the Wheat Crop.

AMOUNT SEIZED 16,000,000 BUSHELS

News of Embargo Created a Sensation in Grain Circles in Dominion; Causes Surprise Among Chicago Dealers.

Ft. William, Ontario.—Acting under instructions from the Dominion government, R. Magill, chief grain commissioner of Canada, has issued an order commandeering on behalf of the government all northern wheat of No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3 variety, in elevators both here and at Port Arthur. The wheat is required by the British government.

Hits Only Terminal Elevators.

It was at first understood the order applied to the whole Dominion as well, but a statement was given out Sunday night that the order hits only the terminal elevators at the head of the lakes and the eastern Canadian elevators.

The total amount seized is approximately 16,000,000 bushels, for which the price has not yet been fixed.

Five million bushels of this wheat would have been loaded here Sunday but for the order.

Created Sensation in Winnipeg.

The news of the embargo created a sensation in grain exchange and transportation circles in Winnipeg. The general opinion is that the order will prevent any shipments in bond or otherwise of Canadian wheat into the United States by rail or lake ports.

Shipping men claim that under the restrictions as they exist now the lake shipments will be reduced to one half of the recent average shipments.

Chicago, Ill.—The commandeering of Canadian wheat caused surprise but not uneasiness among Chicago grain dealers. The action should have no permanent effect on prices in the United States in the opinion of Robert McDougal, a prominent Chicago exporter.

THE REAL PREPARDNESS

Hill dwelling people are proverbially patriotic. The mountains have always sent forth fighters. In all of the books the clansmen from the hills tell about their "mountain home." They are able to do that because the mountaineer really has a home. Somewhere among the crags there is a cottage or a hut that the mountaineer calls his very own.

The dwellers in cities and upon the plains have not as a rule fought as sturdily as the mountaineers. The plainsman has had less to fight for. His grace owned the valley and my lord the earl held wide dominion. There are, of course, some men who will fight as quickly in behalf of an earl or a duke as they will for themselves. But the average man fights best when he defends his home. France for example, is a home-owning nation. The peasant is rooted to the soil. He owns the few acres that sustain him. And France can put millions of last ditch fighters into a conflict. Germany is a home-owning nation. The people are bound by the bonds of ...

... cause men lack homes. Preparedness that is not backed by conditions that are economically sound is preparedness that is weak, no matter how much metal it can throw at a broadside. If congress will take up the task of striving to stem the rising tide of tenantry in this country; it will be working mightily in the interests of the national defense.—Johnstown, (Pa.) Democrat.

THE FIRST THING NEEDFULL

Says the Chicago Tribune in its issue of November 21st, in speaking of preparedness:

"If Americans are ready to die for the country they must first find America well worth dying for. No state which permits the slums, and condones vast inequalities of fortune, can hope rationally for a devoted and virile patriotism. Preparedness to meet aggression ...... does not mean more ships and more guns. It means fundamentally a domestic strength and prosperity, which are possible only when justice and enlightenment rule the relations of all citizens."

It is clear that the Tribune must see what Henry George pointed out in 1891 in his "Protection or Free Trade," when discussing the preparedness agitation of that time. Mr. George said:

"The dangers to the Republic come not from without but from within. What menaces her safety is no armade launched from European shores, but the gathering cloud of tramps in her own highways. That Krupp is casting monstrous cannons, and that in Cherbourg and Woolwich projectiles of unheard of destructiveness are being stored, need not alarm her, but there is black omen in the fact that Pennsylvania miners are working for 65 cents a day. No triumphant invader can tread our soil till the blight of "great estates" has brought "failure of the crop of men," if there be danger that our cities blaze, it is from torches lit ...

FROM BAD TO WORSE

(Youngstown Vindicator)

The trouble with the military craze is that it's like a contagious disease and knows no bounds. Here's ex-Governor Herrick, now, out at Chicago, talking of conscription and military service for every man of military age in the country.

For how long a time is each to serve, Governor.

And the general staff of the army jeers at President Wilson's paltry regular army of one hundred and thirty thousand regulars with four hundred thousand partially trained reserves, and says we must have at least five hundred thousand regulars and a million of reserves to keep us safe behind our three thousand miles of sea. And moving picture screens are being prepared for exhibition throughout the country, probably paid for by manufacturers of munitions of war, showing Washington and Philadelphia and New York and Boston in ruins under the bombarding cannon of imaginary European enemies. And so it goes from bad to worse, with the prospect that the country may refuse to stomach the excessive program and that in disgust it will refuse even the much needed preparation for defense which the President advocates.

THE CRUX OF THE QUESTION

From the Public.

That special interests are back of the preparationist movement there is little room to doubt. Reactionary protectionists see in it a means of forcing restoration of high tariff rates, and believe that a war scare will prove more forcible than the threadbare falsehood about "pauper competition." Then there are the elements which hold with ex-President Taft that "in a nation of 100,000,000 there are liable to be riots, mobs and insurrections which cannot be regulated except by the presence of an army." The present seems a good time to secure the consent of the people to establishment of a big military institution, ostensibly for use against a mythical ...

Thanksgiving

I.
So many just feel thankful,
For the worldly things they own,
And others feel like giving thanks,
For honor they are shown,
There is something more enduring,
Would we choose the better part,
It is that thankful feeling,
For the good within our heart.

II.
The Merchant may be giving thanks,
For profits he has made,
The farmer for his well-filled barns
The tradesman for his trade,
Next year their business may be gone
Or it may fail in part,
But we can still be thankful,
If there's good within our heart.

III.
The people that are honored now,
Because of some success,
Have good cause to be thankful,
And should be, I confess,
But honors are like riches,
They both so soon depart,
And leave us really nothing,
But the good that's in our heart.

IV.
The man who measures his success,
By the money he can save,
Has missed the higher things of life,
And makes himself a slave.
His savings only mean to him,
A better worldly start.
How then, can he be thankful,
With so little in his heart?

V.
If we can have the memory,
Of kindly deeds we've done,
Of struggles we have had with self,
Of victories we have won,
Of the sacrifices we have made,
Of the sunshine we impart,
We every day can celebrate,
Thanksgiving in our heart.

Democrats on Point of Break, Says Murdock.

New York, Nov. 18—That the democratic party is on the point of breaking up and that from its parts will come the elements of a new radical party, is what recent events mean to Victor Murdock, chairman of the progressive party national committee.

Murdock, who has just sailed for Europe, foresees a bitter fight in the house on the administration program and predicts the fight will be led by Claude Kithin of North Carolina and Walter L. Hensley of Missouri.

"Wilson has become the leader of the conservative democracy," said Murdock.

"The preparedness issue is the thing which momentarily is centering attention, but more important than the preparedness issue in its ultimate effects, is the division between the Bryan or radical democrats and the McAdoo or conservative democrats.

"Bryan believes, and his friends and followers believe, that Wilson has become the safe and sane democrat, the reliable democrat, the friend of business and promoter-of-prosperity democrat, and that radicalism and principle can go hang.

"As Bryan has quit for his radical principles, there will be a lot of other democrats who will quit.

"Which leads me to my reason for believing that the progressives should by all means hold together at this time. Personally I do not care whether the radical democrats come to us, or whether they form a new party and we go to them. The point is that we belong together.

"There are two unreconcilable elements in both the old parties and these elements have got to separate and mingle each with its own kind. ...

Wants Municipal Theaters

William Faversham, one of America's greatest actors, who is touring this season in "The Hawk," is advocating the small town municipal theater. "The 'Movies,'" says Mr. Faversham "which every small town has enjoyed for several years now have created an enormous demand which will soon assert itself for the spoken drama. It is inevitable that this demand will come, and when it comes the small town will have to do something for the amusement of its population to take the place of the 'movies.' I suggest the establishment of municipal theaters, subsidized by the towns and smaller cities, to which traveling companies playing the better class of plays may be induced to come on a guarantee. Of course an admission fee should be charged and the theaters should be kept in good condition regarding cleanliness in front and back stage. The expense would not be great, and most excellent companies could go on tour for the express purpose of playing the guaranteed or municipal circuit." Mr. Faversham's idea is receiving the enthusiastic support of a number of university professors and educators.

Cheer Up!

These are dark days for the world. The shadow of the war is heavier than ever on all hearts, whatever their sympathies. There is little exultation now even in victories, for we know at what a price of blood and pain every victory is won. But there are many things besides war in the world. Except for our active imaginations, most of us would feel like running on pretty much as usual. There is the same sunshine, the same life-giving air, the same autumn colors in the woods, the same joy in bountiful harvests. There is the same quiet satis- ...

Mentor

Nov. 29, 1915

Last week we had a flurry of snow which soon melted away, and the rest of the time was so pleasant that people met each other on the street, and smilingly said "Guess we are having Indian Summer all fast enough—wish it 'ud last six months, don't you?" and sometimes the answer would be "Now THIS is something like Florida!" and always—the people wanted it to last. However, here it is, snowing great guns this morning, after blowing great guns all night, and very few are seen on the streets, even ...

Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Lowe start tomorrow (Tuesday) for their winter quarters in Eustis, and the rest of our people, namely Mr. and Mrs. C. J. CHAPTER LXIV.

Sachin and Michael.

The two great exponents of disembodied hands still faced one another in a conflict as yet undecided. Which were deeper in duplicity it had been difficult to say, but as to which was passed in sedulous assurance no doubts could be entertained. Sachin, with his long energetic, already was taking further steps to enforce his own will and that of his mysterious upon the weaker mind which purported to pay him a Greek-Price.

It was as Sachin had prophesied—Michael was ready to do anything any proposed which might conduce in his words to the distinction of his own great place. He secreted readily enough to the proposal of the Oriental author to transform the arrida Kitty into a Greek slave, and was quite with a wave to and fro of his hand place. Sensibly enough also he admitted into his own household the sculpture of the horror of his hereditary enemy.

Unknown, indeed, indeed Sachin was, and yet not much more than throughout the Greenwich palace, with whom interior he already was more or less familiar. It was his plan in case of any challenge to refer to the equal and who was the boss.

He paid special attention to the Greek-Slave, and was at pains to particularly instruct the Greek-Slave, whose attitude left much to desire, that, minutely, pathetic like a beaten and difficult half he went over the ground. The Greek-Slave was to be seen from which side to hide him in the quary.

He would did not attend his artists, though these he protected every in their portrait of the palace where on ye-ability to and her troops had been, and, in fact, the Greek-Slave was to have moved to from the cabin month (he was willing to despair and he but had invented a method of imitation of getting up the wood, when he not a selection of the wood and proved difficult to handle to his accustomed tools.

"Well, Sachin, gave three" (that stand Cole quote) as he saw Sachin arrange from one of the lower charge here.

"A friend!" retained Sachin promptly, in ready humour.

"Friends! Friend, and (fro the one) Sachin?" came the proof command.

"The courtesyship!" said Sachin. "Ah, well, my friend, now that I think it, I have not had it given to me. Thus my ayes replied, I will be a friend of Sachin—a friend of the three—a friend of the two—a friend of the person. I was quite in the operations of this system of defiance to ayes—it was something new to me.

"Well, I am very well," retained the author, "but expectations of that sort are scarcely good enough."

"Take me then, be the king him self," said Sachin.

"Why should I?" retained the other. "But business is it you come to know? Business is business, I suppose. There are double, three, and three have each things as ayes."

"Ayes!" retained Sachin, retained the "I, aye—is that what you mean, before Sachin? retained ayes to the three—I, aye—I, aye—I, aye

FORD TALKS ABOUT PEACE PILGRIMAGE

'When I Return to America I May Be a Great Deal Wiser.'

HOPE FOR A CONFERENCE OF NEUTRALS

Mr. Ford Says He Has Ample Assurance the Belligerent Nations Are Willing to Stop the Terrible Slaughter Going On.

New York City.—"When I return to America I may be a great deal wiser." It was a very weary Henry Ford who made this statement Thursday night. The Detroit pacifist was lying on his spine in a chair.

In front of the motor car manufacturer were massed a score of reporters. They were hurling questions with the rapidity of shots from machine guns. What do you expect to accomplish? How will you get the kaiser, the czar, the president of France, the kings of England and Belgium and the sultan of Turkey together? What is to become of Belgium and Serbia? What is gained if the belligerents do stop in the same place they started?

Seeks to Bring About Conference.

Mr. Ford's statement says in part: "It is the intent of this peace mission to bring about a conference of neutral nations for continual mediation among the belligerent nations. We have ample assurance that the belligerent nations are willing to stop the terrible slaughter of Europe's manhood. We have further evidence in hand that the belligerent governments would not be opposed to a conference of neutral nations.

"If for no other reason, we feel this peace mission is entitled to the respect and support of the world, because it is the only serious organized attempt now being made to end the international carnage which now depopulates Europe. Any attempt to end this slaughter that promises the slightest chance of success is worth an effort.

"We expect to stop first in Christiania, Norway, and then to proceed to Stockholm, Sweden, Copenhagen, Denmark, ...

The main offensive is being concentrated on the Valandovo sector, where the Bulgarians are operating with large forces. Two German divisions have arrived at Strumitza and are co-operating with their Balkan allies.

Information reaching Rotterdam from Berlin indicates that it is the German plan to throw the full strength of their Balkan forces against the British and French in an effort to drive them out of Serbia.

It comes on the eve of the assembling of congress and Mr. Bryan expresses the hope that the national legislature will at once assure the president of its support in any efforts he may make towards peace.

FOR GREATER REGULAR ARMY

Citizen Soldiery Part of His Plan—Problem of Commercial Mobilization Stated—Disloyalty Among Certain Elements in Our National Life Serious Menace to Peace.

Washington, Dec. 7.—President Wilson today delivered the following message to congress:

Gentlemen of the Congress: Since I last had the privilege of addressing you on the state of the Union the war of nations on the other side of the sea, which had then only begun to disclose its portentous proportions, has extended its threatening and sinister scope until it has swept within its flame some portion of every quarter of the globe, not excepting our own hemisphere, has altered the whole face of international affairs, and now presents a prospect of reorganization and reconstruction such as statesmen and peoples have never been called upon to attempt before.

We have stood apart, studiously neutral. It was our manifest duty to do so. Not only did we have no part or interest in the policies which seem to have brought the conflict on; it was necessary, if a universal catastrophe ...

... tage because of the economic readjustments which the world must inevitably witness within the next generation, when peace shall have at last resumed its healthful tasks. In the performance of these tasks I believe the Americas to be destined to play their parts together. I am interested to fix your attention on this prospect now because unless you take it within your view and permit the full significance of it to command your thought I cannot find the right light in which to set forth the particular matter that lies at the very front of my whole thought as I address you today. I mean national defense.

No one who really comprehends the spirit of the great people for whom we are appointed to speak can fail to perceive that their passion is for peace, their genius best displayed in the practice of the arts of peace. Great democracies are not belligerent. They do not seek or desire war. Their thought is of individual liberty and of the free labor that supports life and the uncensored thought that quickens it. Conquest and dominion are not in our reckoning, or agreeable to our principles. But just because we demand unmolested development and the undisturbed government of our own lives upon our own principles of right and liberty, we resent, from whatever quarter it may come, the aggression we ourselves will not practice. We insist upon security in prosecuting our self-chosen lines of national development. We do more than that. We demand it also for others.

Question of Preparedness

Out of such thoughts grow all our policies. We regard war merely as a means of asserting the rights of a people against aggression. And we are as fiercely jealous of coercive or dictatorial power within our own nation as of aggression from without. We will not maintain a standing army except for uses which are as necessary ...

STRIKING POINTS IN PRESIDENT WILSON'S MESSAGE

The department of war contemplates an increase of the standing force of the regular army from its present strength of 5,023 officers and 102,985 enlisted men to 7,136 officers and 134,707 enlisted men, and supplementing the army by a force of 400,000 disciplined citizens.

It will be to the advantage of the country for the congress to adopt a comprehensive plan for putting the navy upon a final footing of strength and efficiency.

The gravest threats against our national peace and safety have been uttered within our own borders.

It is necessary for many weighty reasons of national efficiency and development that we should have a great merchant marine.

It seems to me a clear dictate of prudent statesmanship and frank finance that in what we are now to undertake we should pay as we go. We should be following an almost universal example of modern government if we were to draw the greater part or even the whole of the revenues we need from the income taxes.

We have been put to the test in the case of Mexico and we have stood the test. Whether we have benefited Mexico by the course we have pursued remains to be seen. Our concern for the independence and prosperity of the states of Central and South America is not altered.

which plans long matured shall be carried out, but it does make definite and explicit a program which has heretofore been only implicit, held in the minds of the two committees on naval affairs and disclosed in the debates of the two houses but nowhere formulated or formally adopted. It ... to the advantage of the country for the congress to adopt a comprehensive plan for putting the navy upon a final footing of strength and efficiency and to press that plan to com...

... of other nations in rivalry of their own trade, and are without means to extend our commerce even where the doors are wide open and our goods desired. Such a situation is not to be endured. It is of capital importance not only that the United States should be its own carrier on the seas ... which only an adequate merchant marine would give it, but also that the American hemisphere as a whole should enjoy a like independence and self-sufficiency, if it is not to be drawn ...

... be for the fiscal year 1917, $93,800,000. Those figures, taken with the figures for the present fiscal year which I have already given, disclose our financial problem for the year 1917. Assuming that the taxes imposed by the emergency revenue act and the present duty on sugar are to be discontinued, and that the balance at the close of the present fiscal year will be only $20,644,605.78, that the disbursements for the Panama canal will again be about twenty-five millions, and that the additional expenditures for the army and navy are authorized by the congress, the deficit in the general fund of the treasury on the thirtieth of June 1917, will be nearly two hundred and thirty-five millions. To this sum at least fifty millions should be added to represent a safe working balance for the treasury, and twelve millions to include the usual deficiency estimates in 1917, and these additions would make a total deficit of some two hundred and ninety-seven millions. If the present taxes should be continued throughout this year and the next, however, there would be a balance in the treasury of some seventy-six and a half millions at the end of the present fiscal year, and a deficit at the end of the next year of only some fifty millions, or, reckoning in sixty-two millions for deficiency appropriations and a safe treasury balance at the end of the year, ... one hundred and twelve millions. The obvious moral of the figures is that it is a plain counsel of prudence to continue all of the present taxes or their equivalents, and confine ourselves to ...

... anything like this before. It never dreamed it possible that men sworn into its own citizenship, men drawn out of great free stocks such as supplied some of the best and strongest elements of that little, but how heroic, nation that in a high day of old staked its very life to free itself from every entanglement that had darkened the fortunes of the older nations and set up a new standard here—that men of such origins and such free choices of allegiance would ever turn in malign reaction against the government and people who had welcomed and nurtured them and seek to make this proud country once more a hotbed of European passion. A little while ago such a thing would have seemed incredible. Because it was incredible we made no preparation for it. We would have been almost ashamed to prepare for it, as if we were suspicious of ourselves, our own comrades and neighbors! But the ugly and incredible thing has actually come about and we are without adequate federal laws to deal with it. I urge you to enact such laws at the earliest possible moment and feel that in doing so I am urging you to do nothing less than save the honor and self-respect of the nation. Such creatures of passion, disloyalty, and anarchy must be crushed out. They are not many, but they are infinitely malignant, and the hand of our power should close over them at once. They have formed plots to destroy property, they have entered into conspiracies against the neutrality of the government, they have sought to pry into ...

NEED FOR CAUTION

Secretary Redfield's Warning Is Well Timed.

Country's Present Enormous Trade Balance Must Not Be Allowed to Turn the Heads of American Business Men.

Secretary of Commerce Redfield uttered a timely warning in his New York speech when he said, referring to the $1,500,000,000 trade balance in our favor: "There is danger that the sudden turning of the scales in our direction and the apparent access of wealth and profit arising from it may turn the heads of some of us. The day is certain to come when by the normal economic processes the losses of this great war shall be distributed, and in one or another way we shall have to bear a part of them." A stupendous amount of the world's wealth has been destroyed in the war as completely as though by a great conflagration. Eventually the people of this country will have to bear their share of the burden of repairing the damage and replacing what has been destroyed. A huge trade balance now is no excuse for recklessness and extravagance; the wiser course would be to prepare to meet the lean times that are surely coming.

PATRIOTS

(By Robert M. La Follette)

If a man dares to intimate that he is unwilling to swallow the whole program for preparedness—a big army, a big navy, big contracts for munitions of war—that man is a fool or a coward or a traitor.

Who are the real patriots of the country?

They are the glorious group of multi-millionaires, who are making such enormous profits out of the European war, as were never before realized in the same brief period since time began.

They are the Morgans, the Rockefellers, the Schwabs, the Garys, the DuPonts, and their prototypes, who are back of the thirty-eight corporations most benefited by war orders, ...

THE BROKEN COIN

A Story of Mystery and Adventure

By EMERSON HOUGH

From the Scenario by GRACE CUNARD

COPYRIGHT, 1921, BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

Directed from the Motion Picture Drama of the Same Name. Produced by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

SYNOPSIS.

Kitty Grey, a young American woman, finds in a quiet alley half of a broken coin, the other half being in the possession of Count Sachin, who is being pursued by agents of his managing editor, to go to his aid. Kitty is followed by Count Frederick, who is in the employ of Count Sachin's enemies, and, as a result of a fight between the men, the other half of the broken coin falls into Frederick's possession.

NINETEENTH INSTALLMENT

CHAPTER LXVIII.

Count Sachin's Secret.

"Your money back! I can now secure you of our success!"

Count Sachin of Cordoroy, again in exile, had at last secured full publicity for his case. The truth of his wrongs had come more with his secrecy to the great hall of the palace of Cordoroy, whither he had hastened at once on his return from the river capital.

"Why, Sachin? demanded Carole Lombard, who was inclined to believe our success sooner than it has been any time these months past?"

"Your capital was proof, Lois!"

Sachin held out to his hard the two halves, or what seemed to be the two halves, of the broken coin of Cordoroy. "Your money enabled me to go back to the trail here and find a little further!"

"Yes your money, if memory only be our ever-very faithful servant, may I say it?—is that the thing that gives us success, Sachin!"

"This is a necessary detail, said Carole, with a cold grin. I have had long enough on mere and hot and empty—we! I would dig for hands to actual relation of gold coins—we would not, Sachin, be so long waiting, and not this time! Some which, Sachin, I know, I know, you are the remnant of some old Cordoroy Secret! Secrets, Sachin—is real money, is real power, is power—that! secrets show can mere my thing to you or me!

"Secrets, Lois, are the real coin, Sachin, with an allotment of his conference. "I take my chance I make my life on the hazard of full success! If I had not the same treasure as Grantcoffee, then hang my head so our walls as a beaten hound! Secrets!

"Yes, then," said the king coldly; "they have been my way which they gates before—do so again. Back! Hungry—and not a cell of the torture chamber, perhaps, the only secret—I remember! Secrets! Secrets! Secrets! the vaults—but yesterday where! Secrets! Secrets!

"Secrets, Lois, are the real coin, Sachin, with an allotment of his conference. "I take my chance I make my life on the hazard of full success! If I had not the same treasure as Grantcoffee, then hang my head so our walls as a beaten hound! Secrets!

"Yes, then," said the king coldly; "they have been my way which they gates before—do so again. Back! Hungry—and not a cell of the torture chamber, perhaps, the only secret—I remember! Secrets! Secrets! Secrets! the vaults—but yesterday where! Secrets!

Always the Sachin cautious mind carried him into the depths and dim recesses of his mind.

"It must be somewhere before and beyond the gates, where they blended from the gates, where they blended from drawing all our images, recited Sachin. "I know them perfectly as I do my own hands—or perhaps, Lois, I know them better than I do my own hands! Yours are as my own gifts of which we have had the key. Here is the key! Yours are as my own gifts deep in actual science! Lois! Lois!

"I'm still do nothing of the kind, Sachin," said his monarch. "You were the best cash for your money!"

Sachin flushed red, but turned, as he had been a master of diplomacy, who parried insult.

"Yes, your majesty," said he, "I spoke but in metaphor. You are right in any such endeavor as this is, perhaps, of secrets. But, sir, of the right and the rights of the secrets—I know, I know! Secrets, no such secrets as this is the secret of all others. But yet enough shall be our course to our subject, since I have found the actual binding place.

"Agreed," said the monarch, "and I know you are the man to do it! Let us have the secret of his coat instead of his coat tail!

And Sachin hastened to that end he has. He swiftly cut curved into torrent the devious way that by his secret knowledge he knew would be opened at the touch of the sphere at the proper time. He acquainted with his coin and his ready cleverness of all hesitance to the king himself gained his secret more than ever.

Hushed, the vaults, still dwelt in the shadows, gloomy, cold, dark, and dreary, yet, as Sachin had shown him, the cellars were for the great treasure, of which we make peer the treasure in the capital's fairest, his

OPTOMETRIST L. T. PECK JEWELER

ONE COLD winter night the snow was gently falling on the pine trees of the forest. These tall, stately trees stood very straight and still on this cold night [illegible] by the tallest and the oldest of them said:

"How happy I shall be when at last I am strong enough and tall enough to be cut down by the wood cutters. I hope when they do cut me down that I may be good enough that they will want me for some great ship and then I shall have a chance to sail the seas."

"What do you know about ships and the seas?" asked a little pine tree who stood at the foot of the tall one.

The stately tree bent his branches a very little and looked down at the small tree at his feet.

"I have heard many stories of the seas and the ships that sail on them for the birds sit in my branches and sing to me all the time of the beauties and wonders of the world. Then too the starbeams who are much older than the birds have some truly wonderful tales to tell of things that they have seen in their trips around the world. There is the Starbeam of the Brightest Star, just peeping over the hilltop. He can tell some truly wonderful tales."

The little pine tree trembled for very joy. This was his first winter in the forest and these things were all new to him just as was the snow that was covering his roots and making them all warm with its white blanket.

"Won't you please ask the Starbeam to tell us a story?" asked the little pine.

"Let us ask him to tell us again the Christmas story," said another of the older pines, "the one he told us last year."

So, when the Starbeam came over and rested gently on the tallest pine, he asked it to tell again the Story of the First Christmas.

"I love to tell this story best of all stories that I know," said the little Starbeam.

"Once upon a time a long time ago, long before [illegible] oldest pine trees here began to [illegible] a beautiful woman named Mary and her husband, Joseph, went on a journey to a little city called Bethlehem. All the people in that country went to this same city to pay their taxes and when Mary and Joseph got [illegible] found so many people, that there was no room left for them at the inn. The only place where they could find shelter was in a stable and here they went. That night a little babe was born and its mother Mary laid him in a manger on some nice clean straw.

"Away off in the East the Brightest Star appeared. He had never been seen before and some wise men who knew that this was the time for the babe to be born, saw the Brightest Star as they started out to find the babe. All their long journey the Brightest Star kept just in front of them to show them the way to go, and when they rested at night, the Brightest Star would rest too and wait for them. At last they reached the city of Bethlehem, and found the little babe in the manger with his mother by his side.

"These wise men had brought some very costly gifts to this babe, and it is the birthday of this babe that is celebrated every Christmas, and it is in his memory that gifts are given to the poor.

"That is all of the story, and it is time for me to be going," and the Starbeam went gayly on dancing over the tops of the trees.

The Russian St. Nicholas

In [illegible] the children put their shoes filled with hay outside the door for the horses of St. Nicholas; and it is believed in most sections that St. Nicholas comes first on a preparatory visit ten days before Christmas to learn which children have been good. He leaves nuts and candy in the shoes of those who have been good but nothing for those who have been bad, who thus know that they must repent no presents on the real Christmas day.

The Bran Pie.

This is an English custom. The gifts are hidden in a large pan of bran. A string is tied to each package, and on the end of the string is the name of the one for whom the package is intended. When all have their strings they all pull. Then comes the fun of getting the bran off and opening the packages.

Christmas

[illegible]

We do not hesitate then to send out our Christmas greeting. The things that are seen are temporal. It is in the realm of the unseen that we must seek just now that which abides in the Christmas message and which no might of war, save for a time, can dim with its primeval darkness. Perhaps only such a horror as this could forever sicken the world of war.

If we dare not wish our readers a Merry Christmas, we do wish them all the gladness homes and hearts may know when faith and hope and love still live. To all little children who look forward to the day with joy we send our wish for a very "Merry Christmas." Notwithstanding the pain and loss the year has brought, we shall find the Christmas joy just in proportion as we strive to kindle it in other hearts. Never was need greater since time began that each of us live out toward all men everywhere the spirit of the imperishable song, "Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward men."

War is Destruction

(Richard Cobden)

"In the close council of every king, or president, or prince, should be a man of affairs, whose life is devoted to commerce and labor, and the needs and requirements of peace. His work is of far greater moment than that of men of war. Battleships ever form a suggestion for their use, and as long as we have armies, men will kill, fight and destroy. Soldiers who do not want to fight are not of this earth. Prepare for war, and war will come. When government gives to the arts of peace the same thought and attention that it gives to the arts of war, we will have peace on earth and good will among men. But so long as the soldier takes precedence of the business man in the political course of the world, famine, death, disease, and want will crouch at our doors. Commerce is production—war is destruction. The laws of production and distribution must and will be made a science; and then and not until then will happiness come to mankind and this earth serve as a pattern for the paradise of another life, instead of being a pandemonium."

HUMBLE PETITIONERS

Ask for a Small Portion of Painesville Township Tax Money For Improved Roads

For the first time in the history of improved roads in Lake county, a Painesville delegation visited the Court House Monday and asked—yes, actually asked—to have one mile of road improved.

Other roads have been improved of course, but the plan of improving them originated at the court house and not with the township trustees or residents of Painesville township. Had it been left to Painesville people to take the initiative it is very doubtful if the brick road west of town would have been built or the work of paving to Fairport and to the east even contemplated.

The Painesville delegation asked for a road south from the city limits, to connect with the rebuilt Leroy road.

The road would be practically one mile in length and the estimated cost around $18,000.

The city council is to take action at its next meeting on extending the present pavement on State street from the Nickel Plate tracks to the corporation line. In the meantime the commissioners will try and arrange some way in which they can raise the "price" without interfering too much with road improvements already planned.

NEW PAVEMENT

Resolution Passed to Connect with Madison Perry Concrete Road

Another move towards completing paving work in Painesville township was made Monday when the county commissioners filed a resolution to construct a sixteen foot concrete pavement to connect with the road which had been completed to the west line of Perry township.

Starting where the Perry road ends the new pavement will run west along Madison Avenue, down cemetery hill and will connect with the present brick pavement on East Main street hill.

Under the new law it is possible for the commissioners to assist in building an improved road inside of the city limits when the proposed improvement is a part of the inter-county highway system.

NEW COUNTY BOARD

Will Hear Complaints and Equalize Tax Values in Real Estate. New Law Makes this Provision

Under the provision of the new tax law a Board of Revision has been appointed by the committee for this county. The board will be composed of George Murray of Painesville, Thos Northcutt of Mentor and C. A. Phelps of Madison.

The board will meet in June and August to hear complaints, equalize values and attend to other business of a like nature.

Messrs. Murray and Phelps have had considerable experience in tax matters in the county and Mr. Northcutt is known as a man of good judgment and the board as appointed should be able to arrive at the true tax value of Lake county real estate.

LAKE COUNTY ATLAS

Maps, identical With Those in the $25 Edition Offered to Buyers at 12 1-2c each

Talk about your book agents and clever lightning rod salemen and promoters of get-rich-quick industries.

There is a concern working the residents of Lake county that has distanced the best of them, and it is no idle boast of the agents of this concern that they will walk, or rather ride out of the county, with from $10,000 to $15,000 of good old Lake county dollars in their pockets.

So clever are the salesmen and so gracious and winning in manner, that at the very beginning of their campaign in this county they insinuated themselves into the good fellowship of some of our county officials, and for the past several months have been treated most royally.

They were provided with testimonials and certificates of good standing, so necessary to a book agent; they were given free access to the county tax maps, for which the taxpayers have expended thousands of dollars; a special room, free of rental was furnished in the court house, and later the board of county commissioners was induced to contract and subscribe for several sets of the books promised to be issued by the company.

After a careful installation of the business at the court house the agents started out with an elaborate advertising campaign much of which was obtained by the promise to pay in their own product, and this was followed by a house to house canvass of the county and the real battle for subscriptions was on.

The article offered for sale was a county atlas, and to get subscribers at $25 per, all the tact, ingenuity and persuasiveness of the trained book agent was called into play.

The imagination of the farmer was inflamed and aroused until he could actually see in this atlas, bound de luxe and lithographed in beautiful colors, a picture of his farm, the buildings in multi-colors, and the broad fields dotted with fat cattle and swine, and his own name engraved in gold announcing to the world that he was the owner in fee simple of all the land described within the boundaries on the map. Even another name could be added for a small extra charge and instead of a ten acre farm it would hereafter be known to the world as Broad Acres or Lilly Dale or Maple Grove—the agent had a good list of catchy names to select from. Well, to clinch the bargain, the testimonials from the court house the hint at an "official" map, and the farmer was tied up with a signed agreement to pay $25 on delivery of the book.

The lawyer and professional man was also visited and all were convinced that the County Atlas was to be a work of art, that a great misfortune would befall if the lawyers didn't subscribe and also pay for a little autobiography for which space was to be provided in the atlas.

The merchant also succumbed to the wiles, and seductive talk of the agent. He must know where to locate the farms of his patrons and he needed a county atlas in his business. Besides all this, some civic spirit was required on his part to support an undertaking of this kind, which opportunity presented itself only once in a life time. And he, too, subscribed his name to a note for $25 together with a promise to take a liberal advertisement in a portion of the book specially reserved for the business men of the county.

After the farmer, the lawyer and the merchant to the number of seven hundred had subscribed their names and agreed to pay in a sum total of about $12,000, the agent had to employ some of his idle time in awaiting the arrival of the books, so he made a canvass of bookstores and advertising agents and offered to make a sale at reduced prices of all the beautiful and exquisite lithographed maps, and the price for these maps, said to be identical with those in the county atlas, was to be 12½ cents each. Think of it, a county map for 12½ cents, a map of Madison township, of Mentor or Perry townships, identical with those sold in the atlas at $25 per copy, lithographed in all the colors of the rainbow, showing the names of all the owners of the earth in Lake county, tinned at the top and tinned at the bottom, ready to hang in the parlor or art gallery for 12½c each.

One of the local dealers in maps and to whom the proposition was made, was astonished to learn that he could buy for a small investment what others had so dearly paid for, and concluded to investigate.

The first thing he discovered was that the Century Map Company, of Philadelphia, Pa., the concern which claimed a business standing of forty years, had no place in the directory of good business concerns, and that no financial rating was given to it in Dun & Bradstreets, nor in the financial directory of publishing houses of Philadelphia. The second thing discovered was that instead of lithographed maps from stones used by map makers, the maps really put out by this concern were cheap zinc etchings printed in two colors on an ordinary letter press such as are used in the printing offices in Lake county. The third result of the investigation was that the information printed on the maps was secured from the county tax maps, which are not kept up to date, and would necessarily contain many inaccuracies, if used several months afterward.

The information secured by the local dealer is at the disposal of those who so liberally subscribed to the County Atlas publication, and if the book, when it arrives, is as represented to you, take it and pay the price.

Mrs. Sarah Harman of South St. Clair street passed away at the hospital Friday evening, after an illness of several weeks duration. Mrs. Harman was in her eightieth year and is survived by one son, Frank Harman. Her husband, William Harman, died [illegible] years ago.

Miss Mary E. Mathews who has been enjoying a 9,000 mile trip around the "edge" of the United States with Mr. and Mrs. Dean C. Mathews and Mrs. M. D. Buchan of Cleveland, has returned to her home here. The party spent some little time at the San Diego and San Francisco expositions.

CRIBBAGE PLAYERS

Of Painesville and Vicinity Perfect Club Organization

A score or more of local cribbage players met Tuesday evening at the fire engine house, and organized into a club, to be known as the "Painesville Cribbage Club."

It is stated that there are a number of fine cribbage players in this vicinity, and all who attended the meeting last evening were enthusiastic over the formation of a club to promote this interesting game.

Cribbage is very intricate and ranks next to chess in its problems and combinations. For this reason cribbage is not learned in a day, and once you acquire a knowledge of it, you'll always want to play. The real cribbage player scorns seven-up, pedro, poker and kindred card games as child's pastime.

The officers selected to conduct the club are: President, W. M. Baker; secretary, Elmer A. Murphy; treasurer, C. J. Hopkins.

Regular meetings will be held Tuesday evening of each week, at 7:30 central time. The hall over the engine house which has been secured, will be open each day and evening to all who desire to play.

After the club had organized, several tables were occupied with players Tuesday evening.

A nominal fee for membership is solicited to all cribbage players in this locality.

Word has been received here from Congressman Emerson, that he has introduced a bill providing for a $200,000 federal building for Painesville.

Of this number 170 are new houses and the balance places where two families live instead of one as formerly. Using the usual multiple for increase in population Painesville may boast of 940 more people than two years ago. At that time the population of the city was estimated at 7,000 so that with the beginning of 1916 Painesville may be able to boast of 8,000 people without stretching the truth to any great extent.

TRIMMING THE TREE

WHAT CHRISTMAS MEANS

Some Facts Concerning the Observance of this Special Holiday.

By REV. H. J. GALLENA, Pastor of St. Mary's Church

Much has been written in song and story concerning the festal day known as Christmas. It is the universal feast of children in all countries where Christianity has obtained a certain sway. It is a day that is looked upon as a special holiday by the thousands who toil and labor.

To the one believing that the Child born on December 25th, was the long expected Savior of the world, the God made man, Christmas is a beautiful feast of joy and gladness. For him it commemorates the birth of the One whose memory is the most sacred in human annals, whose becoming a servant, made possible the Redemption of man. Even to the unbeliever, Christmas has a charm. One peculiarity of Christmas-tide is, that its spirit is catching. It is a time of mutual extension of courtesies, display of generosity, brotherly love, and of good feeling to all men. It is strange how Christmas breathes its spirit over the multitudes, whether believing or unbelieving, but the fact is, that it does.

Between these two classes of the believers and the unbelievers, there is another class of mortals who, less rigid in their belief that the Christ is the God-man, nevertheless do not incline entirely to the side that Christmas merely marks a holiday season, or that it is merely a time of good feeling. They rather hold a middle course. For them the Christ, while not God, is nevertheless a great teacher. They recognize in Him the founder of true civilization, the greatest exponent of morality, the author of true virtue, and behold in Him the greatest example of holiness of life and of steadfastness of character that can be imagined.

Hence for every one of every opinion, Christmas is a feast day. For the dogmatic man of faith, it is a day of unalloyed joy and glorification. For the undogmatic man of some faith, it is a day of admiration. For the most unbelieving it is a day of kindliness towards all, and of enmity towards none.

While the feast of Christmas is now universally kept, it is strange that the word "Christmas" is not found till the 11th century. Its derivation is from old English—Christes—Christ and masse—mass. It might be explained here that the mass is a rite of the Roman Church. Hence the meaning of the word is the Mass of Christ. Just why the name of the Mass should have been transferred to the day is not known, but it is more than likely that this is principally due to the fact that the custom of priests' celebrating three masses on December 25th, was at that time becoming universal in Christian countries.

It should be borne in mind that in the early ages, the first and second centuries, the feast of Christmas was not universally observed. This was partly due to the persecutions, which prevented the thorough organization of the Church, particularly in regard to sacred liturgy. However, in the VII, VIII and IXth centuries in the Western part of Europe, especially at Rome, Christmas began to be celebrated with pomp and solemnity. Due to the example of the Popes, who were then the dictators of Christendom, the custom rapidly spread, and with it many of the customs that had been handed down from Roman pagan days, and which had become part of the Roman Christian celebration. Some of these customs still remain, for example, the giving of presents, the Yule-log, and the placing of candles in windows. This last custom has attached to it a symbol. The Christmas candle represents Christ, who is the light of the world. Finally in the XIth century the celebration of Christmas with pomp and solemnity became universal. It is in this century that we first find the word Christmas. As the celebration of three masses, a privilege granted all priests on Christmas day, was the principal act of the mediaeval festivity, it was almost natural for our Anglo-Saxon forefathers to name the day from its chief event; hence the name Christmas, or Mass of Christ.

Finally a word might be said of the correctness of our date of the birth of Christ. Was He born on December 25th? No man can prove He was, and no man can prove He was not. However this much disputed question had better be left to the far corners of the halls of knowledge, where quibblers and speculators amuse themselves over what is of little import. With all thinking people Christmas is not the celebration of a day, but of an event. As such it could be celebrated with just as much appropriateness in June as in December. However, following the good sense of our ancestors, the constant traditions of the centuries, the already hallowed significance given the day itself, it is more than probable that we will not live to see a change of date, but will continue to celebrate it in the good old-fashioned way on December the 25th.

Long may it be a day to bring joy to the hearts of all men, a day to remind us that we are not to live and gladden ourselves alone, but to live and serve others as well, God and our fellow-man.

Bank is Sliding

During the past few years the bank along Madison avenue in front of the Manchester property and vicinity has been wearing away with alarming rapidity and the time is not far distant when something will have to be done or the road will take a slide towards the flats.

The work will probably consume a large amount of money and various plans are being worked out that will prove practical and that will require the smallest possible amount of cash.

One plan is to build a concrete retaining wall at this point while another is to change the course of the river at the Nickel Plate railway bridge, running the water directly to the flats just below the city.

His work is of far greater moment than that of men of war. Battleships ever form a suggestion for their use, and as long as we have armies, men will kill, fight and destroy. Soldiers who do not want to fight are not of this earth. Prepare for war, and war will come. When government gives to the arts of peace the same thought and attention that it gives to the arts of war, we will have peace on earth and good will among men. But so long as the soldier takes precedence of the business man in the political course of the world, famine, death, disease, and want will crouch at our doors. Commerce is production—war is destruction. The laws of production and distribution must and will be made a science; and then and not until then will happiness come to mankind and this earth serve as a pattern for the paradise of another life, instead of being a pandemonium."

LAKE COUNTY ATLAS

Maps, identical With Those in the $25 Edition Offered to Buyers at 12 1-2c each

Talk about your book agents and clever lightning rod salesmen and promoters of get-rich-quick industries. tries.

There is a concern working the residents of Lake county that has distanced the best of them, and it is no idle boast of the agents of this concern that they will walk, or rather ride out of the county, with from $10,000 to $15,000 of good old Lake county dollars in their pockets.

So clever are the salesmen and so gracious and winning in manner, that at the very beginning of their campaign in this county they insinuated themselves into the good fellowship of some of our county officials, and for the past several months have been treated most royally.

They were provided with testimonials and certificates of good standing, so necessary to a book agent; they were given free access to the county tax maps, for which the taxpayers have expended thousands of dollars; a special room, free of rental was furnished in the court house, and later the board of county commissioners was induced to contract and subscribe for several sets of the books promised to be issued by the company.

After a careful installation of the business at the court house the agents started out with an elaborate advertising campaign much of which was obtained by the promise to pay in their own product, and this was followed by a house to house canvass of the county and the real battle for subscriptions was on.

The article offered for sale was a county atlas, and to get subscribers at $25 per, all the tact, ingenuity and persuasiveness of the trained book agent was called into play.

The imagination of the farmer was inflamed and aroused until he could actually see in this atlas, bound de luxe and lithographed in beautiful colors, a picture of his farm, the buildings in multi-colors, and the broad fields dotted with fat cattle and swine, and his own name engraved in gold announcing to the world that he was the owner in fee simple of all the land described within the boundaries on the map. Even another name could be added for a small extra charge and instead of a ten acre farm it would hereafter be known to the world as Broad Acres or Lilly Dale or Maple Grove—the agent had a good list of catchy names to select from. Well, to clinch the bargain, the testimonials from the court house the hint at an "official" map, and the farmer was tied up with a signed agreement to pay $25 on delivery of the book.

The lawyer and professional man was also visited and all were convinced that the County Atlas was to be a work of art, that a great misfortune would befall if the lawyers didn't subscribe and also pay for a little autobiography for which space was to be provided in the atlas.

The merchant also succumbed to the wiles, and seductive talk of the agent. He must know where to locate the farms of his patrons and he needed a county atlas in his business. Besides All this, some civic spirit was required on his part to support an undertaking of this kind, which opportunity presented itself only once in a life time. And he, too, subscribed his name to a note for $25 together with a promise to take a liberal advertisement in a portion of the book specially reserved for the business men of the county.

After the farmer, the lawyer and the merchant to the number of seven hundred had subscribed their names and agreed to pay in a sum total of about $12,000, the agent had to employ some of his idle time in awaiting the arrival of the books, so he made a canvass of bookstores and advertising agents and offered to make a sale at reduced prices of all the beautiful and exquisite lithographed maps, and the price for these maps, said to be identical with those in the county atlas, was to be 12½ cents each. Think of it, a county map for 12½ cents, a map of Madison township, of Mentor or Perry townships, identical with those sold in the atlas at $25 per copy, lithographed in all the colors of the rainbow, showing the names of all the owners of the earth in Lake county, tinned at the top and tinned at the bottom, ready to hang in the parlor or art gallery for 12½c each.

One of the local dealers in maps and to whom the proposition was made, was astonished to learn that he could buy for a small investment what others had so dearly paid for, and concluded to investigate.

The first thing he discovered was that the Century Map Company, of Philadelphia, Pa., the concern which claimed a business standing of forty years, had no place in the directory of good business concerns, and that no financial rating was given to it in Dun & Bradstreets, nor in the financial directory of publishing houses of Philadelphia. The second thing discovered was that instead of lithographed maps from stones used by map makers, the maps really put out by this concern were cheap zinc etchings printed in two colors on an ordinary letter press such as are used in the printing offices in Lake county. The third result of the investigation was that the information printed on the maps was secured from the county tax maps, which are not kept up to date, and would necessarily contain many inaccuracies, if used several months afterward.

The information secured by the local dealer is at the disposal of those who so liberally subscribed to the County Atlas publication, and if the book, when it arrives, is as represented to you, take it and pay the price.

Mrs. Sarah Harman of South St. Clair street passed away at the hospital, Friday evening, after an illness of several weeks' duration. Mrs. Harman was in her eightieth year and is survived by one son, Frank Harman. Her husband, William Harman, died about a year ago.

HUMBLE PETITIONERS

Ask for a Small Portion of Painesville Township Tax Money For Improved Roads

For the first time in the history of improved roads in Lake county, a Painesville delegation visited the Court House Monday and asked—yes, actually asked—to have one mile of road improved.

Other roads have been improved of course, but the plan of improving them originated at the court house and not with the township trustees or residents of Painesville township. Had it been left to Painesville people to take the initiative it is very doubtful if the brick road west of town would have been built or the work of paving to Fairport and to the east even contemplated.

The Painesville delegation asked for a road south from the city limits, to connect with the rebuilt Leroy road.

The road would be practically one mile in length and the estimated cost around $16,000.

The city council is to take action at its next meeting on extending the present pavement on State street from the Nickel Plate tracks to the corporation line. In the meantime the commissioners will try and arrange some way in which they can raise the "price" without interfering too much with road improvements already planned.

NEW PAVEMENT

Resolution Passed to Connect with Madison Perry Concrete Road

Another move towards completing paving work in Painesville township was made Monday when the county commissioners filed a resolution to construct a sixteen foot concrete pavement to connect with the road which had been completed to the west line of Perry township.

Starting where the Perry road ends the new pavement will run west along Madison Avenue, down cemetery hill and will connect with the present brick pavement on East Main street hill.

Under the new law it is possible for the commissioners to assist in building an improved road inside of the city limits when the proposed improvement is a part of the inter-county highway system.

NEW COUNTY BOARD

Will Hear Complaints and Equalize Tax Values in Real Estate. New Law Makes this Provision

Under the provision of the new tax law a Board of Revision has been appointed by the committee for this county. The board will be composed of George Murray of Painesville, Thos. Northcutt of Mentor and C. A. Phelps of Madison.

The board will meet in June and August to hear complaints, equalize values and attend to other business of a like nature.

Messrs. Murray and Phelps have had considerable experience in tax matters in the county and Mr. Northcutt is known as a man of good judgment and the board as appointed should be able to arrive at the true tax value of Lake county real estate.

CRIBBAGE PLAYERS

Of Painesville and Vicinity Perfect Club Organization

A score or more of local cribbage fire engine house, and organized into players met Tuesday evening at the a club, to be known as the "Painesville Cribbage Club."

It is stated that there are a number of fine cribbage players in this vicinity, and all who attended the meeting last evening were enthusiastic over the formation of a club to promote this interesting game.

Cribbage is very intricate and ranks next to chess in its problems and combinations. For this reason cribbage is not learned in a day, and once you acquire a knowledge of it, you'll always want to play. The real cribbage player scorns seven-up, pedro, poker and kindred card games as child's pastime.

The officers selected to conduct the club are: President, W. M. Baker; secretary, Elmer A. Murphy; treasurer, C. J. Hopkins.

Regular meetings will be held Tuesday evening of each week, at 7:30 central time. The hall over the engine house which has been secured, will be open each day and evening to all who desire to play.

After the club had organized, several tables were occupied with players Tuesday evening.

A nominal fee for membership is solicited to all cribbage players in this locality.

Word has been received here from Congressman Emerson, that he has introduced a bill providing for a $200,000 federal building for Painesville.

"Little Old Painesville" is moving right along. Estimates place her population at 8,000 as against 5,501 in 1910. Postmaster S. D. Carroll has just completed a count of new places where mail is delivered. In the last two years these places have increased rapidly and at present there are 188 new deliveries made. Of this number 170 are new houses and the balance places where two families live instead of one as formerly. Using the usual multiple for increase in population Painesville may boast of 940 more people than two years ago. At that time the population of the city was estimated at 7,000 so that with the beginning of 1916 Painesville may be able to boast of 8,000 people without stretching the truth to any great extent.

TRIMMING THE TREE

WHAT CHRISTMAS MEANS

Some Facts Concerning the Observance of this Special Holiday.

By REV. H. J. GALLENA, Pastor of St. Mary's Church

Much has been written in song and story concerning the festal day known as Christmas. It is the universal feast of children in all countries where Christianity has obtained a certain sway. It is a day that is looked upon as a special holiday by the thousands who toil and labor.

To the one believing that the Child born on December 25th, was the long expected Savior of the world, the God made man, Christmas is a beautiful feast of joy and gladness. For him it commemorates the birth of the One whose memory is the most sacred in human annals, whose becoming a servant, made possible the Redemption of man. Even to the unbeliever, Christmas has a charm. One peculiarity of Christmas-tide is, that its spirit is catching. It is a time of mutual extension of courtesies, display of generosity, brotherly love, and of good feeling to all men. It is strange how Christmas breathes its spirit over the multitudes, whether believing or unbelieving, but the fact is, that it does.

Between these two classes of the believers and the unbelievers, there is another class of mortals who, less rigid in their belief that the Christ is the God-man, nevertheless do not incline entirely to the side that Christmas merely marks a holiday season, or that it is merely a time of good feeling. They rather hold a middle course. For them the Christ, while not God, is nevertheless a great teacher. They recognize in Him the founder of true civilization, the greatest exponent of morality, the author of true virtue, and behold in Him the greatest example of holiness of life and of steadfastness of character that can be imagined.

Hence for every one of every opinion, Christmas is a feast day. For the dogmatic man of faith, it is a day of unalloyed joy and glorification. For the undogmatic man of some faith, it is a day of admiration. For the most unbelieving it is a day of kindliness towards all, and of enmity towards none.

While the feast of Christmas is now universally kept, it is strange that the word "Christmas" is not found till the 11th century. Its derivation is from old English—Christes—Christ and maesse—mass. It might be explained here that the mass is a rite of the Roman Church. Hence the meaning of the word is the Mass of Christ. Just why the name of the Mass should have been transferred to the day is not known, but it is more than likely that this is principally due to the fact that the custom of priests' celebrating three masses on December 25th, was at that time becoming universal in Christian countries.

It should be borne in mind that in the early ages, the first and second centuries, the feast of Christmas was not universally observed. This was partly due to the persecutions, which prevented the thorough organization of the Church, particularly in regard to sacred liturgy. However, in the VII, VIII and IXth centuries in the Western part of Europe, especially at Rome, Christmas began to be celebrated with pomp and solemnity. Due to the example of the Popes, who were then the dictators of Christendom, the custom rapidly spread, and with it many of the customs that had been handed down from Roman pagan days, and which had become part of the Roman Christian celebration. Some of these customs still remain, for example, the giving of presents, the Yule-log and the placing of candles in windows. This last custom has attached to it a symbol. The Christmas candle represents Christ, who is the light of the world. Finally in the XIth century the celebration of Christmas with pomp and solemnity became universal. It is in this century that we first find the word Christmas. As the celebration of three masses, a privilege granted all priests on Christmas day, was the principal act of the mediaeval festivity, it was almost natural for our Anglo-Saxon forefathers to name the day from its chief event; hence the name Christmas, or Mass of Christ.

Finally a word might be said of the correctness of our date of the birth of Christ. Was He born on December 25th? No man can prove He was, and no man can prove He was not. However this much disputed question had better be left to the far corners of the halls of knowledge, where quibblers and speculators amuse themselves over what is of little import. With all thinking people Christmas is not the celebration of a day, but of an event. As such it could be celebrated with just as much appropriateness in June as in December. However, following the good sense of our ancestors, the constant traditions of the centuries, the already hallowed significance given the day itself, it is more than probable that we will not live to see a change of date, but will continue to celebrate it in the good old-fashioned way on December the 25th.

Long may it be a day to bring joy to the hearts of all men, a day to remind us that we are not to live and gladden ourselves alone, but to live and serve others as well, God and our fellow-man.

Bank is Sliding

During the past few years the bank along Madison avenue in front of the Manchester property and vicinity has been wearing away with alarming rapidity and the time is not far distant when something will have to be done or the road will take a slide towards the flats.

The work will probably consume a large amount of money and various plans are being worked out that will prove practical and that will require the smallest possible amount of cash.

One plan is to build a concrete retaining wall at this point while another is to change the course of the river at the Nickel Plate railway bridge, running the water directly to the flats just below the city.

WHAT IS THEIR GAME?

"Do you see that big black bear? Are you not afraid he will bite your baby?" said the sneak thief to the mother at the circus as he deftly stole the woman's purse. The ruse was as old as the race. Children, when they wish to spring some primitive surprise upon you, point wildly to the sky and with shrill cries ask you to observe the "big white black bird." The slap stick artist on the stage gets his victim to look the other way while the swat is being administered. It's an old trick.

So experience should teach us to wonder just what is coming off when Wall Street, the Predatory Interests, the Malefactors of Great Wealth, the Gold Lace Heroes, the Washington Bureaucrats, the Reactionary Editors the Weasel politicians all join with a few really disinterested men who in their mistaken patriotism cherish a militaristic delusion and call for an army and navy policy that will "protect the workingman and his family."

"The Russian bear will get you." "The German eagle will tear you." "The British lion will devour you," cry the militarists. "Look to the sea! Look to the sea! There is the danger," they warn. And as the cry mounts those who stand and watch cannot but wonder what the game really is. From what home problem do the master militarists wish to distract attention?

Before the present war began Great Britain was facing a home rule problem. It was facing the Lloyd George program. The English masses were making themselves heard. The workmen were speaking with a louder voice each day. Plutocracy was on the run in Great Britain. Democracy was in the ascent. The English Junkers were uneasy and they had reason to be. It is not difficult to understand why they might have desired to shift the attention of the public. The Junker knows that if ten thousand men die of starvation in the slums of London within a single three months, the fact causes a flame of comment that circles the globe. But the Junker also knows that ten thousand men can disappear in the first step of a Dardanelles campaign and that the losses will simply make Englishmen cheer. Whatever they may have thought, the English Junkers now know that old problems have passed away. The English people are not today fighting to establish real democracy in the British Isles. Under the plea that German autocracy must be destroyed, the English are waging a war that delivers the nation once again into the hands of plutocracy to have and to hold for a century to come.

Before the present war began the German Junkers were hard pressed. The Socialistic forces were increasing. The Socialist leaders had become dominant political figures. The German Junkers may not have planned a war with the view of slaying Socialism in the German empire, but the fact remains that at present German Socialism is a corpse.

It would be easy to make the rounds of the nations. In each one of the countries now engaged in wholesale murder the ruling classes had a reason for desiring that the attention of the Great Public be diverted from home problems. And the war has done that very thing.

Is it possible that in their sub-conscious minds the Junkers of this country may instinctively be following the course of their blood brethren across the sea? Men do not always state their motives clearly even to themselves. Many a man considers himself patriotic who is merely ambitious. Greed always hates its own face and masquerades. Is the American Junker playing the game on the level? Is it possible that he has not realized if militarism will swamp any industrial reform that it meets, if militarism but once gets swinging? Would not the Junker in this country much prefer to center public opinion upon a Big Navy than upon the report of the committee that investigated industrial relations and conditions in this country? Would not the Junker much prefer increasing the tax burden to equalizing it? Is it not about time for the workers of this country to ask themselves in all seriousness just what it is that militarists desire to cloak beneath their mighty program? Wall Street has recently made millions. Where did those millions come from? The railroads desire to capitalize recent prosperity. The great industrial captains are anxious to keep the public from realizing that the present industrial orgy must inevitably be followed by a slowing up process, and that during that slowing up process men will once again be brought to compete one against the other for jobs. And might not the Junkers be anxious to distract attention from the fact that while there have been millions to loan to war lords, internal development projects have languished because of a lack of capital?

"Do you see the big black bear? Are you not afraid he will bite your baby?" said the sneak thief to the mother at the circus as he deftly stole the woman's purse.

What projects, indeed, may we behind the activities of the American Junkers who so frantically point to the European menace and the Asiatic menace and never once refer to any of the problems that face our people right here at home?

RED LIGHTS AHEAD

Ohio is not ready to worship the war God. Half her towns and taxing districts are facing financial distress. Many of her public schools are running on borrowed money. The one per cent tax limit law will soon reach a breaking period. It is imperative that local tax rates be increased. In hundreds of taxing districts income does not now equal expenditures.

The war revenue tax imposed by a Democratic Congress and signed by a Democratic President two years ago is unpopular and in many instances odious.

No State in the Union is in the same unhappy financial condition as is Ohio at the present time. If a Democratic administration at Washington commits this nation to a Billion Dollar Military Program it MUST INCREASE TAXES.

Republicans will vote to help do this. Then the worm will turn. In the campaign of 1916, the Democratic Party will be charged with responsibility for heaping tax burdens upon the people. Militarism is the curse of the Old World. Why foist it upon America? Labor, church and farm are opposed.

Ohio Congressmen should not imperil Democratic success in 1916 by voting to plunge this nation into the depths of militarism and tax burdens.—Putnam County Signal.

TWO GOLDEN DAYS

There are two days of the week upon which and about which I never worry, two care-free days kept sacredly free from fear and apprehension.

One of these is Yesterday. Yesterday with all its cares and frets, with all its pains and aches, all its faults, its mistakes and blunders, has passed beyond the reach of my recall. I cannot undo an act that I wrought. I cannot unsay a word that I said on Yesterday. All that it holds of life, of regret and sorrow, is in the hand of the Mighty Love that can bring sweet waters out of the bitterest desert, the love that can make the wrong things right, that can turn weeping into laughter, that can give beauty for ashes, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness, joy of the morning for the woe of night.

Save for the beautiful memories that linger, sweet and tender like the perfume of roses, in the heart of the day that is gone, I have nothing to do with yesterday.

And the other day I do not worry about is Tomorrow. Tomorrow, with all its possible adversities, its burdens, its perils, its large promises and poor performance, its failures and mistakes, is as far beyond the reach of my mastery as its dead sister—yesterday. Its sun will rise in roseate splendor, or beyond a mask of weeping clouds. But it will rise. Until then the same love and patience that held yesterday, and holds tomorrow, shines with tender promise into the heart of today. I have no possession in that unborn day of grace. All else is in the infinite keeping of that Infinite Love that holds for me the treasure of yesterday, the love that is higher than the stars, wider than the sky, deeper than the seas.

There is left for myself, then, but one day of the week—today. Any man can fight the battles of today. Any woman can carry the burdens of just one day.—Robert J. Burdette.

The resolution requesting the state highway commissioner to cause the necessary survey, profiles, etc., to be made for proposed road improvement commencing at the intersection of the Inter County Highway Number 30, with the boundary line between Lake and Cuyahoga counties, running thence in an easterly direction to the intersection of the line between Kirtland and Willoughby townships, involving five miles of highway, and passed by the Lake County Commissioners, was the signal for an arousal of Painesville township citizens to the fact that this locality has been badly discriminated against in the distribution of good roads funds. Monday a large delegation called at the Commissioners office and asked for the improvement of the Leroy road connecting with Painesville. The county commissioners have heretofore been distributing these funds in accordance with demands of various delegations and without regard to the justice of the expenditures. Painesville has been slow to make demands and has had little in the way of favors. The Herald believes that the county commissioners are making a very poor excuse for their conduct. The board is elected by the vote at large, and each member should consider that the large population and the large tax duplicate of Painesville township entitles the township to consideration regardless of petitions and delegations. The only wonder is that there was not long ago a demand for a more impartial distribution of these tax funds.

Perry—North Ridge

Geo. Harley has moved his family to Painesville for the winter.

Miss Yarnell was shopping in Painesville, Saturday.

Miss Esther Castier of Painesville spent Sunday with Perry friends.

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Elliott were shopping in Painesville Saturday.

Mrs. Geo. Chapman spent Saturday with her mother in Painesville.

A reception was given Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Perry, at the home of Mrs. Sarah Hurlburt Monday evening, the occasion being the fiftieth anniversary. A purse of gold was presented from the neighbors. A pleasant evening was enjoyed by all.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harley of Kingsville were visiting friends and relatives in town last week.

The young people gave Miss Dorothy Hull a birthday surprise Saturday evening. Refreshments were served and all enjoyed the occasion.

The north part of town was shocked Monday morning to receive the news of the death of Mrs. Lizzie Peterson, which occurred at the Painesville hospital after an operation for appendicitis. Besides her husband she is survived by mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Korth of Perry, three sisters, Mrs. John Prentice of Perry, Mrs. Fred Davis of Ashtabula and Mrs. Clara Vargo of Fairport Harbor, two brothers Fred Korth of Perry, and Carl Korth of Painesville.

Gale Lucas was home from Cleveland over Sunday.

Mrs. Ida Lockwood returned home Friday from a two weeks visit in Ashtabula.

Miss Alta Ernst was called home Saturday by the illness of her grandmother, Mrs. Spain. At this writing Mrs. Spain was resting very comfortable.

Henry Van Ness, aged 87 years, an old resident of Perry, died at his home Saturday morning. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon. He is survived by his widow.

Leroy

Collins Morse who was operated on last Monday at the Painesville hospital is not improving as fast as his many friends would wish. Some member of his family goes to see him every day.

Miss Lizzie Harrison of Painesville was the guest Saturday night and Sunday of her uncle, T. H. Harrison and family.

Frank Hentke met with an accident Saturday while working in the woods that did not prove to be as serious as was thought to be at first. He was helping to fell a tree when a large limb of another tree fell striking him on the shoulder. He was taken to the house of Bob Woodruff, where he is boarding and Dr. Amidon was called when it was found no bones were broken. Frank is again out but not able to work.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Winchell and daughter of Hambden were guests Sunday of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Will Davis.

Stella McGee, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack McGee left Saturday for Cleveland where she will spend the holidays with her friend, Mrs. Blackmore.

Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Cope and daughter, Edna, were guests over Sunday of relatives in Cleveland.

Mentor

Dec. 13th, 1915.

Old winter is here sure enough today, the ground is white with snow, and more falling! The mercury has not fallen below twenty-five degrees above zero, and this kind of a "mild winter" with lots of snow—is what is being predicted, and these same prophets declare we shall have a very late and cold spring. Indeed, the famous Hick's Almanac says that all next year is to be cold and stormy, with numerous cloud bursts, snow very late into the early summer months, etc. All this is for the benefit of South goers so that they will not hurry back fancying the weather is fine and warm here because it is down there.

We learn every week of more and more Lake county people who are laying their plans to winter below frost line after this, and are told that any really reliable information concerning cost of living, cost of getting down there, and the rents, would be acceptably received by the Herald readers.

A very delightful concert is expected from the "Southland Troupe" of colored folk, the evening of the 28th of this month in the new Disciple church building, tickets for which will be twenty-five and fifteen cents, proceeds to go towards the building fund.

Miss Nellie Rexford is spending this week in Geneva with Mrs. Martha Ackley Fitzsimmons and her family.

Good news continues to come from the Lake County people who are down in Eustis, Fla. for the winter. The Mentor gentlemen have all had hard colds (caught, most likely by going fishing just because the sun shone, and regardless of what the thermometer said), but the ladies were all well and enjoying themselves.

The new traveling library has arrived from Columbus, and Miss Cleveland will be placing the books around in the different eight district schools in a few days now. By adding a few from the Mentor village library, there will go sixty books into each school house, the teacher taking charge of them—thereby making eight sub-stations, where magazines and readable books can be drawn during any day in the week, free of cost. The rules are just the same as at the Library, i. e. two cents a day fine for books kept more than two weeks without getting them renewed. These sub stations are greatly appreciated and much praise has come to the Mentor Library Association for doing this. (And it has been doing it for two years now, all the extra work coming on Miss Cleveland, for which so far she has never received a penny!)

The Loyalty Class taught by Mr. Otis are to have a social this week Friday evening in the Social Hall of the Disciple church, and a "spread." We understand that these socials are monthly affairs, held for the one very laudable purpose of getting acquainted, and that the one after this—will be a "watch meeting" on Friday evening the thirty-first.

The handsome fur collar which Mrs. Bradway lost recently, has not been returned to her, as it was hoped. (Possibly the one who found it, does not take any county paper?) Anyway, one could find out by inquiring who had lost such a thing! Queer, how most folks who FIND a thing, will take for granted that the Lord wants them to HAVE it, and so will KEEP it, and never stir themselves to find the owner.

The little play "The Sky-Riders" passed off very nicely, all of the parts having been well assigned. A number of the friends of the Club were not able to be there on Friday evening, and so they are to be asked to repeat it, later on.

The Mentor branch of the County Y. M. C. A. meet every Tuesday evening at half past six and have supper together, the supper being served by two of the boys selected by the committee for that purpose. After supper they have a talk by one of the leaders, and after they have washed up all their supper dishes, they play games, or have some indoor athletic exercises always starting home by nine o'clock. The boys here are much attached to their Y. M. C. A. and feel that the one evening a week is spent very profitably indeed, as they are learning many useful and profitable things that will be sure to come in play in after years.

Dr. Clark is quite sick, and under the care of Dr. Ingersoll today, but hopes are felt by his many friends, that this indisposition will soon pass away and be he himself again.

Mrs. Henry Campbell accompanied by her two children, Margaret and James, went to St. Louis on Saturday, where they will join Mr. Campbell for the winter, and their house will be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Norris, who are to take care of the stock and things generally.

Miss Bertha Angle, the Primary teacher in the Mentor Village schools was a week end visitor with Mrs. Stieren and her family.

The total number of pupils enrolled in the village schools thus far this year, is one hundred and twenty-five, and much of this increase is due to the exceeding popularity of the Principal, Mr. L. V. Mills. The senior class numbers the following three, namely Corinne Johnson, Richard Parsons, and Earl Brockway. Under the leadership of Mr. Wallace Cheney of Ashtabula, the special teacher in music, the children are making good advancement, and are much interested.

Mrs. Carrie Likens Case of Willoughby, spent a portion of last week over here in our village.

The Christmas exercises of the Disciple Sunday School will be held either next week Thursday or Friday evening, the exact date not having been determined upon, as they expect to combine with the Special District schools, and thereby have an unusually good program.

The Methodist Sabbath School are to have something new in the line of decorations, but whether it will be any more satisfactory than that of other years, remains to be seen. Most of the music will be furnished by the school, and the observance of the "White Gift" will be about as usual for a number of years past. The Sunday evening following Christmas, has been the date decided upon, we understand.

Last Monday evening the Disciple parsonage was taken by storm by some of the neighbors, who gave Mrs. Clark a "postal card shower" having found out in some unaccountable way that it was her birthday, and as they came in armed with oysters and other good things to eat, a most delightful time was enjoyed by everybody so lucky as to be there.

Miss Frances Beede and Mr. Mills attended the Lake County High School Teacher's meeting in Painesville recently, and report a profitable meeting.

The Mentor Ladies Aid of the Methodist church are to meet at the parsonage this Wednesday afternoon and pack canned fruit for St. Luke's hospital in Cleveland, a Methodist institution. The nurses there sent down two barrels of empty cans, a good many of which have been taken home and filled, and should the day prove stormy on Wednesday Mrs. Carleton, the president says any cans can be filled and left with Mrs. Schaffner and go up in a later package.

Mrs. Payson Carroll has been on the sick list for more than two weeks now, and is still housed up at home, though much better.

The Mentor Village schools are to have a two weeks vacation, beginning on Saturday of this week, the 18th.

Owing to bad weather, the Missionary meeting held on Thursday with Mrs. D. E. Spindle was not as well attended as could have been wished. Mrs. Emma Taylor took charge of the Foreign text book, beginning with the first chapter, and Mrs. Mills made a very interesting program for the "Home" society from leaflets, back magazines, etc. The next meeting is to be at the parsonage with Mrs. Schaffner, when Mrs. Carleton and Mrs. Frost will have charge of the program for the afternoon.

The W. C. T. U. are to hold their meeting this week with Mrs. Marion Hodges. (Say! Why don't our people telephone these things to the county correspondents the week before? Now, by the time the paper comes out, the day is past and they say "Why couldn't we have known this before? we know Mrs. Hodges, love her—and would have liked to gone there.")

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sandberg have decided not to move into the city for the rest of the winter (much to the satisfaction of their friends), but will remain in their own comfortable home.

Miss Ella Freeman has abandoned her trip to California for the present, and we understand will go to Florida sometime next month in company with Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Dickry of Willoughby, who are Mentor folks and old friends.

Chas. Jackett has put in a very nice variety of mechanical toys for his Christmas trade, and has many other desirable gifts for sale, to say nothing of the splendid stock of fine candies always to be found in his beautiful store. Folks feel very proud of the Jackett store and the new barber shop, with its windows full of flowering plants. If that man can "shave" as well as he can make things grow—he must be a success.

Mr. John Cadle has moved his family back into the homestead here, and will be here during the winter at least, and probably longer, as he is needed to help his brother T. C. Cadle in looking after the two large farms, the stock, etc.

Mr. Lackey has gone back to his post in the mail service, having been at home for a couple of weeks on vacation, part of which he spent in Pennsylvania at his old home.

The C. W. B. M. held their Missionary Tea at the parsonage last Tuesday, when six new members were added, bringing up the membership of the society to twenty-three at date, with two others who are honorary members only, having the privilege of attending all meetings and of paying—but not of voting on business matters.

The "Layman's Convention" held in Cleveland last week was attended by a number of men from here, all seeming to agree that Bishop Oldham was the "Star" of the convention, though the address on "The Life That Wins" by Mr. Trumbull, editor of the Sunday School Times, was as practical as any. Of the seventy-five similar conventions being held in the United States, five were assigned to Ohio, which speaks well for our own state, and the interest that the "men in the pews" are expressing on all lines of mental and spiritual growth.

Our last party of Mentor folks who started for Eustis, Fla., were Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Harris and daughter, Mrs. A. S. Jackett and their grand-daughter, Miss Cecil McFarland. These friends have arrived in safety, we understand, and so far are well pleased with the South. Farther, we hear that Miss Lida Marsh is also somewhat better, her bad cough already on the decrease.

Mrs. Charles Church leaves here on Wednesday for the home of her sister, Mrs. George Damon of Omaha, the occasion of the visit at this time being the wedding of her niece Miss Wilma Damon, who is a graduate of the Cleveland Woman's College, and who has spent so many of her vacations here that she almost belongs here.

Christmas shoppers from this neck of the woods, have not needed Everet True to push them through the store doors in order to get them to "do" up their trading before the fateful day. Every ear has seen more or less of our people returning home laden with packages and bundles, weary and cross, most always studying over something they have bought and had no business to—else mad at themselves 'cause they didn't get something or other—different! When it is all over, everybody will feel relieved, and no doubt will wish they had sent the money to the Europe sufferers and not wasted it on folks who have so much now, they don't know what to do with it.

Jack Northcutt goes 'round with the snow-plow, and is the best man ever to keep walks clean. Many persons walk on the pavement, in the middle of the road, just for the fun of feeling the good hard stuff under their feet. And yet, automobiles go hooting past in the tear—but not so many, when a blizzard is on! One good thing about a blizzard!

DANGER SIGNAL

If the fire bell should ring would you run and stop it or go and help to put out the fire? It is much the same way with a cough. A cough is a danger signal as much as a fire bell. You should no more try to suppress it than to stop a fire bell when it is ringing, but should cure the disease that causes the coughing. This can nearly always be done by taking Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Many have used it with the most beneficial results. It is especially valuable for the persistent cough that so often follows a bad cold or an attack of the grip. Mrs. Thomas Beeching, Andrews, Ind., writes: "During the winter my husband takes cold easily and coughs and coughs. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best medicine for breaking up these attacks and you cannot get him to take any other." Obtainable everywhere.

Difference In Methods.

Some women generate one of their sweetest smiles when they want a favor of their husband, and some turn on the briny flow.

NERVOUS WOMEN

When the nervousness is caused by constipation, as is often the case, you will get quick relief by taking Chamberlain's Tablets. These tablets also improve the digestion. Obtainable everywhere.

"About as near perfection, I suppose, as they make railroads."

Mr. Thomas A. Edison recently made a railroad trip across the continent. Commenting on the roadway of one of the western railroads in a newspaper interview, "the Wizard" said:

Human Nature.

COUGH MEDICINE FOR CHILDREN.

Mrs. Hugh Cook, Scottsville, N. Y., says: "About five years ago when we were living in Garbutt, N. It promptly checked their coughing and cured their colds quicker than anything I ever used." Obtainable everywhere.

GARRISON GIVES HIS ARMY PLAN

Secretary of War Eloquently Defends Preparedness for Defense.

REPORT OF WAR OFFICE GIVEN OUT

Compulsory Military Service Declared Only Resort if Citizens Fail to Enlist in the Proposed Continental Reserves.

Washington, D. C.—Compulsory military service is declared by Secretary Garrison, in his annual report made public today, to be the only resort of the United States in providing an adequate defense should citizens fail to enlist in the continental army.

Secretary Garrison throws down the gauntlet to former Secretary Bryan and other opponents of military preparedness in this declaration: "If the nation requires certain service and offers the most favorable opportunity for the citizens to furnish such service, and, notwithstanding that, it cannot secure such service, it must then resort to some method of compelling the service."

Mr. Garrison makes this plain statement after discussing the prospects of raising a reserve army of 400,000 men through voluntary enlistment. "With respect to the annual installments of 133,000 men for the continental army," says the secretary of war, "the question undoubtedly will be frequently asked, 'Can they be secured? Will you get the men?' There cannot, of course, be a categorical answer to this question. Nobody knows, but this does not in any way alter the course which we should pursue. With respect to the continental force the most favorable conditions will be provided for the citizens to enter its service. ..."

THEIR LAST CHANCE

Republicans Will Make Desperate Effort for Victory.

Leaders Realize That Four More Years of Wise Democratic Administration Will Place Party In Power for Long Period.

All parties always are anxious to win campaigns, but the feverish eagerness of the Republican leaders to get back in the saddle next year passes anything known in this country for many a day.

The reason is clear. The country is prosperous and is getting more prosperous; moreover, good times are sure to continue for a considerable period in spite of the war waste of Europe.

If prosperity is allowed to grow and develop under a Democratic administration, with the lowest tariff since the Civil war, the country never will go back to Aldrichism and ambitious Republicans may as well hang up the fiddle and the bow for the next dozen years. But if the G. O. P. can grab control next year, raise the tariff, and yet hang to the results of President Wilson's ...

MILITIA AND THE WORKMEN

Would Pass Up All Labor Troubles to State Constabulary.

Cincinnati, O.—"We must establish a state constabulary, similar to that of Pennsylvania, which is to handle all labor troubles, if the Ohio National Guard is to be relieved of the antagonism of organized labor," said former Colonel Charles Hake, of the First Regiment, at the closing session of the O. N. G. State Association Convention.

"The labor unions are opposed to the National Guard on this ground," he continued, "and not until it is relieved of this disagreeable strikebreaking duty will the many desirable men from organized labor enter the ranks of the militia. Only in the case of dire necessity should the guard be called out. The trouble has been that moral cowardice on the part of mayors and sheriffs has deterred them from coping with situations which they would be able to handle." The Colonel advocated the establishment of a barracks at Newark, the geographical and railroad center of the state and the quartering of a properly equipped constabulary there.

STATISTICS OF SCHOOL PROPERTY

There Are 12,339 School Houses, 10,425 of Which Are in Rural Districts.

VALUE OF PROPERTY IS $101,241,100

This Does Not Include School Equipment Nor Cost of Operating State Institutions of Higher Education; 900,000 Enrollment.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

Columbus.

STATISTICS showing the number of public school buildings in the state and the enormous sum of money invested in these buildings, lands and equipment is shown by a tabulation just completed by Prof. H. H. Swygert, statistician in the department of the state school superintendent. There are now 12,339 school buildings in Ohio, not including the colleges, universities and normal schools of the state. Of these 232 were erected during the past year. In the cities there are 997 buildings, in the villages 917 and in the rural districts 10,425. In all these buildings there are 28,266 rooms. The total seating capacity is for 1,105,227 pupils. The total school enumeration, including all between 6 years and 21, is a little over 1,000,000, so that Ohio has seating capacity for all her school youth and more if it is properly distributed. The daily enrollment of actual pupils is, however, only a little over 900,000. The number of pupils per class the state over is just 30. Statistician Swygert finds that the total value of the school property of the state is $101,241,100. But this is only the state's permanent investment in school property, and not all of them, for it does not include school equipment. ...

Do Not Go Hand in Hand.

Illegitimacy and illiteracy do not go hand in hand, so tables prepared by Dr. Morton W. Bland, registrar of the state bureau of vital statistics, show. Cleveland, with a higher percentage of illiteracy, has a lower birth rate of illegitimacy than Cincinnati, Columbus or Dayton. The rate of illegitimacy in cities is 21.4 per cent and in rural districts 11.9 per 1,000 births. Only 3.2 of the population of Ohio is illiterate, while that of the entire population of the United States shows 7.7 per cent to be illiterate. The following table shows the illiteracy and illegitimacy in the principal cities of the state, the percentage of illiteracy being based on the total population and the illegitimacy on each 1,000 births. The first figures are on illiteracy and the second are on illegitimacy: Akron, 3 per cent, 4.2 per cent; Canton, 3.4 per cent, 14.6; Hamilton, 1.3 per cent, 8.7; Youngstown, 7.1 per cent, 13.8; Cincinnati, 4.1 per cent, 32.3; Cleveland, 1.6 per cent, 21.1; Columbus, 2.9 per cent, 31; Dayton, 2.3 per cent, 22.4; Toledo, 2.8 per cent, 19.3. In Russia 70 per cent of the population is illiterate. Ohio had 101,801 births last year and of these 1,641 were illegitimate, or 16 to each 1,000.

Compromise on New Gate.

While all the business transacted by the state public utilities commission is important, it varies in degree of weightiness. For instance, several days ago the commission authorized the Baltimore & Ohio railroad to issue $50,000,000 of bonds for betterments and for the cancellation of obligations. After disposing of this business, the commission gave attention to a controversy between the Wabash railroad and Harry LaVor, a farmer of near Napoleon, over the question of who should close a gate opening from LaVor's farm to the company's tracks. The commission succeeded in getting the belligerents to compromise. The company will install a new gate ... and Mrs. LaVor will keep it closed while her husband is absent. It will cost the company $10 to make the change.

The Galt residence virtually will become a conservatory itself on the night of the ceremony. There will be music furnished by a small orchestra assigned from the membership of the Marine band, but the actual wedding march is likely to be played upon a piano by Miss Bertha Bolling, one of Mrs. Galt's sisters.

Orchids Mrs. Galt's Favorite.

An altar, which virtually will be a bank of flowers, is to be erected at the west end of the parlors of the residence. The bride-to-be will meet the president at the foot of the stairway in a hall without the wedding room and will walk with him from there to the altar front. Mrs. Galt will carry a bouquet of orchids, which Mr. Wilson found out long ago to be her favorite flowers. She will be attired in a traveling gown. The ring will be a plain gold circlet inscribed with the initials of bride and groom.

Restore White House Functions.

[illegible]

Beautiful Dolly Madison.

... that Dolly Madison, wife of President James Madison, is better known to Americans than any other wife of a president except, of course, Martha Washington.

John Tyler was married twice, the second time while he was president. His first wife was Letitia Christian, who belonged to one of the old families of Virginia. Mrs. Tyler bore the president nine children. Just before her husband was elected vice president of the United States Mrs. Tyler had a stroke of paralysis, and a short time after he succeeded William Henry Harrison as president she died, the death occurring in the White House. The second winter after the death of Mrs. Tyler the president met Julia, the daughter of a Gardiner who lived on an island in Long Island sound. The president fell desperately in love with the young woman and soon they became engaged and were married quietly at the Church of the Ascension in New York city.

The Cleveland Marriage.

Grover Cleveland did not marry until late in life. He married Frances Folsom, the daughter of his law partner, whom he had known when she was a little girl at an age when she had called him "Uncle Cleve." Mr. Cleveland and Miss Folsom were married in the Blue room at the White House.

For a long time it was thought that President Wilson would be married in the White House. For some reason or other people took it for granted that Mrs. Galt would prefer a ceremony in the executive mansion. From the point of view of womankind it seemingly is a compelling thing to be able to speak of a White House wedding as one of the participants. Mrs. Galt, however, held to the thought that she should be married in her own home rather than in that of her husband. She did not believe in breaking the American home precedent to make of her marriage a world's precedent. Washington generally concedes that she showed good taste and determination that her own house should be the scene of the wedding.

The wedding of the president of the United States to Mrs. Galt will be in detail and surroundings a most simple affair. It will be in keeping with traditional American simplicity in cases—does one dare say it?—where the bride and the groom have passed beyond the stage of youth.

SAGE REFLECTIONS

[illegible]

If consistency is a jewel, why do so few women display it?

We should all forgive and forget, but it's mighty difficult to do the latter at once.

Any fellow is apt to be a good catch when a girl throws him a kiss.

Most weddings turn out as well as expected by everybody except the bride and groom.

FROM THE PENCIL'S POINT

Anyway, peace is worth fighting for.

Life may be a grind, but grinding sharpens things.

It's hard for a learned man to learn to love a learned woman.

Even Solomon couldn't size up a woman's thoughts by her sighs.

Many a diplomat is one who can hide his ignorance behind a smile.

Most women seem to be good, because they are different from men.

Although the fool and his money may be soon a parted, they are hard to find.

WORDS OF WISE MEN

Thrift must be our servant, not our master.

He who would eat the kernel must crack the shell.

He who lives in personal suspicion lives the life of a sentinel never relieved.

Leisure, when it comes, is not meant to be made use of; it is meant for leisure.

[illegible]

... the other man over to our side by arguing with him. Even when an argument does convince it is not usually the best way of convincing. It is so much better to suggest to people than to argue with them. If you have convinced a person he is trying to remember what you said. But if you plant a seed in his mind it will quietly work in him. Growing truth is more effective than driven truth.

Fine winter weather the past week, very little snow but rough roads. Not much sickness, more use for Santa than for M. D.'s, but the wise doctors will replenish their saddlebags knowing their turn will come next.

The newly painted and decorated Town Hall has been the scene of several festivities the past week. Tuesday evening a banquet and general good time was given by the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. and was well attended and enjoyed. Thursday evening the first number of the lecture course, Brush, the Magician, was appreciated by a full house. Saturday evening an oyster supper given by the Board of Education, with entertainment furnished by the school children of the town, a decided success. The other numbers on the lecture course promise well. For January, Mrs. Gill, Reuler, Harpist, Contraltoist; February, W. T. Sherman Culp, a noted lecturer, subject not announced; March, Royal Male Quartette; April, Ash Davis, Cartoonist.

Clifford Markell has moved his family up into their new home, that has been fashioned from a wilderness and made into a beautiful place by Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Sweet who have occupied it for over sixty years. While the neighborhood deplores the loss of the Sweets, it heartily welcomes the Markells one and all. May they be prosperous and happy on their Forest Fruit Farm, and judging by the number of young ladies now going in and out there, it may still be called the Sweet Place.

Mrs. Ada Markell returned home Saturday, after spending some weeks with her children and grandchildren at Chardon, Claridon and Leroy. She reports much more snow that way.

Many visitors are expected for the Xmas holidays and also many absentees, among the latter Miss Pearl Churchill coming the 19th for a two weeks' vacation.

Miss Lottie Osborne, a former teacher here and now teaching in Euclid, spent Saturday and Sunday in town.

Mrs. H. Chapman, who has been on the sick list for some time is reported better, and is up about.

King Grippe has put in an appearance even before Santa, which means a long season of his reign, if people neglect to arm themselves against him. Gertrude Logsden is reported quite sick, also Mrs. I. W. Shupp. Mrs. Shupp's friends, and that means the entire population of the town, are wishing the new house was ready for occupancy.

The annual panther has made his appearance or rather made himself heard down in the region of the King farm, but let the timid take courage, he has been slain (at least for the present) up in the region of Mitchells Mills.

The lost boy who caused so much excitement, has been happily found. A good joke and a hearty laugh rippled all along the line. Try it again H.

Santa Claus in the Movies

By GENE MORGAN

"YOUR information is in part correct," said Santa Claus receiving the interviewer in the library of his ice palace. "It is true that I have received several flattering offers to star in moving picture productions. But it is not true that I have accepted any one of these propositions. I am still in doubt as to whether it would be the proper thing.

[illegible]

"Your Uncle Santa Is Getting Fat."

"They are not aware that your uncle Santa is getting so fat that there isn't room in the sleigh for himself and the larger toys. Nor that my noble mane of hair isn't what it used to be. If people ever sent me presents—which, of course, does not occur to them—I should like to murmur a little wish for a bottle of hair tonic.

One moving picture firm wants to put me into a play. The plot is something like this: I am driving my reindeer over the treetops when I am set upon by a band of aeroplane pirates. The pirates make me hold up my hands and then divest me of my stock of toys. Just when the banditplane is about to fly away, leaving me in distress, the chief of the robbers makes a discovery.

Amid the pack of toys he finds a rag doll. By the tag around its neck he sees that it has been addressed to his little daughter. My thoughtfulness in remembering his little girl, despite her father's profession, touches the bandit's heart. He weeps, and then to the astonishment of his pals he orders them to lift me into the aeroplane.

"'Now, Mr. Claus,' he says, according to the subtitle, 'we are going to deliver your toys for you all over the world tonight. Give us directions and we will fly wherever you command.'

"So at my direction, the bandit's aeroplane starts delivering the toys, making much better time, let me tell you, than my poor reindeers who were left behind. Things are going along fine. Our aeroplane toy conveyance has covered Canada, the United States, Australia and South Africa, when suddenly, to our dismay, we find that we are being pursued.

"'More pirates?' I ask in alarm.

'No, the aero police!' shouts my pirate friend.

"The police had found my empty sleigh and motionless reindeer. They naturally concluded that I had been robbed and kidnaped. Now they are on the trail of my captors. The pirates are very much afraid that if arrested they will be hanged at once. The police craft is gaining upon us. In order that the pirates may escape, they decide they must throw all of my toys overboard. The vicious crew demands that your old friend St. Nick be thrown overboard too, as I am pretty heavy, besides being the cause of all the trouble.

"The race continues through the sky.

"I want to raise the white flag as a token of surrender. I pledge myself to the captain of the pirate aeroplane that I will plead the cause of himself and his crew and secure their release from the police. I tell them that the police will do them no harm, after I have explained their kindness in carrying my toys all over the world.

"The police craft is now so close that escape seems impossible.

"'Give me a white flag,' I cry.

"'There isn't a white flag on board —nothing but black flags,' says the pirate. 'Hurry up and do something. You have no time to lose. If you don't surrender they will shell us. And in that case, we will have to throw you overboard, St. Nick.'

"My mind works quickly. I have no white flag. My handkerchief, like those of the pirates, is a red bandanna. What am I to do? What? Another shell rips past our airship.

"Ah! I have it! [illegible]

The Lake County Weekly Herald

Volume XVII. No. 42 — PAINESVILLE, OHIO, DECEMBER 24, 1915 — One Dollar Per Year

Here's wishing you a very Merry Christmas and may the New Year be one of Peace, Happiness and Prosperity to you and yours.

LAKE COUNTY HERALD

NEW COUNTY OFFICE

Will Cost Lake County Several Hundred Dollars a Year for Its Maintenance

Court Constable is the title of a new county office created by the Willis legislature. The new law provides that the judge of the court of common pleas shall appoint a court constable to be paid by the year. Acting under the provisions of this law Judge A. G. Reynolds has appointed James Hutchinson as court constable for one year from October 1, 1915, at a salary of $720.00.

Up to the time of the new appointment Mr. Hutchinson was serving as court bailiff, his duties being to take care of the court room and do the order of the court when court was in session. He was paid $2.50 per day and was only paid when the court was in session. The cost to Lake county under the old plan was $425 last year.

The new law has stirred up a noise in some of the smaller counties of Ohio where there is almost no court business. In some of these counties a court constable would not be needed more than 20 or 30 days in the year. The new law provides that the court constable may assist the probate judge when he is not needed in the common pleas court room.

We congratulate our old friend Hutchinson on securing this juicy little plum. The law ordered the judge to make an appointment and the increase in pay is part of the false economy of Willis and his kindergarten statesmen.

TAX VALUES MAY GO HIGHER

Under the Proposed Re-Appraisement of County Real Estate and Personal Property

The State Tax Commission is considering the re-valuation of all real estate and personal property next year. The commission summoned all county auditors to appear before it at Columbus last Thursday.

The auditors were ordered to prepare a list of transfers of real property and ascertain the selling price, the acreage, if farm lands, and the valuation of the same tract for taxation at the present time.

This action on the part of the State Commission may be the first step towards increasing tax values next year. If farms in Lake county are to go on the tax duplicate at prices which lands have been selling for, tax valuations will be doubled in some instances.

The Willis administration evidently fears that going back to the old system of electing assessors will cause a big drop in personal property values. This loss may be covered by raising the value on farm property. This increased value will also strike owners of real estate in towns and cities. The Warnes law, which was cussed so much, caught over 50,000 tax dodgers in Ohio. If these are to be let go the loss will have to be made up somewhere.

No definite action was taken at the Columbus meeting, according to Auditor W. Albert Davis, the commission, after hearing the reports of the various auditors, taking the matter under advisement and submitting some legal points to the attorney general's office.

Lake county citizens will watch this new tax move with interest.

University Doors Open to All During Farmers' Week.

You are not too old to go to college. There is one school that you can still go to even though you never went to any other. You can take your wife, son, daughter, grandson, son-in-law, or sweetheart too, if you like. Farmers' Week held at Columbus January 31 to February 4 will give you five days of instruction on any subject of farming that you want. Sixty popular lectures, many demonstrations and moving pictures all combined into a three session five day course will provide instruction on every phase of agriculture including poultry culture, soil fertility, apple growing, livestock raising and dairying.

Farmers' Week is the dream of President Thompson of the Ohio State University who wants to give the farmers of Ohio a chance to attend the University which they support. He has excused all classes maintained for the instruction of 6000 students in engineering, medicine, education, pharmacy and law so that the farmers can come to college. Practically all the buildings on the campus of the University costing $5,000,000 will be utilized for the event.

"We want you to come because we have the best program possible. The farmers made Farmers' Week the biggest event for boosting agricultural conditions in Ohio last year. So we have decided to offer double the advantages this year. Now you cannot afford to stay away" says Clark S. Wheeler, Director of extension work at the University who is in charge.

It is open to the old and young. Last year a man of 88 sat beside a boy of 12 at the lectures. No expense is attached to the lectures. A note book is all that is needed. Farmers' Week has been arranged so that many farmers could leave their farms during the slack season. The men in charge guarantee that the results of information gained at Farmers' Week will mean hundreds of dollars in the next two years to every man who attends. Write for a complete program.

Glen Was Careful

When a Painesville firm received a complaint that a shipment of their goods had arrived at its destination in a badly damaged condition, the shipping clerk was called into the office and questioned.

"Were the goods packed carefully?"

"Yes sir," replied the clerk, "I saw to it myself."

"Did you put on a label reading 'This side up with care?'"

"Yes sir, I did, and so that they would be sure and see it I put another just like it on the bottom of the box!"

Butchering Notes

Butcher hogs at home. Give them water but no feed a day before killing. Bleed the hog with an eight-inch straight-blade knife. Be sure the bleeding is done before scalding or the skin may be left too red. Scrape quickly and rapidly as possible after scalding. A cold carcass is hard to scrape well. Keep the hog moving in the barrel. If the animal is left pressed against the barrel the hot water cannot get at that part of the carcass. Scraping is easier when a shovelful of hardwood ashes, a lump of lime, some concentrated lye, or a handful of soft soap has been added to the water. Scale when the temperature of the water is between 140 and 150 degrees.

Land Always in Motion.

We are apt to think of the sea as something that is constantly shifting and the land as something quite stable. In reality the land is always moving, and science now believes that quite possibly it is moving even faster than the surface of the ocean.

LAKE COUNTY MAN

Roy A. Tuttle is Slated for National Delegate by Cleveland Democrats

A meeting of the Cuyahoga Democratic executive committee will be held soon to consider selecting delegates to the Democratic national convention from the three Cleveland congressional districts.

Mayor Newton D. Baker in all likelihood will be a delegate from the twenty-second, although he has been mentioned as a possible delegate-at-large. The other probability for the twenty-second is Roy A. Tuttle, defeated for congress last fall. Mr. Tuttle was a delegate to the Baltimore convention in 1912.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

There is a reasonable certainty, however, that Mr. Gordon will have the indorsement of the Democratic county executive committee.

Celebrate Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary

Mr and Mrs. OLIVER H. PERRY

Monday, Dec. 13th was the fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver H. Perry. A company of twelve persons including children, grandchildren and Mr. Perry's only sister, Mrs. J. P. Bennett, ate dinner with them. The afternoon was spent in visiting and reading the letters and post cards received from relatives, friends and neighbors. Many of these contained money and other gifts besides the kind and loving greetings which made the aged couple very happy.

In the evening kind neighbors came with auto and took them to the home of Mrs. Sarah Hurlburt, where they met more kind friends and where they spent a happy evening. All were made glad to see the pleased faces of the aged bride and groom.

After a pleasant evening light refreshments were served. Here again to kind words were added gifts of gold which will cause them to always remember with grateful hearts the kind donors.

Mr. Perry was 86 years old the 26th of last November. He with his sister, Mrs. Z. P. Bennett are the last of twelve brothers and sisters. His father was one of the first settlers in the town of Perry and his oldest brother Edmund Brewster Perry, who has been dead some years was the first child born in the town of Perry.

Mrs. Perry was 75 years old last August. She has always lived in Perry. Her father, Jonathan Coolidge, was also one of the first settlers.

The Black Evangelist

The Rev. Dr. Alexander Willbanks, of Washington, calls himself the Black Billy Sunday. He is holding services in St. Louis.

"Escape for thy life," was his text, taken from the seventeenth verse of the nineteenth chapter of Genesis. Having read this, he told them of the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah in plain terms so that the simplest among his hearers could comprehend the awful fate of those who forsake God and worship Lucifer.

His description ran thus:

"Abraham was sitting in his tent door on the plains of Mamre, with the salubrious breeze blowing about him, and the foxes getting ready to leave their holes and the everlasting stars about to come out, when angels appeared to Abraham and he gave them meat. Then they went away, and the Lord told him he was going to burn up Sodom and Gomorrah.

"The Lord said that if there were fifty righteous persons there he would not. Abraham girded up his loins and started running through the city, but he couldn't find them. He asked one man:

"'Say mister, are you a Christian?'

"'Me a Christian? I should say not—I'm a gambler,' that wicked man answered.

"Abraham then went down a side street, where he heard ragtime played on a piano, and asked a woman if she was righteous. She said:

"'Say, man, what do you think this is? This is the red hot district.' And he didn't find no righteous there.

"Then the Lord said if there were forty he wouldn't destroy the city; then thirty, then twenty, then ten. Abraham was bound to find at least ten righteous, so he ran through the town.

"Some of the folks laughed at that good man as he tried to save 'em, just as they laugh at ministers today; but the Lord had spoken, and he was tryin' to save the wicked sinners.

"He ran into a gambling den, just like they used to have in St. Louis, and said:

"'Is there any righteous here?'

"But they laughed at him. 'Gee, that fellow's bughouse,' one of 'em said. But don't you think Abraham was bughouse. He knew what he was doin'. But he couldn't find the righteous, so he went back to his tent on the plains of Mamre, where the salubrious breezes blew.

"He went back to his tent, he went back to his tent," the minister sang, and his congregation joined in the chant.

"Then two angels appeared to Lot as he sat in the gate of Sodom. Zephyrs were being wafted pleasantly about, and all was peaceful and quiet. Old Sol had hid himself for the night, and beauteous Venus had unveiled her face to the plains of men. And Lot took the angels in and gave them meat. And the angels told him to pack up and fly away, because God was going to burn Sodom.

"Lot started to get his goods ready, then he went out after his sons-in-law, but they were triflin' fellows, just like the boys you see hanging around St. Louis poolrooms and saloons. He looked in all the good places first, like the churches and the banks, but they weren't there.

"Then he went down to a gambling den, and there sat his sons-in-law playing cards.

"'Up, get you out of this place, for the Lord will destroy this city,' he told 'em.

"The crowd that was sittin' around the card table guffawed, and said to one of the sons, 'Say, what's the matter with the old guy?'

"And one of 'em answered, 'Aw, don't pay no attention to him. He's looney, he is.' And the other answered: 'Go on home, ole man, you've got a tech of the heat.'

"And Lot went back home, kinda sorrowful like, just like we ministers do when we can't get you sinners to come to church. So he and his wife packed up, just like this, and trotted off, just like this."

Here he put a large Bible over his shoulder, and trotted back and forth over the platform, while the congregation shouted.

"But Lot's wife, she had a woman's curiousity, and she kept a-sayin' she wanted to look back, and Lot kept a-tellin' her to keep her eyes to the front. Finally she took just one little peep, and then the Lord He turned her into a great pillar of salt—that's just what he did brethren.

"Then the Lord cut loose the brimstone and fire, and he burnt up those two wicked cities."

Throwing his coat back and clapping his hands together, the minister shouted in a rumbling bass:

"And where would God find you if He sent Lot to look for you if He was going to burn up old St. Louis? Would He find you in the saloon? And what would He see when He looked in your icebox—a can of beer? And what would He find in your piano—'It's a Long Way to Tipperary,' or a gospel song of Heaven?

"And what do you do, my brethren, when the shades of night fall fast? When Venus peers upon the earth, and the gentle zephyrs stir, and the moonbeams gleam softly upon old St. Louis—you sucks a cigarette, and you drinks a can of beer, instead of worshippin' God—now don't you?" he demanded.

"Now, some of you good brethren go through the crowd, seek out the sinners, before God Almighty burns St. Louis up, like he did Sodom and Gomorrah—do you want to be burned up, do you want to be burned up?"

"No, no, no!" came from a hundred voices and soon the mourners' bench was crowded with supplicants.

SYNOPSIS.

Billy Cox, newspaper reporter, falls in love with Ethel Fredericks, daughter of a wealthy Boston family, and is disowned by her father. Ethel's father, Jerome Fredericks, is a member of an organization called the "Twenty-Fifth Installment," which has for its purpose the ridding of the country of all forms of graft, and Billy, in his capacity as reporter, is ordered by his paper to "get" the "Twenty-Fifth Installment."

TWENTY-FIFTH INSTALLMENT

CHAPTER LXXIII.

The Encounter at Sea.

Over the sea, as the storm spent the distress call of the ship so sent, T. D. G. Constantine, D. G. C. Grove sailed.

Jerome, incidental at times, but impressive, the distinct soul of the crisis, clamped his teeth together, seeking not even Bernard or Grace to what is said. And now did June—the eyes of June.

The prime minister of Grenadofan, on his face scared, had by now been surrounded in another some sort of a "Twenty-Fifth Installment" of the Grenadofan order. He knew of the blue to bed, some of his officers, above, and a few of his servants at work. As for himself, he felt himself unable to conceive the immediate mechanism of the government so very well, but he knew that the "Twenty-Fifth—the men upon the strong hold and arm—whom was he.

Dear memory for relaxed prime minister! Interesting question, the prime minister made much yes and there for such close to the pine tree. Yet, to the minister, he felt, he had to do, when the "Twenty-Fifth" was had sailed to the Grenadofan, the time for the Grenadofan port, yet not there had been not the "Twenty-Fifth" and a passing moment, for, below, toward the north of the Grenadofan, the "Twenty-Fifth" had set on, with the purpose of interrupting this minister, the "Twenty-Fifth" happened upon the "Twenty-Fifth" where not on the sea the subtomain of Grenadofan, had disappeared.

Therefore, said the prime minister to himself, it might well be true that "Twenty-Fifth" having been gone a month, the "Twenty-Fifth" had made a mistake. There were always men were small with him, but always he had come back. Hitherto they had found his return by land. Now it was by sea. Yet, he said, it might well be—he was well rewarded the prime minister—he was well rewarded—he was well rewarded—he was rich on his return. It was well worth to be so well established, for now who would take control of affairs in the Grenadofan? Grace of Grove, he said.

I shall wrap take our other public the Admiral, said the prime minister to himself, "and get myself in the way of the royal yacht, which is now in harbor ready." And even so he did.

The Admiral was a stern Britishman, gray, of good form, and well bronzed.

The prime minister did not hesitate in his reward, for indeed he had not definite purpose in view. Only, he had got the Admiral into consideration, he had made the Admiral the hog, he had to let the hog out of the Grenadofan, and, he had to be discharged, so, he had put on the hog the fine shipment of the Prince Adolphus, he shadowed hoped hoped hoped, yet rarely under way. Having nothing to go to, he waited.

It was night now, and the stars were shining. The Admiral was in the cabin of the South Hampton on a very calm and languorous. But, to the prime minister, it was restless, pacing the deck of the Adolfus, these things were only, he wished, to wake, the time of ease yes pleasant a menace. Yet, he was a prime minister, and, he was to take it. I might as well put back.

He turned on the land wireless operator instructed to this now, a passage in his hand. He had not noticed the crackle of his own wireless music of the Adolfus, yet, he had not noticed such an night in the hope that wireless operator, the wireless music of the Adolfus, these things were only, he wished, to wake, the time of ease yes pleasant a menace. Yet, he was a prime minister, and, he was to take it. I might as well put back.

"I am Count Frederick of Grenadofan, of the king's cabinet, and his personal aide as well," said Count Frederick to the Admiral. "This is the government's call. I order. Absent it render to the Admiral of Grenadofan. We are a small power of navy, but we do not take agency for your sea ships if you do. We have down our walks—you are a small power, except this case. But we are there but before we will trouble your Admiral. We are in the white ensign above our mast, and we will stick to our colours. Good day."

Count Frederick, having this speech, turned away, and he made no attention to the master of the Prince Adolphus.

"Good," said he to Jerome, when all had had fated too.

He was disarmed and turned into leave time. At once the hoot of the Adolfus was heard, and the Adolfus which came down out of the state in the Grenadofan port.

This was what the state called not the "Twenty-Fifth Installment." Jerome, the Twenty-Fifth had avoided this emergency in which to found life. He knew that the Grenadofan navy is in commission. He hoped that Grenadofan would be dared to take over. He knew that any and which Grenadofan navy.

The Adolfus now swung at full speed, her captain pursing safety in a direct line to the Grenadofan port, safe and held it steadily. Always the Adolfus, the Adolfus, the Adolfus, of G. B.—Grenadofan." For, as a matter of fact, the Adolfus was long done in the Grenadofan port, and, the operator of the Prince had left the Adolfus, and, the Adolfus left.

They stood on into the starry night for some time, Jerome, the Twenty-Fifth, came from the capitals to the Adolfus, and, the Adolfus, the Adolfus, the Adolfus

DOLLAR CONSCRIPTION

When the average jingo talks about universal military service he has men in mind. But why should not universal military service apply to the dollar?

There has been much talk about conscription in England. Men are to be forced into the ranks. The man who goes into the ranks may be killed or he may be crippled for life. He is asked to give his all, perhaps. But the powers deal differently with dollars. Instead of taking whatever wealth is needed, instead of enforcing conscription in the case of the dollar, the government borrows its funds. It pays the man who has money 5 per cent on his cash because he is good enough to consent to a loan. In other words, the governments of the earth borrow dollars but seize lives.

If the time ever comes when the men of wealth realize that if there is a war all the wealth needed will be seized by the various governments, there will be no war. The best preparedness scheme we can think of is a law decreeing the conscription schedule to be applied in case of war. For example, the man with $100,000 could be assessed $10,000, the man with $200,000 could be assessed $60,000; the man with $300,000 could be assessed $80,000 and the man with a million $700,000. It might, of course, be advisable to scale that schedule but the figures indicate the general principle.

Would the makers of England and Germany have been very anxious for a war if they had known that instead of being able to lend money to the government their wealth would run up against a conscription schedule? So let's have conscription. Let us prepare for war by providing for compulsory military service as far as our men are concerned and compulsory military service as far as our dollars are concerned. We might even be willing to consent that the schedule provide that for every 10 per cent of the men uninjured during the war 10 per cent of the dollars seized for war purposes be returned to their owners. But if we are to have wars and rumors of wars, let us prepare. Conscription for men and dollars is the only sort of preparedness worth while.

But if there were a schedule like that in force, do you think there would be very many wars?

MERCHANT MARINE

In our opinion Congress can be more usefully employed in giving immediate and adequate encouragement to the building up of a merchant marine, than by locating camps and drill grounds and teaching boys how to shoulder arms. No self-respecting native American will willingly engage in that profitless calling for any length of time, nor will the gainful industry of the country consent to pay mercenaries for doing it.

The interests that are finding a profit in furnishing war supplies are noisy and influential. They must make hay while the sun shines, while the war lasts. Congress and the people should not be stampeded by them into holding a cent so near the public eye that the dollar that lies beyond it cannot be seen.

A policy that is at once profitable and humane should be pursued, in preference to one that is inhuman and cannot long be gainful. Money invested in merchant ships is better invested than in armor plates, which cannot be used except in a war which we need not have and which should not be gone into only that they may be used.

CUMMINS AND MUNITIONS MANUFACTURE.

Senator Cummins has opened in the Senate the fight begun by Congressman Tavener in the house looking toward the government manufacture of all war materials used by this nation. Senator Cullom's resolution goes even further; it suggests the feasibility of a law forbiding the manufacture of munitions by private firms, once the government enters the business for itself. The preamble to the senator's resolution contains briefly the arguments familiar to readers of this newspaper; it asserts that the profit incidental to munitions manufacture and sale has a tendency to "corrupt public opinion, disturb international peace and prevent a peaceful settlement of disputes between nations; that for its own safety and protection the government should manufacture all arms, arms and munitions and thus be independent of all private and corporate interests."

Undoubtedly, the lobby of the [illegible] now camping in Washington will exert every influence to keep the subject of the Cummins and Tavener resolutions in the background; the interests which have fattened off Europe's war will not easily let slip the huge profits promised by the program for American preparedness. But the subject will not down. The fight to take the profits out of war will go on until it wins. The country cannot afford to encourage militarism and court war by giving the vast business of supplying war materials over to a handful of men whose only definition of patriotism is profit.

"I'LL HENRYFORD."

Henry Ford has been called a jackass and a clown because he hired a ship and sailed across the sea to stop the most frightful slaughter in the history of the world.

Maybe he can't stop the war. Few expect that he will succeed. Nimble witted critics are having piles of fun with him because they don't believe he can deliver the goods.

But, to us, the big thing in his action is not the question of whether he will or will not stop the war, but the fact that he is willing to try. It was by trying that he got where he is. But still he keeps on trying.

In the face of overwhelming odds, in spite of a world wide criticism, he is willing to undertake the greatest job that ever fell to the lot of a human being in the world's history. He brushes aside the thousands of columns of newspaper criticism, he ignores the public utterances of so-called statesmen, he sets his face toward the most glorious goal that any man ever hoped to achieve and goes on his way, trying.

They say he is trying to advertise his automobile. But still he goes on trying. They say his riches have turned his head. But still he tries. They say he never did anything but promote a good automobile engine and they ask what right he has to undertake the work of diplomats. The present war is the result of a most gigantic failure of diplomacy, and the fact that Henry Ford is willing to try a thing on which the great diplomats of the world have failed only adds to the bigness of his trying.

So far as we know, he is the only person who has taken a definite step toward ending the war. True, it may not be the right step, but how are we ever going to get the right step until we try? The men who sit in swivel chairs and sneer and make funny jokes about that man Ford are not taking steps of any kind to end the war. The job looks too big and too hopeless to them.

It looks big to Ford and maybe it looks hopeless to him. But he's got the nerve to try and spend his own money at it.

Ye gods, what a nation this would be if each industry could be headed by a Ford who was willing to try! What chance would any other nation under the sun have in competition with us? What if more of us were willing to try and less of us were slaves of convention and creatures of habit?

If any young man happens to read this, we wish he'd let this one piece of advice soak into his brain or brains. There's a word in the dictionary called "can't." Leave it there! Never use it! Instead, say "I'll try," or better still, "I'll henryford!"

Mentor

Dec. 20, 1915.

The schools have all closed for the holiday vacation, those at the Center for two weeks, and the Special District for one week. These are the days therefore—when anxious and worried mothers are apt to say "Oh do go along with you! Have I got to tell you everything you are to get for Christmas? Indeed, I will not! So just get along out of the way—and be quiet." Everybody is tired to death and cross. There are pieces to be learned to speak at the church for Christmas, and "Mother" must hear them! Several things have always to be finished off—and things drag so at the last, and somebody is sure to need help about what he has begun for somebody else, and mother is the one to come to the rescue and help out. If only we could get through with Christmas by giving to the poor and nobody else, how light and easy it would all be!

Miss Edith Shields has gone to her old home at Woodfield, for the entire vacation, we understand, as has been her custom ever since she came here now going on three years ago.

Next Sabbath morning the services at the Methodist meeting house are to be largely that of song, the choir having been preparing for the occasion for some time.

Mr. Koch, who lives near Little Mountain is out of health and has been sent to one of the Cleveland hospitals within a few days past, by the advice of Dr. Allen Ingersoll.

Miss Ruth Bradway is planning to spend a portion of her winter vacation in North Girard, Pa., with her grandmother, Mrs. McCullough and others of her mother's family still living on the old homestead there.

As these are snowballing days, a word of caution may not be out of place. One of our Mentor boys (Mark Lamereaux) has been very badly hurt recently by being hit with a snow ball. For some days, it was thought he would lose the sight of one eye (as he was hit in the face) but hopes are now entertained that it may finally be saved. Another boy here, has had a tooth knocked out, and so it goes!

Miss Frances Beede, the High School assistant from Jefferson has gone home for vacation, as has also Miss Williams, to her Painesville home), and Miss Blanche Angle to Oberlin.

John Schaffner is here from the state University at Columbus spending vacation at the parsonage with his brother, the preacher.

Mr. and Mrs. Hart Mynderse are in the city for a few days at present with their children and their families, Mrs. Henry Merkle and Stewart Mynderse.

The Miscellany Club is to be a purely social affair this week (so far as any program having been prepared by the committee is concerned) and yet—there is sure to be something of a "treat" in store, when two hostesses get together and secretly concoct—something. Mrs. Frost and her brother's wife, Mrs. T. G. Hart are to have the Club on Wednesday.

Mr. A. S. Jackett is spending some weeks with the family of his son, while his wife is in the Southland, and his youngest daughter is in Cleveland at school.

The Mentor stores are doing a fine business this winter, in Christmas goods of all kinds. The Jackett store has been quite raided, until the best of the mechanical toys are already gone. The Whitcomb store is yet well supplied with many things in the line of goods (but not toys), and all sorts of goodies like fruits, nuts, and candies can also be found there. The Lewis store has something the same line, though the dry goods line is not as large—and the Hill grocery and the Loomis grocery carry all sorts of "green groceries" fruit, and "pies 'n things."

Mr. George Bell died suddenly several days ago, and the funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon at his home on Jackson Road. Mr. Bell had been in poor health for more than a year we are told, or since an attack of grippe, which left him with a weak heart. Upon this particular day, he just welcomed his nephew and some other relatives, had visited with them about an hour, when starting to cross the room, he fell—and was dead when they could get him onto a couch. The funeral services were under the care of Dr. Phillips of Painesville, though we have had no opportunity to know, positively.

Next week Tuesday evening the Southland Troupe will be here and the Young Men's class of the Disciple church are planning to canvas the village, in order that as many tickets shall be sold as possible. As the telephone does sometimes play a trick or two, mistakes occasionally occur. For instance, the tickets for this nice concert are to be thirty-five and fifteen cents, the proceeds to swell the building fund, which is still a burden on the people of the Disciple society.

Instead of repeating the "Sky Riders" the Mentor Dramatic Club are now considering some new play—more about which will be given later on (when there is anything more).

Miss Marguerite Johnson has been in Cleveland with relatives for some months past, on a sort of protracted visit, but is at home with her parents for the holidays.

There will be "Watch meetings" in both churches next Friday evening, at the Disciple church the usual monthly social, afterwards the watching of the old year out, by those who care to stay. In the Methodist meeting house a lantern slide illustrated talk on "The Canadian Rockies" which will be sure to be very interesting, a prayer-meeting, and then the watch meeting.

The Disciple Sunday School have their "doings" this week Thursday evening when Earl Blood is to be Santa Claus, and a full program has been made ready by the several teachers and the young people of the church.

The committee for the Christmas exercises at the Methodist meeting house are Miss Nelly King, Miss Ruth Bradway and Miss Dorothy Foss. These three will be very ably assisted by the Superintendent, the Pastor and a number of others. There will be the usual speaking, and singing by the children; the "White Gift" and the new scenery—so that the committee are having hopes that the whole thing will not be quite a fizzle.

Dr. Clark is still very ill and under the daily care of Dr. Ingersoll, so that his many friends are extremely anxious indeed, and the parsonage folks are quite worn out with watching and anxiety.

Still there is trouble with the pesky telephone cable, and Guy Swain may be seen most any cold morning, wielding the pick and shovel trying to dig up the difficulty. Does he ever find it? "Oh yes!" Then he cuts a chunk out of the cable, fits in another piece, and goes picking away at some other point. Our Mentor company have been advised to sell out to the Bell Co. and have done with the whole miserable business. But do we want to give up and own ourselves beaten? Aye, there's the rub!

Mr. Lackey, a young mail clerk who makes his home here, was quite badly hurt last Thursday, when a car backed into the car where he stood at a table sorting letters, and threw him onto something with such force as to break three or four ribs. At first, it was feared that he might have been injured internally, but Dr. Ingersoll has been watching the case very carefully and at last reports Mr. Lackey was comfortable and seemed to be pulling out of it all right.

Many people are sick, but as a rule they are the silly folks who run around bare headed or wear thin clothing or low necks. The other day we heard some one mutter something about "letting 'm die off and make room for folks who have more sense" but if that should be done there wouldn't be so very many of us left.

One of the Cleveland papers has just announced the engagement of Miss Ruth Ingersoll to Mr. Earl Goldman of Cleveland, the date for the marriage not yet announced. Miss Ruth is still claimed as a Mentor girl, having spent most of her life on the farm down here that is now owned by Henry W. Corning in the east end of the village. The good wishes of all the old friends of the family will be sure to go with her—in all her ways.

Dr. Sechrist, the new Dist. Superintendent or in other words Presiding Elder is to be here and preach in the Methodist church Jan. 2nd, and will remain a day or so in order to get somewhat acquainted with his new flock. The ladies have therefore planned a supper in the church for Monday evening, the third, at which the usual charge of twenty-five cents will be made, (still for the basement fund). At this supper and sort of reception as many of the people from the Mountain charge will be down as possible, and a pleasant time is expected, we hear.

Our Mentor folks down in Florida are still all well pleased with their different locations, so far as we have heard, and if more do not come back in the spring with "Florida sand in their shoes" we shall be very much mistaken.

The winter weather still continues raw, sharp, cold, chilly, disagreeable and generally abominable. Some snow on the ground, though not very much—and it is more the wind that people complain about than anything else, for the lowest the mercury has gone is twenty-five above zero. Just a little snow on the new pavement seems to make good sleighing and bobs are quite plentiful, though automobile trucks on wheels are rare.

Somebody passed through here on Saturday that reminded one of "Prairie Schooner" days. The outfit was a house, really a house on wheels, with a stove-pipe sticking through the roof, and a general air of comfort about the establishment, that looked real good. They were headed due east, and jogging along as though it made no difference whether they got there before Sunday, or not.

Miss Mildred Rayl lost a valuable brooch somewhere between her home on Hart St. and the Methodist church on Sunday morning, and anybody who will return it to her, will do a great kindness, for it was a present. The brooch was quite large, and was a cameo with a gold rim.

The hearts of the Ladies Aid have been gladdened by the gift of twenty-five dollars from the Dramatic Club, same being a portion of the proceeds of their last play. The ladies still lack a couple of hundred dollars in order to finish off the basement of the Methodist meeting house, which is badly needed for Sunday School purposes. And when it is done—the different classes will probably scrap to see which shall have it.

HOUSE PASSES EMERGENCY TAX

Resolution Continuing Law for One Year Passed by a Vote of 205 to 169.

REVENUE AND TARIFF BATTLE IS NOW ON

Republicans Painted Dark Picture of People Groaning Under Burden of Taxation Caused by the Underwood Tariff.

Washington, D. C.—The administration Thursday took the first step to repair the shattered government finances when the house by a vote of 205 to 189 passed the resolution continuing for one year the emergency war tax law. A six hour session of the house opened the general revenue and tariff battle between the Republicans and Democrats, which will continue throughout the present session of congress.

Old Arguments Brought Out

All the old tariff and direct taxation arguments that congress has heard for years were dragged out of their hiding places and paraded on the floor. A few new phases of the situation were developed. Republicans painted a black picture of woe and desolation of ruined industry and starving workmen, of a people groaning under the heavy burdens of taxation and blamed it all on the Democratic Underwood tariff. The Democrats said that the Underwood tariff was a just and equitable measure and that it was working well. They blamed the treasury deficit on the disastrous effects of the European war on American commerce and industry.

Majority Leader Kitchin made the principal argument for the resolution. He said that without the extension of the war tax and the continuance of the present duty of one cent a pound on sugar, which automatically disappears May 1, 1916, the treasury would face a ...

PREPARING FOR EGYPTIAN INVASION

Turko-German Troops Are Being Massed in Syria for Expedition.

NEWS BEARS OUT CURRENT RUMORS

Believes Another German Drive Is Imminent on Both Fronts, Paris and the Billion Dollar Gold Reserve the Objective.

London, England.—Massing of the Turko-German forces for the invasion of Egypt has begun. Field Marshal Von Der Goltz has established headquarters at Aleppo, Syria, where the troops are being equipped for the expedition. This news comes in a dispatch from Amsterdam. It says:

Troops Being Equipped

"It is reported that Gen. Von Der Goltz, commander-in-chief of the first Turkish army, has established his headquarters at Aleppo, Syria, where the Turkish and German troops under his command are being equipped for an invasion of Egypt. The force consists partially of the Constantinople army corps, which is officered by Germans. The soldiers are armed with Krupp rifles."

The report from Amsterdam bears out rumors that have been current for some time regarding an attack upon Egypt. German railway officials are now in Constantinople and will proceed at once to Damascus. A railroad is already in course of construction from the latter city to the interior and other lines, it is believed, will be hurriedly built.

The railroads will be used not only to transport the military supplies, but to provide the invading army with an adequate amount of water, which is so necessary.

WOMEN IN THE MAJORITY

More Ladies Employed in Art of Teaching Than Men.

Columbus, O.—Rapid falling off in the number of men teachers in Ohio and a proportionate increase in the number of women teachers, is shown in figures compiled by H. D. Swygert, statistician for the 1915 report of Frank W. Miller, state supervisor of public instruction. The reason ascribed for this is that the men deem other professions and occupations more remunerative.

The number of teachers employed in 1914-1915 was 30,556, as against 30,358 the year previous. The 1913 report shows 29,191, 1912, 28,459, 1911, 28,023 and 1910, 27,841. The new report will show 7,581 men teachers, as against 8,185 the year before and 8,640 in 1910. There were 22,975 women teachers in the state the last school year as against 22,173 the year previous, and 19,201 in 1910. The teachers employed in 1914-1915 were distributed as follows: Cities—Elementary, 10,624; high school, 2,332; total, 12,956. Rural districts—Elementary, 11,641; high school, 857; total, 12,498. Grand total, elementary, 25,833, and high school, 4,723.

WILSON WEDDING A FAMILY AFFAIR

The Ceremony Was Performed in the Parlors of the Galt Home.

SIMPLICITY MARKED THE CEREMONY

Only Relatives of the President and His Bride Were Present; Will Spend Their Honeymoon at Hot Springs, Va.

Washington, D. C.—President Woodrow Wilson and Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt were married Saturday night at 8:30 at the home of the bride, 1308 20th-st. N. W. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Herbert Scott Smith, rector of St. Margaret's Episcopal church, of which the bride is a communicant, assisted by Rev. James H. Taylor, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, which is attended by the Wilson family.

Less Than Thirty Present

The guests who attended the ceremony numbered less than 30, and when congratulations were over and a light wedding supper had been served the president and his bride motored to Alexandria, Va., boarded their special car Superb and departed at 11:40 o'clock for Hot Springs, Va., where the honeymoon will be spent.

The ruse by which the wedding party got away to Alexandria was complete. When the White House automobile pulled away from Mrs. Wilson's house lines of police blocked pursuit in all the adjoining streets. At the Union station the presidential entrance was fully lighted and lines of police were spread all about. Those who were attracted to the railroad station by the show of preparation were disappointed, while the president and Mrs. Wilson were speeding to the station across the river 10 miles away.

After the president and his bride had departed, Secretary Tumulty made ...

WILL TEST POWER OF CHIEF EXECUTIVE

Friendly Suit May Be Brought to Settle Civil Service Question of Approval.

CLAIMS LAW DOES NOT REQUIRE SAME

Supreme Court Is Asked to Pass on the Question as to Whether a Saloon License Can Be Bartered and Sold

Special Columbus Correspondent
Columbus.

BECAUSE a difference of opinion prevails as to whether or not the governor has authority to say whether or not a civil service appointment shall be made, a friendly suit may be filed in supreme court to determine the extent of the power of the chief executive in this respect. The state civil service commission contends that under the new civil service law no appointment becomes effective unless the approval of the governor is obtained. The commission has announced that it will approve no payroll unless the governor approves the appointments. The payroll of the force of the state building and loan inspection department has been held up by the commission because Gov. Willis has not approved the appointments in the department. James A. Devine, the head of the department, was appointed under the previous state administration. Inspector Devine has never asked the governor to approve his appointees, on the theory that the law under which his department was created does not require such approval to be obtained.

Says Contract Was Illegal.

Whether or not a saloon license can be bartered and sold in the open market is a question which the supreme court is asked to pass upon. The case ...

Violated Federal Statute.

Upon his own plea of guilty of selling narcotics in violation of the new federal statute, Dr. J. F. Jones of this city, formerly a member of the state library commission, was sentenced by Judge John E. Sater in federal court to serve a sentence of 60 days in the Franklin county jail and to pay a fine of $300. Dr. Jones was the organizer of the North Side chamber of commerce in this city and for seven years its president. During his term as a member of the state library commission Dr. Jones drew neither salary nor expenses, being probably the only state official who during his term of office never drew a cent from the state treasury. Before his sentence Dr. Jones addressed the court admitting his technical guilt and explaining the fact by interference with his work by the death of his wife, which left him distracted so that he was unfit to keep such records of sales of narcotics as the new law requires. He said he was advised by his lawyers that he could probably have the judgment reversed by carrying the case up, but that it might result in having the law set aside. He was in favor of the law and did not want a good law annulled for his sake. All through his professional career he had labored to reduce the evils of the use of narcotics.

More Appointments.

Another member of the True Democracy league, which supported the present administration at the state election a year ago last November, has been given recognition by Gov. Willis. Benjamin McKinney, who was state oil inspector during the Harmon administration, is the one so recognized. The chief executive has appointed him a member of the board of state charities, a position which while it carries with it much work and responsibility is unsalaried. Friends of Mr. McKinney expected that he would land a place that paid well. He succeeds M. P. Mooney, Democrat, of Cleveland, on the board. The governor has reappointed Douglas Perkins, Republican, of Cleveland, on the board. Dr. W. W. Ryall, Republican, of Youngstown has been appointed to succeed Dr. R. H. Grube, ...

PARTY IN QUANDARY

Republicans Vainly Seek Democratic Weak Point.

Will Find It Hard Indeed to Institute in Congress a Selfish or Vexatious Partisan Policy, for Good Reasons.

There need be no doubt that the Republicans in congress are inclined to make all the trouble they can this winter. A mighty spirit of mischief is upon them. How will it work out? They want to preach calamity, but the wonderful prosperity of the country forbids. They would like to assail the president's foreign policy, but they do not dare array themselves on the side of the pro-Germans who are doing the same. They are tempted to grumble because we did not go to war over Belgium and the Lusitania, but are reluctant thus to enter the pro-British camp.

They are not at all cordial in their support of plans for national defense, and yet with all their carping they will hardly assume responsibility for the defeat of these measures. They are heart and soul in favor of an old-fashioned Mark Hanna tariff, but the condition of foreign commerce does not admit of it and they are still in terror of the Progressives.

Whichever way they turn in pursuit of selfish or vexatious partisan policies they find the roads barricaded with danger signals flying right and left. In a single direction is there an open thoroughfare and that is the one which the administration is pursuing as the champion of national honor, peace and security. It is going to be easy for Republicans this winter to be patriotic, helpful and decent. It is going to be not only difficult but ruinous for them to be anything else.

We have a liking for the Republican party with all its faults and we should grieve to see it wrecked by the false ...

WISDOM AND WIT

Make routine your friend.

A man's freedom consists in binding himself.

He who loses his ideals loses the very bloom of life.

To discipline oneself, to hold oneself responsible, is ever so much better than to be disciplined.

If routine is not forced on us, we must force it on ourselves, or we shall go to pieces.

The main object of school and college is the same: to establish character.

Routine steadies nerves, and, when used intelligently, adds contentment to life.

DANGER SIGNAL

If the fire bell should ring would you run and stop it or go and help to put out the fire? It is much the same way with a cough. A cough is a danger signal as much as a fire bell. You should no more try to suppress it than to stop a fire bell when it is ringing, but should cure the disease that causes the coughing. This can nearly always be done by taking Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Many have used it with the most beneficial results. It is especially valuable for the persistent cough that so often follows a bad cold or an attack of the grip. Mrs. Thomas Beeching, Andrews, Ind., writes: "During the winter my husband takes cold easily and coughs and coughs. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best medicine for breaking up these attacks and you cannot get him to take any other." Obtainable everywhere.

Farmers' and Homemakers' School

Madison is to have one of the Extension Schools, sent out by Ohio State University, during the week of January 10-14th. Farmers and homemakers have the opportunity during the week to study better methods under specialists from the University who will give instruction in Soil Fertility, Farm Crops, Poultry Raising, Horticulture and Home Economics.

All the apparatus and materials for the demonstrations and use by the students in the laboratory work is furnished from the University. An Extension School has been described as a traveling college of agriculture. Each school is moved to a different locality each week. Only one school can be scheduled in a county each year.

The Extension School at Madison was secured through the community work and progressive spirit of the farmers and home makers in that vicinity, who want the opportunity to secure agricultural instruction under the University specialists. The worth of the schools was shown last year by the increased interest in better farming methods in every community. Many more requests were sent to the University for schools this year than could be filled.

Members of the committee in charge of the school have full-week tickets for sale. The fee is only a small part of the expense of holding the school. Keep the date in mind, talk the school over with your neighbor, secure a ticket and arrange to attend the school during the week of January 10-14th. A bulletin describing the courses of instruction and giving the complete schedule of Extension Schools in Ohio will be mailed on request by the Agricultural Extension Service of Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

Failure of Radicalism

For several years past radicalism has been pre-eminent in the national life. The press has been bombarded with all sorts of propaganda pro-this and pro-that. Questions of vital importance to the nation have been relegated to the rear to make room for the fad of some politician or organization, and all kinds of governmental schemes have spread over the country with alarming rapidity. Not all of this propaganda has had the basis of truth. Big business organizations have been known to bring on contests such as prohibition or woman's suffrage in states which had not been prepared through a campaign of education to vote intelligently on the adoption or rejection of such proposed laws. In the meantime the organization which brought about the contest, safe in the seclusion in which the apparently more important movement shrouded them, have been able to secure legislation of tremendous importance to their special interest. But the people are no longer being fooled by the radicals. Voters are going more slowly about the adoption of laws, that tend to upturn their entire economic status. Thus woman's suffrage, which had been adopted wildly by a number of Western states in the first throes of the demand for votes for women, was defeated in New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania. The women of these states claim that they will adopt woman's suffrage eventually. In the meantime they will continue their educational propaganda, and voters will have a chance to study both sides of the question. When the decision is finally made the result will be a lasting and beneficial one. The prohibition question, likewise, was slated for several states this year, but wiser heads prevailed and these states postponed the contest until Ohio passed again on the question, realizing that the Buckeye state held millions of dollars invested in the liquor business and that the decision of the voters of that state would not be made lightly. This is as it should be. Reforms must come slowly in great bodies. No matter how desirable a law may seem, it should not be forced on an ignorant public by fanatics or radicals. It is only through careful study and step-by-step that we can make substantial and lasting progress.

WHOLE WEEK'S CELEBRATION

Descendants of Old Spanish Settlers Observed Christmas With Dinners and Parties.

Among the descendants of the old Spanish settlers we find that they observe a week in the celebration of Christmas. This begins one week before Christmas. In the daytime they have dinners at each other's homes, and in the evenings they give a series of parties at the different houses. In the evening the young folk go to the home of one of their number and knock, and then all begin to sing. Those within the house ask, "Who is there?" and the answer is, "The Virgin Mary and St. Joseph seek lodging in your house." To carry out the Bible story they are at first refused admittance, and then the door is opened wide and they are all given a hearty welcome.

On Christmas eve the old and young all join together and have a big celebration. In a large hall they fix up one side to represent the manger, and here they very solemnly give a little play in which many take part, the characters being Mary and Joseph, the wise men, the shepherds and the angels. This play is very real to them, and they all play their parts with a reverent spirit.

The Leading Nation.

In every age of the world there has been a leading nation, one of a more generous sentiment, whose citizens were willing to stand for the interests of general justice and humanity at the risk of being called by the man of the moment, chimerical and fantastic. Which should be that nation but these states?—Emerson.

Christmas Time

CHRISTMAS TIME! That man must be a misanthrope indeed, in whose breast something like a jovial feeling is not roused—in whose mind some pleasant associations are not awakened—by the recurrence of Christmas. There are people who will tell you that Christmas is not to them what it used to be; that each succeeding Christmas has found some cherished hope or happy prospect of the year before, dimmed or passed away; that the present only serves to remind them of reduced circumstances and straitened incomes—of the feast they once bestowed on hollow friends, and of the cold looks that meet them now, in adversity and misfortune.

Never heed such dismal reminiscences. There are few men who have lived long enough in the world, who cannot call up such thoughts any day in the year. Then do not select the merriest of the three hundred and sixty-five for your doleful recollections, but draw your chair nearer the blazing fire—fill the glass and send round the song—and if your room be smaller than it was a dozen years ago, or if your glass be filled with reeking punch instead of sparkling wine, put a good face on the matter . . .

Look on the merry faces of your children (if you have any) as they sit round the fire. One little seat may be empty; one slight form that gladdened the father's heart, and roused the mother's pride to look upon, may not be there. Dwell not upon the past; think not that one short year ago, the fair child now resolving into dust, sat before you, with the bloom of health upon its cheek, and the gayety of infancy in its joyous eye. Reflect upon your present blessings—of which every man has many—not on your past misfortunes, of which all men have some. Fill your glass again, with a merry face and contented heart. Our life on it, but your Christmas shall be merry and your New Year a happy one.

AGRICULTURAL MAN

Teaches Geauga County Residents Best Methods for Tilling Soil

F. L. Allen, Geauga county farm agent, in the past year has made 342 farm visits, traveled 6,645 miles, made sixty public talks before an aggregate of 5,847 persons and written thirty-eight press articles. Since April 10 he has written 793 letters, received 856 telephone calls and 294 office calls.

"With no office help, it is readily seen how difficult it is to keep in line with the agricultural department's instructions not to spend any considerable portion of time in the office," says Allen.

Under his supervision, here are some of the things that have been accomplished in Geauga county the past year:

Nearly 4,000 tons of ground limestone have been used at a saving of from 75c to $1 a ton over the price that formerly prevailed.

Co-operative buying of fertilizer has kept $5,000 in the pockets of the farmer this year.

One hundred farmers who treated their oats for smut saved $2,000 on the 1,000 acres treated.

Interest in apple orchards has been increased and more apples grown than in former years.

One hundred small areas were seeded to alfalfa and there is an increase in the crop in Geauga county, as well as in the crop of soy beans.

The Geauga county fair board placed $40 for prizes to children in the collection and listing of seeds, banks furnishing the vials for collection.

Plans realized for independent farmers' institutes in every township not served by state institutes.

A farm management survey in the area around Burton, to determine the factors contributing to successful farms. In all 167 farms were studied using labor income as a basis of comparison.

The work established many important truths. A sheet has been prepared for each farm studied comparing in detail the work of that farm with the group averages and with the averages of better farms. The work has resulted in the organization of cow testing associations among farmers.

No Faith in Quinine

The epidemic of grippe that has been sweeping the country has claimed many victims in Painesville. Doctors have been working night and day caring for the afflicted ones and offices, stores and manufacturing plants have been crippled by the absence of employes.

All kinds of "sure cures" have been tried with varying success. Some have found relief by drinking hot lemonade, others by applications of skunk's oil and turpentine, while many stick to the old fashioned whiskey and quinine.

Speaking of the latter remedy calls to mind a little instance that happened up at Mentor. A good old deacon called upon Dr. Ingersoll one day and after a five minute exhibition of plain and fancy coughing, asked the doctor for something to cure his cold.

"Guess I'd better give you a prescription for some quinine and whiskey," said the physician.

"Say Doc," replied the deacon, "I never had a d—— bit of faith in that quinine."

H. A. Rhodes of South St. Clair street will remove his plumbing and hardware business to part of the W. M. Warner store January 1, and Mr. Warner will occupy one of the stores on Main street. Mr. Rhodes has a lease on the St. Clair street property but as yet has not rented it.

Farmers Week

Farmers' week at Ohio State university this year, will be the period from January 31 to February 4. The university is doing this because it finds this one of the very best ways to improve the farming conditions of Ohio. The individual farmer is pretty sure to learn something to his advantage, and what helps him also helps all the rest of us. Farmers' week, besides being of great educational value, offers a vacation in winter when the work on the farm is least pressing.

THIRTY DAYS GRACE

But You Must Pay Your Taxes Not Later Than January 20th

As has been the custom for several years, the time for paying taxes has been extended by the county officials until January 20, giving thirty days of grace.

According to Treasurer E. M. Orcutt tax money is coming in even more freely than it has in years gone by. There are some "kickers" of course—there always is—no matter what the tax rate, but the majority walk up and settle without a murmur.

Mentor Special District, with about the lowest tax rate of any district in the state, has a few residents who grumble about their heavy tax burdens, but needless to say these people get very little sympathy from the county officials.

LLOYD WYMAN, J. P.

Will Resign Office for a Well Earned Rest. Has Performed 141 Wedding Ceremonies

Justice Lloyd Wyman, one of the oldest officials in the county, expects to resign his position shortly after the first of the year and take a well-earned rest.

For nearly fourteen years Justice Wyman has dispensed justice tempered with mercy and his court has been one of the busiest in Lake county. Even during the past year, in spite of all efforts to throw off the cares of office, 101 criminal cases and 110 civil actions have been filed in Justice Wyman's court. During the past few weeks Justice Wyman has refused to take on any new work and will tender his resignation as soon as matters now in court can be cleaned up.

Justice Wyman was sixty years of age when he first took office and is seventy-four at the time of his retirement. During his tenure of office he has officiated at 141 wedding ceremonies.

MAY EAT HORSE

The Horse Never Has Tuberculosis, So Why Not?

Sale of horse meat for food will be permitted in New York city after January 1, the board of health announced yesterday. Commenting on the revocation of the section of the sanitary code which prohibited the use of horse flesh, Commissioner Emerson said that, while the health department does not exactly recommend it, no harm can be seen in its use.

"The horse never has tuberculosis and almost never communicates a malignant disease to human beings," he said. "Hereafter old horses, instead of being sold for their bone, which is worth little or nothing, will be fattened and disposed of for meat."

$715,000 COLLECTED IN HALF AN HOUR

Dramatic Scenes at a Meeting for Relief of Jews in War Zones.

MONEY AND JEWELRY THROWN ON STAGE

Four Donations of $100,000 Each and Two of $50,000 Were Received; Also Two Wicker Baskets Filled With Jewelry.

New York City.—One of the most intensely dramatic scenes ever enacted in New York occurred Tuesday night at a meeting of the American Jewish relief committee at Carnegie hall. Within the short space of half an hour the sum of $715,000 was collected to alleviate the suffering of war stricken Jews. Hysterical women and weeping men, after contributing their last cent, threw their jewelry on the stage.

Four anonymous donations of $100,000 each were announced from the audience. Two others of $50,000 were announced and scores of lesser donations poured in. Four huge piles of envelopes filled with checks and bills occupied the front of the stage. There were two large wicker baskets filled to the top with rings, watches, fobs and other jewelry.

The Guggenheim family, Jacob Schiff, Nathan Straus and Julius Rosenwald, it was rumored among the audience, gave the four checks for $100,000 each. The donors were announced simply as anonymous. The sum of $715,000 was reached at midnight. This amount included only the larger donations.

The remarkable contribution came after an appeal made by Dr. J. L. Magnes. He is connected with the treasurer's office of the relief committee. He spoke for half an hour.

Dr. Magnes drew a vivid picture of the suffering among the Jews in the war theaters of Europe. With remarkable feeling and sympathy he transported his audience to another land, until every person actually visualized the terrible spectre which follows in the wake of the war god. Women began to sob. Men stood up and cried out in anguish. For a time the noise of the weeping was so loud that the voice of the speaker was drowned.

And then in eloquent words Dr. Magnes told of the wonderful charity which similar appeals had brought forth in other cities. There was a catch in his voice as he asked his audience to come forth and show similar spirit.

Richly clad women knelt shoulder to shoulder with push-cart peddlers. Caste and distinction was forgotten. The stoutest hearts were moved. Men fought to reach the stage so that they could empty their pockets. Yellow backed currency, silver and copper money covered the stage within a few minutes to the depth of three inches. And amid it all Dr. Magnes continued his appeal. He did not lose the grip which he had on his audience for one second. He worked them into a veritable frenzy.

Throws Self Under Train.

Newark, O.—An unidentified man threw himself under the wheels of a locomotive Monday night and received injuries which later resulted in his death. From the tattooing on his body and the fact that he wore the Victoria cross of honor on his breast, it is surmised that he was one time, and probably recently, a soldier of the British army or a member of the navy.

Must Unlock Doors.

St. Clairsville, O.—Deputy State Fire Marshal A. M. Major Tuesday warned Belmont county school officials that schoolhouse doors must be left unlocked during school hours. Major said he found one schoolhouse where the main entrance and two exits were locked. Major said the superintendent told him the children made too much noise in the main entrance.

Seeks to Indict Doctor.

Springfield, Ill.—Attorney General Lucey in a letter to Maclay Hoyne, state's attorney of Cook county, asks that Dr. Harry J. Haiselden, who allowed the defective Bollinger baby to die in the German-American hospital in Chicago Nov. 17, be brought before the grand jury for investigation and indictment if he is amenable to the criminal laws of the state.

Goes for Sled, is Killed.

Toledo, O.—"I'll get you a real sled for Christmas," said Charles Inge to his son Freeman, 14. A few minutes later the father saw his child fatally crushed in an elevator. The dying boy was taken to St. Vincent's hospital, where he died a few minutes after his arrival. The accident occurred in the store of the Star Hardware & Supply Co.

Navy Should Be Large.

Washington, D. C.—"The navy of the United States should ultimately be equal to the most powerful maintained by any other nation of the world," is the opinion of the general board, whose annual report, signed by Admiral George Dewey, was made public today. The general board declares that the United States should be the peer of any naval power within 10 years.

The general board expresses renewed faith in the battleship as against the submarine.

181,310 Autos in State.

Columbus, O.—Showing an increase of nearly 50 per cent, the number of automobiles owned in Ohio in 1915 jumped to 181,310 from the previous year's number, 122,504, according to figures given out by H. W. Walker, state automobile registrar. Ohio ranks as the second state in the country in the number of automobiles. New York alone surpasses it. Of the counties Cuyahoga ranks first with 26,719, Hamilton second with 11,995, Franklin third with 9,287 and Lucas fourth with 8,022.

SURVIVOR OF ANCONA DISASTER ARRIVES

Says Over Forty Shots Were Fired by Submarine at Ship, Some After Lifeboats Had Been Lowered.

New York City.—Giovanni De Marco, a 15-year-old Italian sailor, is the first survivor of the Ancona to reach this country. He arrived Wednesday in the crew of the Fabre liner Patria.

He stated that 40 shots were fired at the Ancona by the Austrian submarine and that more shots were fired at the lifeboats after they had been loaded with passengers and lowered into the water. A woman was killed instantly in the boat in which De Marco escaped and a man sitting beside her had his hand blown off.

"I was below decks when the submarine was first sighted," said De Marco. "I heard the shouts of the passengers and rushed on deck. The submarine was then about two miles away and had not fired a shot. The engines had been stopped and the Ancona was gradually slowing down and was almost at a standstill when a shot from the submarine struck the wireless and put it out of commission.

"That started the excitement. While there was no actual panic, both passengers and sailors were nervous, but the boats were lowered while the firing went on, and I figured there were at least 40 shots fired before the last boatload was over the side. I escaped in the last small boat in which were four women and one man. As we rowed away shots scattered near us and a piece of shell struck a woman in the boat and killed her instantly. There was a child in the water that I was able to save and later I found its mother, to whom I gave it."

The Patria came from Naples and Palermo and touched at Lisbon. Along the coast of the Mediterranean she clung to the African side with her boats swung out.

AN IMPORTANT RULING

ILLINOIS COURT HOLDS FEDERAL RESERVE BANKS CANNOT ACT AS TRUSTEES.

Springfield, Ill.—An opinion of nation wide importance relative to one of the provisions of the federal reserve act was rendered Wednesday by the Illinois supreme court in the case of the First National Bank of Joliet vs. State Auditor James J. Brady. In the court's opinion, the first to be rendered in the United States, the validity of the section of the federal reserve act in question, national banks, so far as the state is concerned, are not qualified to act as trustees, administrators and registrars of stocks and bonds. The Joliet bank, after becoming a federal reserve bank applied to the state auditor for a permit to do a trust business. This permit was refused, whereupon the bank instituted mandamus proceedings to compel the issuance of the permit.

In the opinion of the supreme court the attempt of congress to confer upon national banks authority to act as trustee, executor, administrator, etc., is in contravention of the laws of the state.

KOENIG MAY GIVE SECRETS OF PLOTS

Has Already Made a Partial Confession to Government Officials.

HOPES TO BE GRANTED IMMUNITY

Believed Steamship Men, Financiers and Three or More Diplomats Were Directing the Activities of Koenig and Partners.

New York City.—Paul Koenig, whose figure is said to shadow the men higher up in the gigantic spy plots, has made overtures to government officials looking toward a confession. This was the startling information that came Thursday night from an official source. The informant stated that the ostensible chief of the German secret service in New York has already made a partial confession to representatives of the department of justice.

Refuse to Discuss Case.

Federal officials in New York refused to discuss the apparent change of front by Koenig. It was definitely established, however, that Koenig was in telephone communication with the office of Capt. William M. Offley.

The rumor of a confession arose an hour after Koenig and two of his alleged agents, Richard Leyendecker and Edmund Justice, were arraigned before Federal Judge Mayer to plead to two indictments returned by the grand jury.

Two indictments, each with five counts—were found against Koenig and one indictment against each of the others. Koenig was told that he faces a maximum penalty of 30 years in prison and a fine of $30,000. This is said to have caused him to seriously consider making a full statement that would do much toward winning him immunity.

The federal authorities believe that Koenig was as much a dummy as Leyendecker and Justice. They are certain that he can tear aside the veil of mystery that has surrounded the men who directed his activities. These include, the authorities believe, at least two millionaire steamship men, several financiers and three or more diplomats high in the service of a foreign power.

Has Given Valuable Information.

"Koenig has given us some information that has proven of value," said a United States official. "But he has not revealed a tithe of the knowledge that we know is his. He can give us legal evidence against the big men in the plots. He can reveal the hub of foreign propaganda here. He can tell us the identities of the men to whom he reported. Particularly he is able to tell us to whom he turned over valuable documents which he took to Washington periodically."

The three alleged German agents were indicted Thursday for violating section 13 of the United States criminal code by planning, preparing and setting on foot a military expedition against the Dominion of Canada.

A fine of $1,000 and imprisonment for three years is the penalty upon each count. Leyendecker and Justice may be given 15 years in the federal penitentiary and forced to pay a fine of $15,000 each.

JAP LINER TORPEDOED IN THE MEDITERRANEAN

None of the Passengers or Crew Were Lost or Injured; One American Aboard Causes Worry to U. S. Officials.

London, Eng.—The new Japanese liner Yasaka Maru, which was sunk in the eastern Mediterranean Tuesday by a submarine while the steamer was on her way from London to Japan, with 120 passengers and a crew of 160 aboard, was sent to the bottom without warning, according to a report received from Port Said from the agents of the owners.

All of those on board the ship, including one American passenger, W. J. Leigh, were saved. The nationality of the submarine is not mentioned by the agents and previous reports referred to the sinking of the ship as done by either an Austrian or a German submarine.

Washington, Dec. 24.—State department officials are gravely concerned over the report that an American citizen was aboard the Japanese liner Yasaka Maru, sunk by a submarine in the Mediterranean Tuesday. No official advices of the sinking of the vessel have been received here. Officials admitted that if the report is true that the vessel was torpedoed without warning by a submarine flying the German flag it may create a delicate situation between this country and Germany again.

Get Their Votes Back.

Columbus, O.—Through lapse of five years, the term for which they were disfranchised, the right of suffrage has been automatically restored during December to about 2,000 male residents of Adams county, Ohio, according to calculations made by state officials.

The development that elections in Adams county for years had been corrupt came in 1910 when wholesale indictments were returned in the common pleas court presided over by Judge A. Z. Blair at West Union.

To Share in Profits.

Chicago, Ill.—The International Harvester Co. announced a plan Thursday to assist its 35,000 employes to become stockholders and sharers in the company profits.

Under the plan, which became effective at once, all employes will have an opportunity to purchase profit-sharing certificates in the company, payments for which will be made in monthly installments from their salaries. These certificates, it is provided, may be converted into stock at $3 below the market value.

GERMANS FAIL TO BREAK BRITISH LINE

Eight Thousand Frozen Bodies Are Piled Up Before the Defensive Position.

ATTACK PRELUDE TO A GREATER DRIVE

Nowhere Will French Be Surprised, as They Are on Guard, Says Paris Paper; No Actions Reported on Greek Front.

London, England.—Despite the aid of vast clouds of poisonous gases, the desperate Teuton offensive, which has been striving to blast its way for two days through the British lines between Ypres and Armentieres has failed.

Thousands of Frozen Bodies.

Eight thousand frozen bodies of Germans lie heaped up before the British positions, says the war correspondent of La Liberte of Paris.

Where the British artillery and machine guns failed completely to break the oncoming human waves, the assailants were driven back with the bayonet. Not an inch of ground was gained, the allies declare.

The attack is thought to have been the prelude to an offensive or for the purpose of testing the strength of the English front.

"The hostilities on the French front, which thus far have consisted only of cannonades, may take on a more serious form," says the Temps in a military review. "The wind is blowing from the east, which will permit the enemy to use asphyxiating gas. It is then the most elementary prudence for use to be ready with masks and man the batteries. Nowhere will the French be surprised by an attack as we are on guard along the entire front."

No News From Balkan Theater.

In the Balkan theater no further news is available regarding the threatened central powers' drive toward Saloniki.

The Greek government has taken cognizance of the recent landing of Italian troops near Avlona, Albania, and in a friendly spirit directed the Greek minister at Rome to request information upon the extent and purpose of the Italian enterprise," says the Athens correspondent of the Havas agency. He continues:

"In answer the Italian government gave favorable assurance and requested the co-operation of Greece in conducting the work to a successful conclusion. The negotiations continue, the two governments being agreed that Greek rights in this region should be safeguarded."

A special dispatch from Sofia says the Overseas News agency of Berlin reports of an attempt to land at Kavala, European Turkey, of Anglo-French troops from Gallipoli. The Greek commander at Kavala protested against this.

The Athens correspondent of the Havas agency sends out the following:

"The Serbian minister of war arrived Saturday and was received Sunday by the premier and the Greek minister of war. A number of Serbian deputies also arrived and held a meeting at which it was decided to ask the Grecian government where the Serbian parliament could reopen."

FEAR MOB VIOLENCE

MARION OFFICIALS GUARD MAN CHARGED WITH ATTACKING SIX-YEAR-OLD CHILD.

Marion, O.—Fearing mob violence, police are taking every precaution to protect Joseph Miller, 30, a farm hand, arrested Sunday and held to the grand jury under $20,000 bond for an alleged attack on six-year-old Bessie Lore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lore of Marion.

When a driverless livery house came to its barn Saturday night the child was found in a semi-unconscious condition and nearly frozen in the light robes of the buggy. Police had been searching for her, the parents reporting her missing. Miller came here from Butler, Pa., and is a degenerate, the police say. He claims he was drunk.

Teachers Will Meet Wednesday.

Columbus, O.—Nearly 3,000 teachers from all parts of the state will be in Columbus Wednesday, Thursday and Friday to attend the annual meeting of the Ohio Teachers' association. A large variety of school problems will be discussed. Several educators of national prominence will speak. Among these will be Dr. Warren H. Wilson, head of the department of rural education at Columbia university, Dr. H. Turner, editor of the School Arts Magazine, Boston, and Dr. J. A. Duffer, University of Illinois.

To Bar Undesirables.

Washington, D. C.—Need of more medical inspectors to guard against a flood of undesirable aliens, who probably will come in the United States after the war, was urged in the annual report of Commissioner General of Immigration A. Caminetti.

The commissioner also urges the installation of a better signal service along the coast to prevent the smuggling of aliens into this country. An auto patrol along the Canadian and Mexican borders to serve the same end is also desired.

Airmen Losses Heavy.

New York City.—William Thaw, Norman Prince and Elliott C. Cowdin, American aviators who have been serving with the French army since the war began, arrived here Thursday on the steamship Rotterdam on leave of absence to spend Christmas with relatives. They said approximately 47 per cent of the aviators who have heretofore enlisted have been lost either through death, by capture or by wounds. As fast as the men drop out, however, there are many anxious and willing to take their places.

HOLDS SUBMARINE CHIEF RESPONSIBLE

U. S. Contends Commander Violated Law of Nations When He Torpedoed Ancona.

SENDS NOTE TO AUSTRIAN OFFICIAL

Says Report Admits That Vessel Was Fired On After Engines Had Been Stopped and When Passengers Were Still Aboard.

Washington, Dec. 22.—"The Secretary of State to Ambassador Penfield.

"Department of State, Washington, December 19, 1915.

"You are instructed to address a note to the Austro-Hungarian minister of foreign affairs, textually as follows:

"'The government of the United States has received the note of your excellency relative to the sinking of the Ancona, which was delivered at Vienna on December 15, 1915, and transmitted to Washington, and has given the note immediate and careful consideration.

"'On November 15, 1915, Baron Zwiedenek, the charge d'affaires of the imperial and royal government at Washington, transmitted to the department of state a report of the Austro-Hungarian admiralty with regard to the sinking of the steamship Ancona, in which it was admitted that the vessel was torpedoed after her engines had been stopped and when passengers were still on board.

Holds Commander Responsible.

"'This admission alone is, in the view of the government of the United State, sufficient to fix upon the commander of the submarine which fired the torpedo the responsibility for having willfully violated the recognized law of nations and entirely disregarded those humane principles which every belligerent should observe in the conduct of war at sea. In view of these admitted circumstances, the government of the United States feels justified in holding that the details of the sinking of the Ancona, the weight and character of the additional testimony corroborating the admiralty's report, and the number of Americans killed or injured are in no way essential matters of discussion. The culpability of the commander is in any case established, and the undisputed fact is that citizens of the United States were killed, injured or put in jeopardy by his lawless act.

Principles of Humanity Violated.

"'The rules of international law and the principles of humanity which were thus wilfully violated by the commander of the submarine, have been so long and so universally recognized, and are so manifest from the standpoint of right and justice that the government of the United States does not feel called upon to debate them and does not understand that the imperial and royal government questions or disputes them.

"'The government of the United States therefore finds no other course open to it but to hold the imperial and royal government responsible for the act of its naval commander, and to renew the definite but respectful demands made in its communication of the sixth of December, 1915. It sincerely hopes that the foregoing statement of its position will enable the imperial and royal government to perceive the justice of those demands and to comply with them in the same spirit of frankness and with the same concern for the good relations now existing between the United States and Austria-Hungary which prompted the government of the United States to make them.

"LANSING."

CHINESE START REVOLT

FIVE PROVINCES SECEDE AND FUNDS FOR REVOLUTION ARE PLEDGED

San Francisco, Cal.—Tong King Chong, president of the Chinese Republic association, has just received a cablegram from Shanghai, China, which said five Chinese provinces had declared their independence of the rule of Yuan Shi Kai.

The provinces concerned in the revolution were, according to the cablegram, Kwangtung, Kiangsi, Yuannang, Szchuen and Kweichau.

Mr. Tong said he believed the action of the five provinces would be followed by similar declarations from all parts of China.

He said the Chinese in America were strongly opposed to the return of China to the monarchical form of government. Large sums, he said, had been pledged by California Chinese to finance a general revolution.

Complete Rural Credits Bill.

Washington.—A rural credits bill to be introduced in both houses of congress after the holidays has been virtually completed by the special joint committee created by the last congress for report at this session. Only a few details remain to be decided. The measure provides for a system of co-operative local associations, federated with regional land banks, which banks would have the power to issue bonds based on land mortgages of local association. The land banks would be supervised by the government.

CAPT. WILLIAM S. SMITH

Capt. William S. Smith, U. S. N., is holding down a new job created by Secretary of the Navy Daniels. He has been given the task of sorting the wheat from the chaff in the thousands of suggestions for naval inventions that have poured in since the outbreak of the European war turned the attention of inventors to warlike instruments. The suggestions O. K.'d by Capt. Smith will be turned over to the Edison advisory board for investigation and final approval.

SIX PEOPLE KILLED AND MANY INJURED

A 'Freak' Storm Sweeps Over New York and Vicinity, Doing a Great Deal of Damage to Property.

New York City.—Six persons were killed and a score injured by the wind that swept Greater New York Sunday morning. The weather bureau men call it a "freak" storm. They say that a low barometric area from Virginia and a cold wave from the Lake Ontario region met over New York bay.

Every degree and species of storm resulted. It blew a 90-mile gale. In turn it rained, sleeted, hailed and snowed. To make the program complete a brief but furious electrical storm broke at 6:20 a. m. Tremendous thunderings and the vivid chain lightning of a tropical outbreak followed.

The storm's great fury came in the last hour. The gale blew 90 miles an hour. Then it died and at noon the wind had fallen to 65 miles an hour, and then to 10 miles in the afternoon. The precipitation of snow was less than three inches.

During the fury of the early morning gale windows were broken, ships were swept ashore, trolley cars were blown backward, signs were hurled miles away and motor cars were overturned. On Riverside-dr the great clifflike apartment houses rocked as though mined.

The deaths in the city resulting from the gale all occurred in the morning while the blinding snow storm was at its height. A fireman was fatally injured while responding to an alarm. A woman was run over by a street car.

Another woman collapsed and died in the street while battling against the gale on her way to church. Scores of persons were more or less seriously injured.

A flagman at Tottenville, Staten Island, was blown in front of a train and killed instantly. A bicyclist riding in a heavy rainstorm ran into an automobile at Mineola and was fatally injured. His wife, who was riding with him, also suffered injuries from which she may die.

An aged man fell on an icy pavement in Newark and died of a fractured skull on his way to a hospital.

A crowded tenement house in Passaic, N. J., was unroofed, as was a church in Brooklyn just before the morning service began.

Would Buy the Lines.

Columbus, O.—The Socialists of Columbus are preparing petitions for circulation to buy the property of the Columbus Street Railway Co., anticipating that the city and the company will not be able to agree on the solution of the transfer system, which is about to undergo a general revision. The company claims that the transfer privileges are now abused, people manipulating them so that they get virtually two rides for one fare.

Robbers Make a Good Haul.

East Orange, N. J.—The home of Clifford Eagle and his bride of three weeks was robbed Christmas night of jewels worth $30,000.

Vessel Fire a Mystery.

New York City.—Fire, said by the police to have been of suspicious origin, was discovered Sunday aboard the steamer Inchmoor of Newcastle, Eng., while she was loading with sugar at the foot of Warren-st, Brooklyn. The loss will be considerable. The fire seemed to be burning in a dozen places at once in one hold. Firemen fought the flames an hour before they were extinguished.

The Inchmoor was to have sailed Tuesday for British ports with 3,400 tons of sugar.

Takes Drink of Poison.

Lima, O.—"I just want to see what this will do to me," said Louis Annesser, 27, of Wapakoneta, in the Thompson drug store Sunday night. He took a drink out of a bottle labeled "Indian hemp," which stood on the counter. Clerks, knowing the danger of the poison, gave him emetics and 10 minutes later he was in a hospital.

Before he became unconscious he said: "Well, I guess I am all right." Physicians in attendance say that he cannot recover.

SHREWD UNCLE JOE

Cannon Still Poses as Treasury Watchdog.

With the Administration, of Course, in the Matter of the Country's Preparedness, Only There Is a String to His Vote.

The Old Guard is mostly all gone, but it would be a pity to forget what was at all events a picturesque group. Of them all, who was more picturesque than Uncle Joe? But he was more than picturesque, and his first interview upon his return to Washington for his twentieth congress shows him still the watchdog of the treasury, with a penchant for apt quotations. While presidents and ex-presidents are citing Scripture the speaker displays his versatility by turning to Tacitus for an observation that is right to the point: "The peace of nations cannot be secured without arms, nor arms without pay, nor pay without taxes." How fortunate that the economy-loving Democrats (when the Republicans are in) have to lay the taxes for preparedness! Uncle Joe has a note of commiseration in his voice as he contemplates their difficulties. His vote is at their disposal—patriotism before partisanship for Danville—only there is the distressing disagreement between McAdoo and Kitchin as to the condition of the treasury, which is quite beyond his powers of composing. There was a time, to be sure, when congress voted $50,000,000 for defense in a lump, and the treasury stood it without a quiver, but that was long ago. McKinley was in the White House, and McKinley was a Republican, wasn't he? That explains a lot.

PROSPERITY AFTER THE WAR

Country's Interests Will Be Safeguarded With a Democratic Administration in Power.

The Republican party will find it difficult to create any special dissatisfaction with the Democratic tariff law. It has not encouraged such a volume of imports as could possibly affect the American manufacturer and laborer, and there is no prospect of any flood of imports from Europe such as the campaign prophets are predicting. For some time after peace Europe will have to feel its way. It will have to count its money, estimate its debts, take note of its remaining available energy and survey the area of ruin that it will have to rebuild through years of toil and sorrow.

There will be home problems for immediate consideration too complex and vital to enable it to pitch in to flood the markets of the world with pauper-made products.

The primacy of the United States after the war will not be hard to maintain if the people will only keep their heads. And retaining in power the present administration will be the first and most essential manifestation of the ability to keep their heads.—Houston Post.

Safer in Democratic Hands.

The Monroe doctrine is safe so long as we have a Democratic administration. That has been tested. It had almost lapsed into innocuous desuetude—at least in the public thought—until it was vigorously reasserted by the first Democratic president elected and seated since the Civil war—Grover Cleveland. It remained to Woodrow Wilson to emphasize the doctrine in its largest and most potent reaches in his third annual address to congress. Doubtless it would be safe under Republican administration, but in view of the fact that it has found its chief support and emphasis under Democratic presidents, the country feels that the doctrine is safer when foreign complications arise if a Democrat is in the White House.

Lo, the Poor Steel Trust.

The steel trust has unfilled orders for 7,189,489 tons of metal. This is an increase in advance orders of 1,024,037 tons during the month of November.

It will be pretty hard for the trust to persuade the American people that it needs "protection" under such circumstances. The good old tariff graft begging sounds rather unconvincing these days.

In "Has-Been Class" at Last.

Colonel Roosevelt is getting old. Five years ago no mere war could have kept him so constantly off the front pages.—Charleston News and Courier.

Not Good for Democrats.

Col. T. R. thinks there ought not to be even a second cup of coffee—for a Democrat.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Bad Outlook for Republicans.

The next tariff issue is going to be somewhat different than it has been in the past, so that the Republicans will not be able to say that a Democratic tariff has injured American industry. They will simply have to assert that unless the schedules are raised there will be a flood of cheap goods from Europe after the war to depress American trade and lower American wages. And they will have to urge these dire prophecies with American industry working right along at a high tide of prosperity.

People's Opportunity.

"The people are going to give the Republican party another trial next year," says Congressman McKinley. If they do, the jury will find it guilty and sentence it to death.

Doesn't Seem Right to Him.

A Republican railroad magnate says the country has prosperity in spite of the Democratic party. It is hard for the average old sinner of Republicanism to have no hard times to blame upon the Lord's own.—Houston Post.

SENATORIAL RACE IS ALREADY BEGUN

Harry M. Daughtery Has Opened Quarters in Columbus.

MYRON T. HERRICK TO BE NEXT ENTRANT

While Charles F. Dick Will Get in the Race in the Spring; Output of Ohio Coal Reduced Over 18,000,000 Tons.

Special Columbus Correspondent.
Columbus.

THE campaign for United States senatorial honors in Ohio was started when Harry M. Daugherty of Columbus opened his headquarters here and established himself in charge to direct the campaign he hopes will land him the Republican nomination and election. He has four rooms in the Wyandotte building for handling prospective senatorial matters and will install his office force in a few days. His active campaign work will start at once after the holidays, although he has done and will continue to do a great deal of work through the holiday season. The first caller on Mr. Daugherty at the new headquarters was former Congressman J. Warren Keifer of Springfield, who spent an hour with the prospective senator discussing senatorial and other political matters. There were numerous other callers during the day. Coincident with the opening of the Daugherty headquarters word reached Columbus that former Ambassador Myron T. Herrick of Cleveland had practically determined to enter the senatorial race and would be in the campaign actively within a short time. One of the Herrick field workers here declared that the public demand for Mr. Herrick was such that he would be unable to withstand it and could not do so if he wanted to. The information came here this week that former Senator Charles F. W. Dick of Akron had decided to enter the race and would come in during the spring.

Coal Output Falls Off.

Ohio's coal production in 1914 was reduced to 18,786,407 tons, nearly one half that of 1913, owing to the strike of the miners in April, 1914, and subsequent idleness, according to a report made public here Wednesday by the state industrial commission. The number of miners employed was 46,965 and the average pay of each for the year was only $457. Ohio's production was 4.4 per cent of the total bituminous coal output of the United States last year, although in 1912 it was 7.6 per cent, the report declares. Pick miners worked an average of 150 days in the year and loaders only 101 days.

Followed Instructions.

Folks sometimes take things too literally. Here's an example. A Fostoria man sent $5 to State Registrar W. H. Walker for a new automobile license. He gave some information about his car but not enough to enable the registrar to fill out an application blank for his license, and so the registrar replied sending a blank and advising that in returning it the serial number of the car, which is put on by the manufacturer, should be given. The instructions were slightly misunderstood. Instead of entering on the blank the serial number, the owner pried off the plate on which the number was inscribed and sent it along to the registrar with the application. Mr. Walker returned the plate and told the sender that the department wanted only to know what the number was and did not wish the plate at all.

File Bills for Services.

C. A. Reid of Washington C. H. and J. Howard Secrest of Columbus Wednesday filed bills for $1,400 which they assert is due for attorney services for gathering evidence against Syron M. Clendening, member of the state liquor licensing board, and a number of county board members, whose removal was sought by Gov. Willis because of their interest in the referendum on the McDermott license law. Auditor Donahey said he would take some time to consider whether payment should be made, inasmuch as the supreme court did not sustain the governor's contentions that the licensing officials should be removed.

Will Not Be a Candidate.

Former Lieut. Gov. W. A. Greenlund declared with emphasis at the governor's office that he would not be a candidate for another term. This announcement will be interesting to others who have aspirations for the Democratic nomination for that office. Greenlund was defeated for re-election a year ago last November, losing out in the Republican landslide which retired most of the Democratic state officials then. So far there has been but one candidate to announce himself for the nomination, which Greenlund voluntarily relinquishes, J. H. Clifton of Columbus, who is assistant state school superintendent.

To Locate a Central Building.

O. D. McGill of Chicago, who is the international field secretary of the Y. M. C. A., and C. H. Lichty of Ashland, O., who is the Ohio secretary, are here making a survey for use in connection with a proposition to locate here a central Y. M. C. A. building separate and apart from the Columbus building, and for the general use of the organization in the east Mississippi valley. Such a building as is contemplated will probably cost a half million dollars or more. Columbus may not get it, but some central position in the area will probably be chosen.

No Special Privileges.

So much trouble ensued on Christmas last year from the granting of special privileges to prisoners in the penitentiary on Christmas day that Warden Thomas has announced that no visitors will be received on that day nor will there be any special baskets of foods, etc., passed in to the prisoners.

Only 3,000 Are Idle.

John Moore, president of the Ohio Miners, said that there were only about three thousand idle miners in Ohio now.

To Cut Down Cost.

Almost since time began Ohio sheriffs have been getting a nice "rakeoff" from the boarding of prisoners. They are allowed from 45 to 75 cents a day for each prisoner in their care. Now, the actual cost of keeping the prisoners is away below 45 cents, and the sheriffs have been pocketing the difference between the cost and what they are allowed to collect for feeding them. A suit has been filed in supreme court to cut off this source of revenue for the sheriffs. The contention is made in the suit that sheriffs can only draw from the public treasury the amount actually needed for the feeding of the prisoners, and that they are doing something unlawful when they stick down in their pockets anything in excess of what it costs for the keep of their charges. It only costs about 13 cents a day to feed each prisoner at the penitentiary. In the larger counties the allowance is 45 cents a day and in many of the smaller counties it is 75 cents.

Praises Administration Board.

In a report just filed with Gov. Willis, Auditor of State Donahey says that the 18 state institutions under the control of the state board of administration are well managed and that politics no longer enters into such management. This is the first examination ever made of these institutions. While a few practices were found which are criticized, in the main the work of the administration board is praised. The report says that citizens should remember that the control and administration of Ohio's benevolent, correctional and penal institutions is the biggest problem of state government.

Must Keep Record of Mileage.

Not content with a recently adopted plan of preventing city officials and employes to whom municipal automobiles are entrusted for public use, by which all such machines are to be painted red and marked plainly "municipal," the city council has another ordinance which will require all such city officials and employes to keep records of their mileage traveled and report it regularly. The object is to prevent "joy riding" at city expense.

Discard 'Twilight Sleep.'

At the annual meeting of the Columbus Academy of Medicine held Monday night it developed that the practice of "twilight sleep" that was in such vogue among physicians has been practically discarded by Columbus physicians. Reports were called for from the members, which include practically all the physicians practicing here, and if they all reported truly none of them are using the new method at all. Their reasons for not using it were not brought out.

Dry Amendment to Constitution.

Ohio dry leaders have just received from Washington advance copies of the proposed amendment to the federal constitution which congress will be asked to submit to the legislative bodies of the various states for ratification. The exact text of the proposed amendment follows: "Section 1. The sale, manufacture for sale, transportation for sale and importation of intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes in the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof and exportation thereof are hereby prohibited. Section 2. The congress of the United States shall have power independently or concurrently to enforce this article by all needful legislation." The next Ohio legislature will be called upon to act upon this amendment if congress submits it to the various states for ratification.

Eighty-six More Lawyers.

Harvard university nosed Western Reserve university, Cleveland, out of first honors at the recent state bar examination. For some years the Forest City university has been taking first place most of the time. James McKay of Youngstown, who obtained the highest grade at the examination just held, is a Harvard man. He won a grade of 92.1. Out of a class of 118 applicants 86 passed. They will become attorneys when sworn in by Chief Justice Hugh L. Nichols of the supreme court in Columbus Tuesday morning, Jan. 4. There were two women in the class who passed, Miss Esther Antin and Miss Margaret H. Cummins, both of Toledo.

Must Pay Back Fees.

The state industrial commission has discovered that the owners of a large number of boilers in the state that properly comes within the range of the boiler inspection law have been evading the law for the last two years, and they have issued orders to the state inspector, I. C. Callery, to go after these persons and collect from them the fees that they should have paid.

Child Killed by Warts.

Warts are usually a harmless physical ailment, but a fatal case was reported in Columbus, the victim being the two and a half year old daughter of Mrs. L. K. Spencer. The warts in this case grew in the child's throat and had been giving trouble for some time. Her mother intended to have them removed, but a severe cold settled in the throat and the inflammation caused swollen parts, which, with the warts, closed the air passages and suffocated the little girl.

Day Gets the Appointment.

Louis M. Day, the Chillicothe lawyer, selected by Gov. Willis to succeed O. H. Hughes of Hillsboro as the Democratic member of the Ohio public utilities commission, served in the legislature with Lawrence K. Langdon of Lebanon, one of the two Republican commissioners. Day served two terms in the house from Ross county and Langdon served two terms from Warren county. Day was a member of the committee appointed by the general assembly to probe the high cost of living. It was the first probe committee of the kind to be appointed.

Asks for Resignations.

Gov. Willis has asked State Building and Loan Inspector James Devine and his deputies to resign. Devine has refused to comply and the deputies will hold a meeting in Columbus to decide what they will do about the matter. These officials were appointed under a former state administration and they contend they are under the protection of civil service and so cannot be removed except for inefficiency or other lawful cause. The governor thinks that he should have the right to name at least some of the members of the force.

ARRANGE FOR BIG SPELLING CONTEST

CONTROVERSY BETWEEN DEPARTMENTS OVER CONDUCT OF SPELLING BEE SETTLED.

JUNE SECOND DATE SELECTED

Copies of List Containing 5,000 Words That Will Be Used Mailed to Schools for Preparation.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Columbus, O.—Official announcement was made that the controversy between state departments over the conduct of the state spelling contest next year has been settled. The State Department of Public Instruction under Superintendent Frank W. Miller, wins over the State Board of Agriculture. The contest will be terminated with a big spelling bee on June 2, 1916.

The contest last summer was originated by President A. P. Sandles of the State Agricultural Commission, and was limited to rural boys and girls. The State Board of Agriculture, succeeding the duties of the Agricultural Commission, wanted to handle the contest which Mr. Miller announced he had taken over. The board resisted for a short time, but found that the contest was properly classified as an educational affair, and graciously surrendered, according to the announcement made by J. L. Clifton of Mr. Miller's department. Copies of a list containing 5,000 words that will be used were mailed to the schools for use in preparation. Mr. Miller believes that Ohio can produce the best spellers in the union.

U. S. DAUGHTERS OF 1812

Urged To Aid In Securing a Monument Over Harrison's Tomb.

Cincinnati, O.—The William Henry Harrison Memorial Association, of which I. H. M. Atkins is president and Rutherford H. Cox secretary, inaugurated a plan that is expected to start a nation-wide movement for a monument to Ohio's first president over his tomb at North Bend, this state.

The National Society of the United States Daughters of 1812, through its president, Mrs. Robert Hall Wiles, Chicago, wrote to the association indorsing the proposed congressional appropriation of $50,000 for the monument. It asked permission to place a bronze tablet on the new monument. President Atkins not only gave the permission but urged the society to take up the appropriation with congress men through the different branches of the organization throughout the United States.

FINAL TESTIMONY OFFERED

In Hocking Valley Coal Rate Case—Much Interest in Case.

Columbus, O.—Final testimony was offered in the Hocking Valley Railway coal rate case before the Utilities Commission. Proceedings in that case were started last summer by the United Mine Workers of America, but the fight has been taken over by the Sunday Creek Coal company.

The contention is that the present coal rates on the railway are far above the reasonable figure, and efforts are being made to get a rate reduction from the commission. During the next 30 days attorneys for the two contestants will prepare and file briefs and later oral arguments are to be heard, and it is expected about March 1 next year the case may be finally submitted to the commission for decision, but it is regarded as certain the questions involved will be taken to the courts for final decision.

CO-OPERATION AND CREDIT

Federal and State Legislation Desirable to Assist in Work.

Cleveland, O.—By authority of the state, there has just been issued a pamphlet which comprehensively deals with the subject of rural credit. Myron T. Herrick, former ambassador to France, O. K. Sams, of Hillsboro, and J. L. Taber, master of the state grange, were named on a "rural credits" commission, in conformity with a law passed by the last assembly.

A partial report on the subject has just been made by Messrs. Herrick and Sams. Mr. Taber was in the west when the partial report was completed, so could not sign it. The report just made by Gov. Willis is largely the result of investigations made by Col. Herrick, who has given the subject study for many years.

BANK PRACTICE IS ILLEGAL.

Columbus, O.—The practice of certain banks and buildings and loan associations in the large cities of state requiring borrowers to take out fire insurance in a company for which an officer or employe of the bank or association is agent, is severely condemned by State Insurance Superintendent Frank Taggart. He declares it is a violation of the law, and gives warning that he will institute proceedings and prosecute all cases called to his attention.

RURAL NIGHT SCHOOLS IN OHIO.

Columbus, O.—State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Frank W. Miller, has arranged for an experiment. Working with the county superintendents of Erie, Pickaway and Union counties he will have established night schools in these counties for farmers. If the plan is a success similar institutions will be established in every county of the state. The schools will be open to wives of farmers and the courses are to last three months. It is expected to be a success.

HAMILTON RANKS SECOND

Among Counties of State in Number of Automobiles Owned.

Cincinnati, O.—Showing an increase of nearly 50 per cent, the number of automobiles owned in Ohio in 1915 jumped to 131,310 from the previous year's total, 122,504, according to figures given out by H. W. Walker, state automobile registrar.

Ohio ranks as the second state in the country in the number of automobiles. New York alone surpasses it. Of the counties Cuyahoga ranks first, with 26,719, Hamilton second, with 11,995, Franklin third, with 9,287, Lucas fourth, with 8,022, and Montgomery fifth with 8,160. Registrar Walker states that the expense of licensing automobiles this year was $40,000 below last year's cost. The cost that year was 13 per cent of the receipts, he says, as against less than 9 per cent this year.

Columbus, O.—Fat profits of county sheriffs in boarding jail prisoners are threatened by a suit carried to the supreme court. It involves the question of whether sheriffs may force the payment of the legal minimum of 45 cents a day for the feeding of prisoners confined in jails, though the actual cost of their board may be no more than 15 cents a day.

Columbus, O.—General John C. Speaks, state fish and game commissioner, called attention to the fact that if hunters wish to hunt on New Year's day, they will have to take out licenses for 1916. HE CAUGHT A TARTAR

BOOK AGENT MADE MISTAKE IN TACKLING LAWYER.

Now He Knows How It Feels to Have to Listen to a Long, Prosy Harangue Delivered Much as Parrot Talks.

Having succeeded in gaining access to the lawyer's private office without disclosing the object of his call, the agent for the greatest history of the world ever compiled started in to gain the favorable attention of his prospective customer.

"'Histories make men wise,' Lord Bacon said," began the salesman, and—

"I see," interrupted the lawyer, "that you have called to invite my attention to the desirability of adding to my library a set of someone's superlatively marvelous history of the world, bound, no doubt, in cloth, in sheepskin and in full morocco.

"You have told me that Bacon says histories make men wise," he continued, "and no doubt you will tell me, also, that Bolingbroke said 'History is philosophy teaching by examples,' that Lamartine said 'History teaches everything, even the future,' that Cicero said 'Not to know what has been happening in former times is to continue always a child,' and that Carlyle said, 'History is a mighty drama enacted upon the theater of time, with suns for lamps and eternity for a background.'

"When you have finished quoting these more famous gentlemen you will no doubt begin then to give me some of your own reasons why I should no longer deprive myself of the liberal education to be gained by the mere association with such a set of books as you have done me the honor to introduce.

"There are several reasons why I do not care to subscribe," the lawyer proceeded, "but I scorn to reply to the eminent authorities you have quoted by simply giving the opinions and reasons of an obscure twentieth century New York lawyer. Instead, permit me to remind you that Napoleon said, 'What is history but a fable agreed upon?' Also that Goethe said, 'Sin writes history, goodness is silent.' Likewise that Voltaire wrote, 'History is little else than a picture of human crimes and misfortunes.' Furthermore that Lord Chesterfield said, 'History is only a confused heap of facts.' And lastly that Horace Walpole wrote, 'Anything but history, for history must be false.'

"I thank you for your kind attention," concluded the lawyer, "and I trust you will encounter no difficulty in finding your way out."

Ovens Are Capacious.

Since the Dyckman farmhouse at Broadway and Two Hundred and Forty-second street, New York, has been turned over to the city, visitors are flocking there to view this old relic of the old Dutch days and its immense Dutch ovens. In restoring the house to the form and detail of the time when the great-grandaddies of the Holland society boys used to visit Jan Dyckman, the architect had workmen with pickaxes break through the wall in the basement kitchen on either side of the fireplace, and the ovens, black with the bakings of centuries, were disclosed. People who live the gay kitchenette life have little idea of the size of a Dutch oven, and just no idea at all of how many five-cent loaves of bread can be crowded into one of them. About fifty loaves may be stowed away in the ovens. All of which shows that the good old Dutch did not have stingy ideas about the appearance of the baking.

Twisting a Message.

One of the methods of communicating from one officer to another in the trenches of the present great war is to give the message to one of the privates and tell him to "pass the word along" the line until it reaches its destination, viz., the officer at the other end. The following story will show how a serious message can be distorted on its journey from mouth to mouth.

Lieutenant A., in charge of one end of the British line, told the private in front to "pass the word along" to Lieutenant B.: "We are going to advance; can you send us re-enforcements?"

When Lieutenant B. received the message it was like this: "We are going to a dance; can you lend us three and fourpence?"—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Marines to Carry Canes.

Maj. Gen. Commandant George Barnett of the United States Marine corps has sanctioned the carrying of swagger sticks by marines when ashore in uniform or out of garrison. The idea is borrowed from Cousin "Tommy Atkins" of the British army, and it is thought that the carrying of the sticks will add distinction to the marine's already attractive uniform.

Quite Suitable.

"I have found out that our doctor is a poet. Rather at variance with his profession, isn't it?"

"Not at all. On the contrary quite consistent. Isn't poetry a drug in the market?"

Plain Duty.

"The customhouse officer who is visiting our Maud is hard to bring to the point, but he certainly is a jewel of a man."

"Then he ought to declare himself."

THE IRREGULAR

Whenever there is a war the "irregular" is always to be found somewhere on the firing line. The "irregular" is a free lance. He knows no division or corps commander. He may or may not obey the orders of a captain. He may operate all alone or he may associate himself with others of his kind.

The "irregular" has had his place in American history. Hundreds of men have at various times waged purely individual wars and these wars have at times embarrassed our government. During periods of peace between Indian tribes and the states there were always those who went forth to hunt Indians because they had scores of their own to settle. Many an Indian war was precipitated by the acts of some hunter who had avenged the death of some friend or loved one.

At various times energetic Americans have started out to make war on Mexico. It was not so many years ago that a man who had taken a vow to kill a hundred Mexicans was shot in a western mining camp. The Fenian raid was another of the activities of the irregulars. In the Civil war the "irregular" was a familiar figure.

It would be doing an injustice to the north and south to charge that the governments at Washington or Richmond were responsible for the acts of the "irregulars." The states were not responsible for the hunters who waged war upon the Indians in season and out. Neither was the United States responsible for the activities of the men who were at odds with the Mexicans.

The situation at the present time is somewhat similar as far as the German "irregular" is concerned. In a war such as the one now being waged it is inevitable that the "irregular" should have a place. There are Germans who cherish a purely individual hate for England just as there are Englishmen who hate Germany. These men who have made the present contest an individual matter naturally operate alone. They are free lances. Their plots are of their own concocting.

It is a rank absurdity to suppose that any civilized power would send men into a neutral country to destroy and burn. The German government has recently issued a statement in which it is pointed out that Germans who violate the laws of neutral nations are not only acting upon their own initiative but are actually embarrassing the German government. There is no reason why the good faith of the ministers at Berlin should be questioned as far as this statement is concerned. If we ourselves have been compelled to disavow the action of our "irregulars" is it not reasonable to suppose that other governments will be placed in the same unfortunate position.

FOR AND AGAINST

There are two paramount reasons why Republicans are urging the adoption of the preparedness program.

(a) They regard it as certain to cause profound if not fatal divisions in the Democratic party.

(b) Its acceptance by the Democrats will compel a resort to new sources of taxation, the opening up of the whole tariff question and therefore the possibility of a return to the protective system.

Democrats are opposing the preparedness program for two principal reasons.

(1) It runs counter to Democratic ideals and traditions. The Democratic party has always been opposed to militarism.

(2) They recognize as clearly as Republicans do that the acceptance of the program will necessitate the opening up of the tariff question and perhaps bring about a restoration of the very system of favoritism which the Democratic party has been fighting for half a century.

Many Democrats who might otherwise fall in with the preparedness program are holding aloof from it because they realize that through it there may come the complete undoing of much that was achieved by the party in the first half of the Wilson administration. Very few Democrats indeed face this consideration without a sense of outrage. They are loth to give up what it cost so much to win.

It is not unworthy of note that practically all the clamor in the public press for the adoption of this program comes from sources inimical to the Democratic party. The great New York papers are almost a unit in supporting the program, yet with one or two exceptions those papers are and have been hostile to the party in power. There is hardly one of them that would not rejoice in the overthrow of that party and the restoration of the party of privilege and monopoly to power. This is true generally of the great papers throughout the land. They have not been friendly with the Democratic party for almost a generation. Nine out of every ten have been virulently antagonistic in their attitude toward the party and toward nearly everything for which it has stood. Yet it is from these very sources that the tremendous impulse is coming which is expected to drive congress into the making of appropriations running into the hundreds of millions beyond anything which even extravagance and profligacy have hitherto dared to dream.

It is said that the president is preparing to carry this program to the country with an appeal for its support. He has found that there is little enthusiasm for it in congress especially among Democrats. It was coldly received when it was presented to that body in his annual message. Will it be better received by the country?

Mentor

Dec. 27th, 1915.

Soon we shall be writing nineteen hundred and sixteen! As the little boy just beginning to study Latin used to say "How Tempus does Fugit!" The Mentor letter will surely be unusually stupid this morning, for most all our people are either off on visits, or too tired to know anything! If only it would turn out as it used to—when mother declared there wasn't a thing in the house for dinner, we always knew there would be an extra good spread.

Dr. Clark is better, we are glad to learn, and able to sit up an hour or so. Although a stranger to most of the Mentor folks a few years ago, since coming here he and his wife made so many friends, that we hear only the kindest words ever spoken of them. Since Mrs. Clark died a short time ago, the doctor's health has been very uncertain, and great anxiety has been expressed by their neighbors and friends, lest he too might slip away.

A lecture is to be delivered tonight in the Village Hall by Col. French illustrated by stereopticon views taken abroad by himself, and said to be very good. The lecture is given by the invitation of Miss Sarah Richmond's class in the Methodist Sunday school.

Thompson Worley is at home for the winter vacation, from a Military school in Maryland, where he has been sent by his uncle for two years now, and likes it very much. Thompson's uncle, with whom he and his mother make their home, is Mr. Thompson Johnson (a Cleveland lawyer who bought the fine residence of Mr. T. G. Hart some years ago, and came down here for a home.)

Mr. and Mrs. Hart Mynderse are still away in the city, having a vacation themselves.

Dr. Blish Sawyer of Cleveland was down here for Christmas dinner with Mrs. Blish on Saturday, and is the guest of his brothers, the Messrs. Ed and Will Sawyer, for a few days now.

Christmas day began with bare brown ground, but was white with snow long before the day ended, thereby relieving the anxiety of those who believe in old sayings, signs, etc. There were more family gatherings all through the township than usual, and doubtless the Christmas here has been more marked, and more appreciated, because of the warring nations all over the world. So far as we have heard any opinion expressed, no one is in sympathy with the cry of "preparedness" around here. The fellows who are raising that cry, either have something to sell or are natural murderers like Roosevelt, who never are happy unless killing something!

Christmas exercises at the Methodist meeting-house passed off nicely though we heard several declare there was the smallest audience ever seen inside the church building at any such "doings" the cause being that so many have taken advantage of the mild weather to let fires go out, and they go off on visits that usually are tabooed at this time of year.

The mercury stood at near forty this morning about ten o'clock, which is unusual for Christmas week. The snow has all melted off again, the sun shines out quite decently, and if only people would be as careful about taking cold such weather as they are in a winter when the mercury is way below zero—there would be less sickness.

James R. Garfield and family are down at "Holly Croft" for vacation as usual with their four sons at home from college and school, but the old "pesky" telephone (as usual) refuses to work and the men are digging away (as usual again) to try and find out what is the matter NOW, and so none of their friends are able to wish them "Many happy returns" etc.

Kitty Gray, governess woman, finds in a strange place, with a strange man, who is accused of murder, and who claims that he is innocent. CHAPTER LXXVI.

The Treasure.

Deep within the number of interests which before now had engrossed the mind of such a terror can present were heading now to the light of the Gordonville, where a bitter Christmas was coming.

"It is here!" said Count Prodotch, pointing at the little compass which he had brought with him. "The north end has three in it—under which strike yonder adjacent to the tree stump—the south end is in the tree itself."

"What shall we do?" gasped Miss Gray. "I dare not."

"Nonsense, my dear Fear!—why should we fear? Twelve friend of my—I mean friend of mine and mine—cannot harm us. Are we not waiting an hour—for us?"

Kitty Gray, so distressed, was feeling a woman's terror at these great scenes which seemed to her cannot to be her issues. She was waiting for Jim Hall, who had promised to come to her at this place, and who will give all these Christian burials—shall we say?

"Whatever you wish shall be done—I care not!" said Kitty at last. "Let all these poor victims come to their rest and let them be in peace. I shall not go into causing more!"

"Not come," he said and so laid a hand on the genuine guard to the tree. "Not come! Why, I have prepared—repared—prepared! Lands have shipped me it. He found the ancient—and I know to more than half—the great treasure, at length, gents as he would say, and I have found it! Here is the key of the chamber wherein beneath the tree—there, there shoved dirt—is the coin that is the coin of the coin! Here—this wonted to go—come! Come! Come! Take the place—the treasure—and we shall—I mean—I shall be rich—I shall be rich! Come! Come! Come! Take this is the old—where—where was it—where?"

"Let me his strength failed to answer the question. He fixed on an old tree, which was standing near the river and yet sufficiently to be dead that across the lot lighted shoulder, and in full flood with a coal upon the rocky floor. At the edge of this stream made quite shorter, directly opposite the edge of another place, there lay a little mound.

"It now beneath!" exclaimed Count Prodotch. "See—look what is beneath!"

Kitty, overcoming her horror, bent down and looked into the hole. "What is it, how? said she. "Its look too much does so?"

"Gold," said her companion. "Let us open this coarse more widely. Here, I have brought a shovel—I have had and deserves which—I ought to be rich!"

Carefully he pushed in and under the edge of the big, crumbling plate after plate of that which had been the covering of this treasure place. Below this, there was a cavity filled with rotten wood, and in this, as he pushed, he felt a hard, cold, right-angled substance. "What is here?" said Count Prodotch. "Are we lulled even at the last?"

Kitty Gray saw the rays of the light here and there about her in the enormous interior. By throes her eyes rested—indeed were drawn, for shaped, to the shadows, which, as the sun sent forward in the river chain. A dull, cold, unpleasant sense flew over her soul.

"Look," said she and pointed. There, outlined in a warm haze in the vista was a hut—it was half hidden behind a tree, but it was there.

"Look," said Count Prodotch and held it up before her. "Cursing woman was the one who had this treasure, and yet he left it in place for us—for you and for me."

He stamped and rubbed the box in the back of the central chest of chests which was before him. "Some one has had long look the lid."

There were marked lines what would have made glad the heart of any Bonaparte. Gold, continuous from the great.

It was the best treasure of the time! They stood, awed, motionless and behind them at what they saw.

"Let us open the treasury quick—as we do—never—for long! Let us be amused & comfortable for many months yet, for this look comfort for the touch—ever to the clothing—to the—to the—to the

The time has come when these garments must go. We are resolved to carry absolutely nothing from the present stock of ready-to-wear into the coming Spring season. The fact that these garments are offered at a fraction of their actual value detracts not at all from their quality. Each one fully measures up to the "Grant Quality" standard, else it would never have found its way into our cabinets.

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN FOR THE "YELLOW TICKET."

It will point out many opportunities to save actual money on read-to-wear.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Catarrh being greatly influenced by constitutional conditions requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts thru the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in the curative powers of Hall's Catarrh Cure that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

DANGER SIGNAL

If the fire bell should ring would you run and stop it or go and help to put out the fire? It is much the same way with a cough. A cough is a danger signal as much as a fire bell. You should no more try to suppress it than to stop a fire bell when it is ringing, but should cure the disease that causes the coughing. This can nearly always be done by taking Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Many have used it with the most beneficial results. It is especially valuable for the persistent cough that so often follows a bad cold or an attack of the grip. Mrs. Thomas Beeching, Andrews, Ind., writes: "During the winter my husband takes cold easily and coughs and coughs. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best medicine for breaking up these attacks and you cannot get him to take any other." Obtainable everywhere.
